WHITE LAKE, N.Y. (UPI) — More than 300,000 persons wandered about in a sea of mud, sickness and drugs Saturday at the hippie-style Woodstock Music and Art Fair.

Staggered officials asked Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller to declare the festival site a disaster area.

Another 750,000 or more, most all of them young, were reported en route, ignoring pleas by local and state authorities to go home, walking and riding on past stalled cars on traffic-clogged highways.

A SPOKESMAN for Rockefeller, vacationing in Maine, said the governor had made no decision, although complaints were pouring in from residents around the 600-acre dairy farm, site of the festival in this Catskill Mountain area north of New York City.

Police reported up to 75 arrests, mostly on drug charges, but no large disorders.

By Saturday night the general situation was improving a little. The mud was drying, although the forecast was for scattered showers, and three garbage trucks had been imported to help clean up the litter.

ONE YOUTH, as yet unidentified, was killed early Saturday, when a tractor rolled over him as he slept inside a sleeping bag in a muddy field. Another, apparently on drugs, fell from a sound tower on the newly-erected stage and broke his back.

A four-hour early morning downpour turned the already littered fields into a floating garbage heap. Food was getting scarce.

Frank Jennings a Middle-town, N.Y., state trooper who flew over the festival site, was frankly awed. "I never saw anything like it in my life," he said. "It was havoc."

Dr. William Abruzzi, head of medical services for the three-day festival, said he had treated more than 1,000 persons at the makeshift 20-bed hospital since the festival began late Friday.

HE SAID many were suffering from adverse hallucinogenic drug reaction. He also asked for volunteer physicians to come to White Lake and help.

John Morris, in charge of operations at the festival, said a batch of LSD was being passed around. Marijuana was rampant.

Others were suffering from intestinal troubles. Three emergency tracheotomies were performed in the hospital.

The Rev. Donald Gai-oung, a fair official, said it was impossible to handle the increasing sanitation and health problems.

The Saturday night performance, 12 hours worth, billed The Who, Jefferson Airplane and Janis Joplin. Sunday, the program included The Band, Jimi Hendrix and Johnny Winter.

Some sold water for 10 cents a glass, when the pump went bad temporarily. Beer went for 75 cents a can or bottle, and soft drinks 50 cents.

"I don't know, man," said one far out music lover. "This thing is just one big bad trip."

THE FIRST of the physicians, three from New York, arrived in midafternoon by charter plane and were flown immediately by helicopter to the festival site. By night there were 12 doctors in the area. Six more arrived after dark.

L.B. Man Hailed as Hero of Burning Ship

By BILL HOMER
Staff Writer

A 35 year-old Long Beach man was identified Saturday as the hero who braved smoke and flames to rescue at least four persons from a fuel-fed inferno aboard the ammunition ship Bucyrus Victory in San Pedro.

Robert B. Mitchell, of 2174 Vuelta Grande Ave., managed to flee from the ship's burning engine room in which he and 12 other men had been trapped, but returned three times to aid his co-workers, and, in a fourth incident, led an injured fireman to safety.

MITCHELL had to crawl through a darkened shaftway on his third rescue mission, and later was treated for smoke inhalation suffered during the fire at Berth 92 Friday night.

Word of Mitchell's heroism was related to 'The Independent Press-Telegram' by Consolidated Marine, Inc.'s port engineer Ivan Kraft.

An employee of General Welding and Shipbuilding Co., of San Pedro, Mitchell and eight co-workers were trapped inside the federally-owned freighter's engine room along with five U.S. Public Health Service employees, firemen said.

Mitchell managed to get out of the engine room, and, upon reaching safety learned some of the men were still trapped below decks, Kraft said.

The ship-firm worker scurried down the vessel's ladders twice to lead men to safety, but was blocked by smoke and flames on his third try, Kraft reported. Mitchell had to crawl along a shaftway from the freighter's stern to make good his third engine room rescue, and later was credited with leading Los Angeles city fireman Richard G. Young off the vessel. Young had suffered an eye injury.

Fire department spokesmen placed damage to the vessel at as much as $250,000 Saturday, and said cause of the blaze is still under investigation.

KRAFT discounted reports indicating the fire started when sparks from a welding torch splattered on fuel from a leaking line which was believed to have been repaired.

He said a complete survey will be conducted of the Bucyrus Victory Monday and that a decision on whether to refit the ship will be made after results of the check have been received.

The freighter, operated for the federal government by the American President Lines, was to have embarked for Cam Ranh Bay, South Vietnam, Wednesday.

Marine Exchange spokesman said the vessel's cargo was to have included a shipment of bombs — possibly napalm bombs, according to some reports.

Hurricane's Fury Thrashes Toward Florida Panhandle

Camille's Winds Put at 160mph

MIAMI (AP) — Hurricane Camille lurched landward after a brief pause Saturday night during which it whipped up 160-mile an hour winds and developed into the most intense storm since a 1935 Labor Day hurricane heaped catastrophe on the Florida Keys.

"Camille now is very similar to the 1935 storm," said Dr. Robert H. Simpson, chief of the National Hurricane Center. "She has a very large fury concentrated in an exceedingly small area."

As the huge storm swung into motion, hurricane watchers warned all persons in the target area of the possibility of monster tides being pushed ahead of Camille.

Residents and travelers were told to move from low and exposed places where the up to 15-foot tides could cut off escape routes. The Hurricane Center measured Camille's forward push at 12 m.p.h.

The fierce storm was located 325 miles south of Pensacola, Fla., moving north northwest. The Hurricane Center located the storm's eye at Latitude 25.8 north and Longitude 87.4 west.

THE 1935 STORM struck the Keys with winds estimated in excess of 200 miles an hour, drowned 400 persons in a 15 to 20-foot wave, and wrecked the famed "Railroad That Goes to Sea" from the Florida mainland to Key West.

Forecasters made no change in the area along which hurricane warning flags flew from Fort Walton Beach to St. Marks, but said Camille had shifted slightly to westward.

"Nothing in the large picture greatly affects the target area at the present time," Simpson said.

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — President and Mrs. Nixon are inviting 250 guests, including Hollywood stars and embattled California educator S. I. Hayakawa, to a black tie state dinner for visiting South Korean President Chung Hee Park in San Francisco next Thursday night.

The dinner, their second in two weeks away from the Washington White House, is bigger than the usual state dinners back home. They run to about 100 guests when the Nixons are in Washington.

The entertainment, announced Saturday by the Western White House, will be a Los Angeles area father-sons team of classical guitarists, "The Romeros." They are Celerio Romero and sons, Pepe, Celin and Angel.

The U.S. Marine Band orchestra and the Army's Strolling Strings will perform, too, as they did for a gala dinner for 1440 guests in honor of the Apollo 11 astronauts in Los Angeles last Wednesday night.

Announcement of the San Francisco dinner came shortly before the President and Julie and David Eisenhower flew by helicopter to the Pauma Valley Country Club, about 20 miles south of here for a round of golf.

The Park dinner will be in the Mural Room of the St. Francis Hotel, site of two-day meetings between Nixon and Park.

Park will be accorded all the ceremonial fanfare that visiting heads of state usually get back in Washington. But details have yet

5,000 Reds Mass Near Viet Border; New Blows Awaited

SAIGON (AP) — Despite a heavy mauling, about 5,000 enemy troops in the jungles near the Cambodian border north of Saigon are believed preparing for new attacks, U.S. officers said Saturday.

To try to keep the enemy off balance, 10 missions totaling up to 50 U.S. B-52 Stratofortresses dropped 750 tons of bombs on suspected enemy positions in that region in the past 24 hours, the U.S. Command reported.

It brought to 45 the number of B-52 missions in the border area since the enemy opened a fall campaign early Tuesday with a score of ground assaults and the shelling of 150 allied bases and towns across South Vietnam.

"We expect another strike any time in the near future," said a U.S. officer, "more action of a rather heavy nature. They made a heavy strike Tuesday and followed it up with nothing really significant."

The enemy increased the tempo of shelling, however, hitting 45 allied bases and towns with rockets and mortar shells overnight. The average has been below 40 since the high point Tuesday.

Generally, the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong slackened their activities along the Cambodian border, where fighting has been sharp on most days since Tuesday. But allied forces presumably were keeping the pressure on the enemy.

U.S. SOURCES with access to field reports said allied troops had killed about 3,000 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong soldiers throughout South Vietnam since Tuesday. In that period they estimate at least 200 Americans have been killed and probably 800-1,000 wounded. South Vietnamese losses

N. Ireland Braces for More Riots

BEELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Britain mobilized more troops for Ulster Saturday night, as the deeply troubled northern province braced for more street fighting, and authorities threatened riot leaders with indefinite internment.

Two thin lines of British soldiers, 600 in Belfast and 350 in Londonderry, kept an uneasy peace in cities torn with the ravages of religious factionalism.

New outbreaks of Protestant-Catholic rioting, arson, sniping and looting were feared.

The British units in Northern Ireland were not considered adequate to cope with the situation. One hundred especially picked men of the 24th Infantry Brigade were mobilized in Britain to be flown to Ireland over the weekend. Ulster has domestic autonomy, but foreign affairs and military matters are handled by London.

BRITISH Prime Minister Harold Wilson planned to cut short his vacation and fly to London for talks with Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark of Northern Ireland.

Wilson will hold an emergency Cabinet meeting before then. Fighting to save its life, Chichester-Clark's government has invoked emergency powers to intern riot leaders, indefinitely if need be.

The last time Ulster adopted these tactics was during a terror campaign by the outlawed Irish Republican Army — from 1956-61.

At least 25 persons suspected of being supporters of the IRA were being detained by Ulster police for questioning under the Special Powers Act.

The death toll in five days of trouble in Ulster rose to eight with the death of a 25-year-old Belfast dock worker wounded by gunfire.

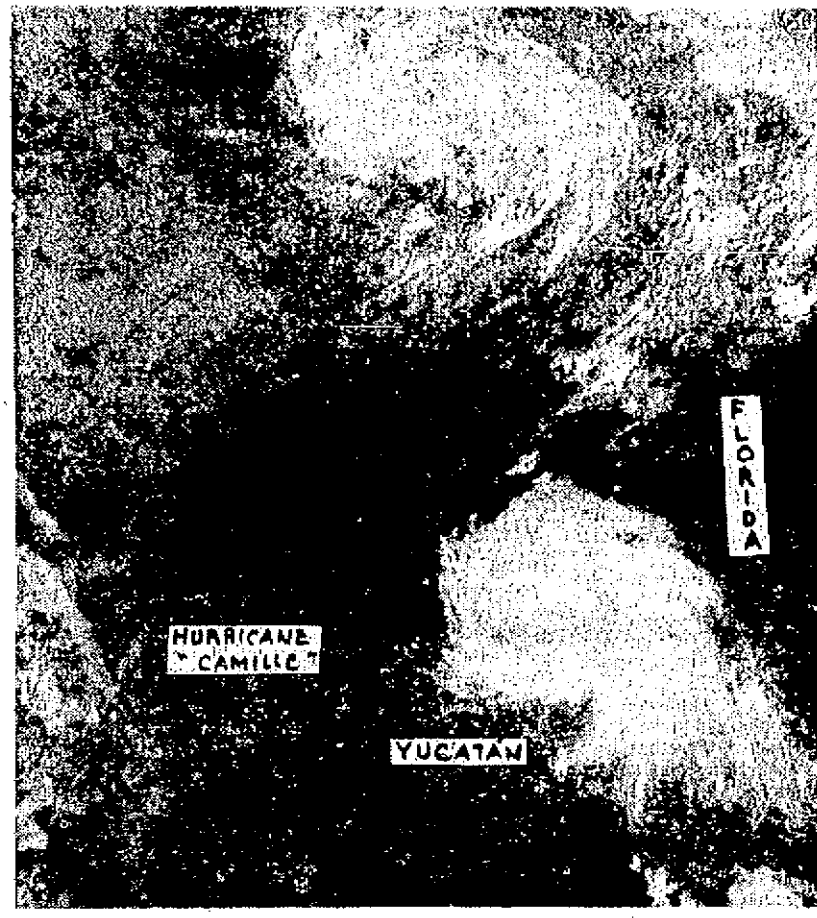

More than 500 persons are known to have been injured, 310 in Belfast alone.

The week has been Ireland's worst since the civil war of 1920-1922.

Although the British troops, armed with sub-machine guns and automatic rifles, curbed the violence when they moved into Belfast Friday night, their presence did little to lessen inflamed passions.

THROUGHOUT the night there was shooting, arson and looting, — although on a reduced scale. Isolated snipers still were operating as housewives set out for their Saturday shopping.

Q. How can I get the city to make Fifth Street between Nebraska and Walnut avenues a one-way street? The street is narrow, and when cars park on both sides, it's almost impossible for two cars to pass one another. Mrs. V.R.C., Long Beach.

A. When major changes are to be made on residential streets — such as changing a two-way street to one-way — persons living on the street must petition for the change. John Gillespie of the Long Beach Traffic Engineer's office said a simple majority of the street's residents is presented with a majority petition, we request that the City Council make the change," he said. Blaiberg's Heart Gradually Being Rejected by Body

(Combined News Services)

Philip Blaiberg's transplanted heart is being gradually rejected by his body and doctors reported Saturday in Cape Town, South Africa, the world's longest surviving transplant patient is "gravely ill."

Bulletins issued by Groote Schuur Hospital, however, said his condition was slightly improved.

Members of the hospital's cardiac team said progressive tissue degeneration has set in, a result of massive doses of cortisone administered to suppress his body's natural tendency to reject the transplanted heart.

Blaiberg, 60, had been ill for some weeks. He suffered a serious relapse last Monday. Doctors at first did not want to risk moving him from his home, but were forced to take him to Groote Schuur Thursday after his kidneys stopped functioning, hospital sources said.

It was the third time the 60-year-old man had been readmitted since Dr. Christian Barnard implanted a new heart in his body Jan. 2, 1968.

Doctors said the rejection process, which cannot be suppressed entirely by immuno-suppressant drugs, affected his heart, now pumping at only a third of its normal pressure. The blood vessels of the heart were reported congested and other organs have also been affected. Hospital sources said he can hardly use his arms and legs.

Mrs. Lynda B. Johnson and her daughter, Lynda, will remain at a French Riviera villa being rented for the summer by an American friend, Mrs. Mary Lasker, through next Saturday, a spokesman for Mrs. Lasker said Saturday.

Previous occupants of the mansion, known as La Villa Fiorentina, include Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor, who rented the property while making a film on the Riviera. It is located on the seafloor at Cape Ferrat and has a private beach.

The former first lady and Lynda, now Mrs. Charles Robb, spent a gala evening at the international sporting club in Monte Carlo Friday night. They were accompanied by Mrs. Lasker and applauded warmly for the star of the show, British singer Shirley Bassey.

Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Robb began their vacation on the Riviera Thursday.

"I cannot function there as well as I can in the Bahamas," he said. "This is basically a black nation."

VOTE TUESDAY

Virginia Democrats will choose between William C. Battle, and State Sen. Henry E. Howell Jr. for governor Tuesday in the first statewide runoff primary election.

A turnout of 400,000 or more is anticipated for the primary in which Battle, carrying the backing of virtually the entire Democratic leadership and narrow winner in the first primary in July, rules a slight favorite.

It's the bitterest party fight since Battle's father, former Gov. John S. Battle, came through a comparatively close winner in a primary field of four 20 years ago. It was that election that prompted enactment of the runoff primary legislation if no candidate received a majority on the first try.

The Democrats also will choose a candidate for attorney general. The candidates are Andrew P. Miller, son of Francis Pickens Miller who gave the senior Battle the toughest challenge in 1949, and Guy O. Farley Jr., a member of the Virginia House from Fairfax County. Miller, who led a field of four in the first primary, is favored.

But the second race is dwarfed by the main event in which Howell — like Battle, 48, and a University of Virginia law graduate — apparently had caught on widely with his neo-Populist stance on behalf of the consumer pegged to his slogan of "Let's keep the big boys honest."

Beefing up South Korea's defense against Communism is expected to be a main topic at the San Francisco meeting between Nixon and Park.

A LOOSELY-KNIT coalition of youth groups has said it intends to picket Nixon's visit to San Francisco and demand "that all GIs be brought home from both Vietnam and Korea."

The United States maintains two divisions of troops and some Air Force men in Korea to help defend the northern border along the 38th parallel.

Roughly the same number of South Korean ground troops are in South Vietnam helping the American military effort there.

The President is preparing to reveal on Monday his choice of a new associate supreme court justice to replace Abe Fortas who resigned under a barrage of criticism over accepting outside pay.

Nixon spent most of Saturday morning studying documents in his San Clemente library study overlooking the Pacific Ocean.

In the afternoon, Nixon beat a massive traffic jam on the highway near his villa by helicoptering to the Pauma Country Club, 40 miles away in San Diego County, where he was joined on the golf links by the Rev. Billy Graham. Nixon was also accompanied by his daughter and son-in-law, Julie and David Eisenhower, and his close friend, Charles G. (Bebe) Rebozo.

It was Nixon's second day in a row on the links. He spent four hours Friday golfing at Camp Pendleton, the giant Marine base adjacent to his home here.

BRITISH SOLDIERS PREPARED IN BELFAST
Bayonets Fixed to Prevent Further Religious Warfare

—AP Wirephoto

Marauding gangs of Protestant militants burned and looted Catholic public houses in areas where there were no British troops. The predominantly Catholic area of Belfast was sealed tight by British troops along Falls Road and Divis Street and by barricades erected by its 15,000 residents, most of them Catholic.

Only tradesmen were allowed in. A few residents left with small children.

The menfolk behind the barricades include Republicans to whom the sight of a British uniform normally is anathema. But many were prepared to accept the soldiers as long as they seemed a guarantee against attack.

In Londonderry, 22-year-old Bernadette Devlin, member of the British Parliament and a leader in the civil rights movement, spoke with British officers. She said the residents of Bogside, the predominantly Catholic area there, were glad to see the troops, but she reminded the officers: "Bogside is ours."

She extracted from them the right for Bogside to police their own area. The military promised that neither British troops nor Ulster Police would enter Bogside.

DURING the day, Chichester-Clark's Cabinet heard reports from the police and military. Official spokesmen declined to say whether the military peacekeeping operation would be extended.

The number of British troops in Ulster has been estimated at from 4,000 to 8,000. There were troops in camps not far from Belfast.

A decision to call in more men probably would require a joint decision by the Ulster police, the British military and police administrators sent here by London.

It is the political consequences of the military intervention which Wilson and Chichester-Clark will discuss Monday.

In Dublin, meanwhile, the Republic of Ireland continued pressure for a say in the affairs of the six northern counties of Ulster. Foreign Minister Patrick Hillery flew to New York to ask the United Nations to intervene.

A big crowd demonstrated for the second day in front of the British Embassy in Dublin and 5 of a group of 200 police guarding the building were hurt. The crowd went there after they tried to get guns from an army barracks.

Home on the Road

Q. Is it okay for a camper or trailer driver to pull off the road and sleep for the night or prepare a meal? Can families in campers do this, or must they find a motel room in a city or use a rest area? J.G., Norwalk.

A. It is not legal to stop along the highway in open countryside unless a parking or rest area is clearly designated, according to a spokesman for the California Highway Patrol. "Our officers often find families bedding down for the night along major highways, and have to tell them to move to the nearest rest area," he said. The state Department of Parks and Recreation, 217 W. First St., Los Angeles, has maps of rest areas in the state and various other camping guides. James Starr, Long Beach city prosecutor, said the state law prohibiting roadside sleeping and camping applies within the city limits as well.

Misplaced Mail

Q. If you can help me, I'll never order anything through the mail again. My repeated letters to the Carod Co., in Youngstown, Ohio, have not helped me get the monogrammed pens I ordered from them. Can you please help? R.G., Bellflower.

A. Your order was found misplaced among the Colorado mail orders, said Nathaniel Pierce, customer service director for Carod Co. Pierce said he is sorry your letters brought no response. "We spend most of our time getting orders out, and very little time answering mail," he said. He promised to send your pens right away.

Mighty Wills

Q. Is there a fan club for baseball player Maury Wills? If so how can I join? R.B.H., Long Beach.

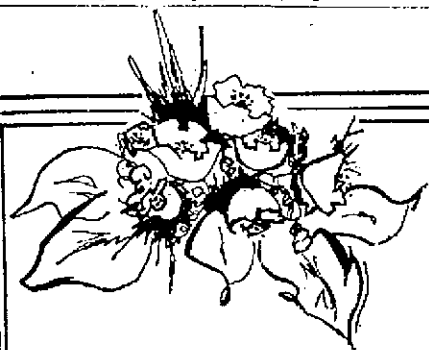

A. ACTION LINE struck out. We could not find any Maury Wills fan club, but a public relations spokesman for the Los Angeles Dodgers suggests that you write to Wills, who may be aware of some private club. Send your letter in care of Dodger Stadium, 1000 Elysian Park, Los Angeles, 90012. The banjo-playing, base-stealing shortstop returned to the Dodgers this season after playing for the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Montreal Expos. Wills was with the Dodgers from the beginning of his major league career in 1959 until 1966. In 1962, he set the all-time record for stolen bases in one season with 104. Wills, 36, has played the banjo in various night clubs during off-season. He lives with his wife and family in Washington.

THE AGONY OF IRELAND

By DONAL P. O'HIGGINS

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — The agony of Northern Ireland is one chapter of western civilization's history without a happy ending.

Catholic Spain now allows Protestants to worship in public. Martin Luther's Germany now celebrates both Roman Catholic and Protestant holidays. In John Calvin's Geneva and in the Vatican, today's passport is brotherhood.

But still unhealed is the wound in Northern Ireland of Protestants versus Catholics.

In much of the rest of western civilization hate is expressed in such well-known sayings as "Yankee Go Home," "Russians Get Out" and "White Is Ugly." These are newcomers.

The older hate lives in the six counties of Northern Ireland. Under the rolling green hills of Belfast's Victorian Protestant Sandy Row area are scrawled the old reliable of bigotry: "No Popery Here" and "To Hell With the Pope of Rome."

In narrow streets off Belfast's red brick tenement Falls Road Catholic sector are the war cries of the other ghetto: "Curse the Queen" and "Death to Protestant Police Informers."

FOR 700 YEARS the Irish endured life as a colonial people on their emerald isle. It was the British who ruled.

Oliver Cromwell believed in being a missionary of the sword. He killed thousands of Irish Catholics. The potato famine of the 1840s and 1850s killed tens of thousands more or sent them fleeing to America.

The British made the Irish the laborers of the backdoor colony. For 300 years British Protestants had been moved into Northern Ireland. By the time Southern Ireland rose in revolt and finally won independence in 1922, Northern Ireland had become heavily Protestant. But not unified.

Today, about two thirds of Northern Ireland's 1.5 million citizens are Protestant, the Orangemen who are the masters of the land.

WHEN SOUTHERN Ireland went its way, these Northern Irish Protestants won a vow from London that Britain would never force them into Catholic Ireland. It was a further burden for the Catholics of Northern Ireland to bear.

Although the Northern Irish Protestants had been there for centuries — producing such British leaders as Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery — the Catholics of Northern Ireland felt put upon. According to some members of the British Parliament, the Catholics were right.

To keep local government control in pockets of high Catholic density, the Protestant-dominated Northern Irish government used gerrymandering and suppressive voting techniques to keep the Catholics down. The pattern extended to public housing and other welfare systems, the Catholics said. Terence O'Neill, Northern Ireland's Protestant prime minister until recently, agreed and tried to usher in reform.

IT WAS TOO MUCH for the Rev. Ian Paisley, the militant Protestant leader who went to jail and to Geneva to protest against Catholics at home and the Pope abroad.

It was too little for Bernadette Devlin, the 21-year-old college girl elected to the British Parliament this year by the pro-Catholic surge.

Two months ago O'Neill was forced out of office. He and Jack Lynch, the premier of the Irish Republic, had cautiously been having Dublin and Belfast talk to one another again. Now that was gone.

Maj. James Chichester-Clark whose heart lay with O'Neill's reform but whose head dictated a much more cautious route to civil rights, was elected prime minister. It is a strange post.

For Northern Ireland can do what the other parts of the United Kingdom under Queen Elizabeth cannot do. It governs its home affairs as it sees fit. Welsh and Scottish nationalists have been agitating for more of the same. But they have not got it.

London tended to let Northern Ireland alone, handling only major tax, foreign and defense affairs.

NORTHERN IRELAND is not a bountiful land. Harvests make few farmers rich, the airplane and ship factories are chronically unbusy.

The religious bitterness, which begins when Northern Irish are children and play games in the streets using hate slogans, compounds the poverty and the poverty in turn compounds the hatreds. The vote becomes a weapon.

Voting for Northern Ireland's members in the British and Northern Irish Parliaments is fair and equal. But in local elections, where Belfast sets the rules, only such landed persons as homeowners have been allowed to vote. And a company employing at least 10 persons was given six votes. The Catholic worker, renting his home, had no vote.

The Catholics also complain about job discrimination. They argue that when a Catholic and a "Prod" both applied for a single job, chances are it would go to the Protestant.

There are no recent, reliable figures on the difference in Catholic and Protestant income. Both religions have roots in the tenements of the country. But Protestants do appear to the observer to be the man in the board room chair, the man who hands out the paychecks, the official who runs the government office. This may not be the exact fact. But the important fact is that Catholics believe it to be so.

A JEW, the late Robert Briscoe, could be elected lord mayor of Dublin. But in Belfast, Catholic and Protestant leaders did not share pews at symbolic services.

The Catholics had their soccer team, the Protestants theirs.

Dr. John Moorman, England's Bishop of Ripon, led a successful British Protestant clergy trip to Rome to talk fellowship in the Vatican. But Belfast's Protestants marched in the streets and kept the eccumenical spirit from their door.

The Catholics had wearied of help from Southern Ireland, despite the fact that the IRA — the Irish Republican Army even outlawed in the south — blew up an occasional police sentry box in the north. A homegrown Catholic civil rights movement developed. And by last October the forces of Catholic Civil Rights Workers, the counteraction by Protestants fearful of the south, and the young gangs who roam the darker alleys of both communities, produced street fighting.

MANY AMERICANS expressed surprise when faced with their civil rights deluge. Not the Northern Irish. "It's the way it always has been for as long as I can remember," said a 60-year-old Catholic baker, Frank McDuff. "Sometimes you know when trouble is coming — you can tell by the calendar — sometimes it just blows up suddenly. But trouble is always here."

Does McDuff hate the Protestants across the street? "I'm too old for hate. But you can't let them walk over you, either," he said.

Over there, beyond the invisible line, lives Protestant clerk Terence Pringle, 31. He said, "I've lived here for the past 10 years. In that time we have made efforts to live in peace — but just when we think we're getting somewhere, things explode and we're back where we started."

Goodwill had moved in small doses. Some 24 Catholic and 17 Protestant families had moved into each other's neighborhoods to prove all men are brothers. Critics called them the "square pegs." When the rocks and Molotov cocktails came flying the square pegs popped out of their round roles and went running back.

For their once polite neighbors had begun banging on the front door and saying from faces livid with hate such things as, "Get out or we'll burn you out."

Belfast's city government had built a four-story apartment development in the middle of a Protestant neighborhood and named it Unity Walk in hopes for better days.

Now Catholic children mount guard with bricks and pipes at the barbed wire barricades around Unity Walk.

THE AGONY OF IRELAND

By DONAL P. O'HIGGINS
BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — The agony of Northern Ireland is one chapter of western civilization's history without a happy ending.

Catholic Spain now allows Protestants to worship in public. Martin Luther's Germany now celebrates both Roman Catholic and Protestant holidays. In John Calvin's Geneva and in the Vatican, today's password is brotherhood.

But still unhealed is the wound in Northern Ireland of Protestants versus Catholics.

In much of the rest of western civilization hate is expressed in such wall slogans as "Yankee Go Home," "Russians Get Out" and "White Is Ugly." These are newcomers.

The older hate lives in the six counties of Northern Ireland. Under the rotting gables of Belfast's Victorian Protestant Sandy Row area are scrawled the old, reliable of bigotry: "No Popery Here" and "To Hell With the Pope of Rome."

In narrow streets off Belfast's red brick tenement Falls Road Catholic sector are the war cries of the other ghetto: "Curse the Queen" and "Death to Protestant Police Informers."

FOR 700 YEARS the Irish endured life as a colonial people on their emerald isle. It was the British who ruled.

Oliver Cromwell believed in being a missionary of the sword. He killed thousands of Irish Catholics. The potato famine of the 1840s and 1850s killed tens of thousands more or sent them fleeing to America.

The British made the Irish the laborers of the backdoor colony. For 300 years British Protestants had been moved into Northern Ireland. By the time Southern Ireland rose in revolt and finally won independence in 1922, Northern Ireland had become heavily Protestant. But not unified.

Today, about two thirds of Northern Ireland's 1.5 million citizens are Protestant. The Orangemen who are the masters of the land.

WHEN SOUTHERN Ireland went its way, these Northern Irish Protestants won a vow from London that Britain would never force them into Catholic Ireland. It was a further burden for the Catholics of Northern Ireland to bear.

Although the Northern Irish Protestants had been there for centuries — producing such British leaders as Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery — the Catholics of Northern Ireland felt put upon. According to some members of the British Parliament, the Catholics were right.

To keep local government control in pockets of high Catholic density, the Protestant-dominated Northern Irish government used gerrymandering and suppressive voting techniques to keep the Catholics down. The pattern extended to public housing and other welfare systems, the Catholics said. Terence O'Neill, Northern Ireland's Protestant prime minister until recently, agreed and tried to usher in reform.

IT WAS TOO MUCH for the Rev. Ian Paisley, the militant Protestant leader who went to jail and to Geneva to protest against Catholics at home and the Pope abroad.

It was too little for Bernadette Devlin, the 21-year-old college girl elected to the British Parliament this year by the pro-Catholic surge.

Two months ago O'Neill was forced out of office. He and Jack Lynch, the premier of the Irish Republic, had cautiously been having Dublin and Belfast talk to one another again. Now that was gone.

Maj. James Chichester-Clark whose heart lay with O'Neill's reform but whose head dictated a much more cautious route to civil rights, was elected prime minister. It is a strange post.

For Northern Ireland can do what the other parts of the United Kingdom under Queen Elizabeth cannot do. It governs its home affairs as it sees fit. Welsh and Scottish nationalists have been agitating for more of the same. But they have not got it.

London tended to let Northern Ireland alone, handling only major tax, foreign and defense affairs.

300,000 Jam Rock Festival; Disaster Declaration Asked

Academy at West Point were brought in to transport patients from the field hospital to a hospital in nearby Liberty, N.Y.

Festival officials had planned accommodations for 50,000 to 100,000.

Drug arrests mounted.

Abruzzi said the festival, sporting some of the biggest names in rock and folk music, was planned to accommodate between 50,000 and 100,000 persons. But the first day audience Friday was estimated at 300,000 and state police said as many as 750,000 more persons might be enroute, stuck in massive traffic jams that made access to the site by motor vehicle almost impossible.

HOSPITALS in nearby Liberty and Monticello were reported filled to capacity.

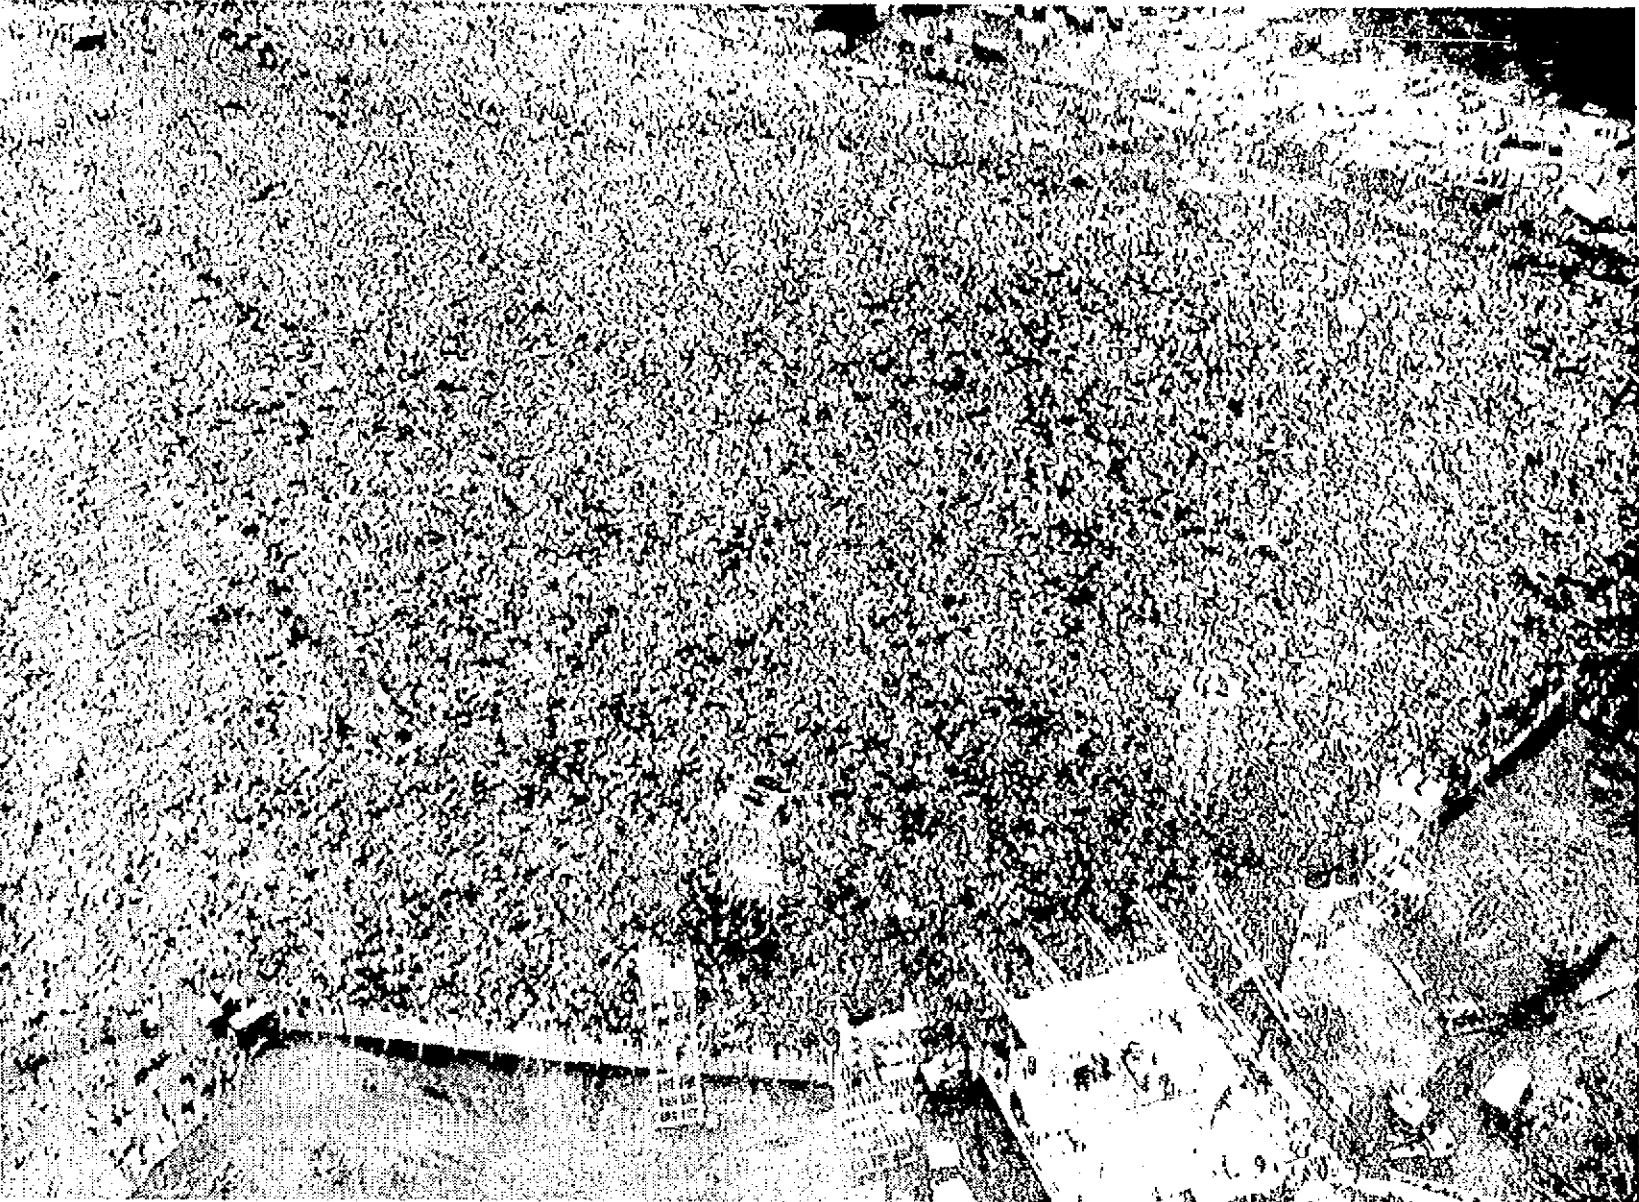

Festival promoters chartered every available private helicopter to fly in food and medical supplies and evacuate the seriously ill. A contingent of additional doctors to augment the 18 already at the site was being flown by chartered plane from New York.

Twelve young New York residents and internes carrying black bags and blankets were among those who answered the Woodstock fair's appeal for doctors familiar with the drug scene.

One resident at New York University Medical Center said he had heard the festival's broadcast appeal for help on a radio station Friday night. "I'm going only because young people are suffering and medical assistance is needed."

THE DOCTORS, most of them dressed in sport shirts and jeans, were reluctant to talk at the airport and none would give his name. They feared they would encounter difficulties in the hospitals where they

The congressmen, including one expected to join the flight in Honolulu this morning, are all involved in aviation legislation.

The flight — which spokesmen said carried 18 other nonpaying guests, mostly TWA executives, and 47 paying passengers — inaugurates the airlines' new Pacific air routes awarded last month by President Nixon.

An airline spokesman said if the guests had to pay for first-class, round-trip fares — from Washington via Los Angeles to Hong Kong with stopovers in Honolulu, Guam, Okinawa and Taipei — the cost would be $1,778 a ticket.

THE TRIP will take eight days and the spokesman said the dignitaries would be fed, lodged and entertained free of charge. He declined to estimate the cost, saying much of the entertainment will be financed by local governments and business interests.

work for doing outside labor.

In the broadcast appeal, Dr. Donald Goldecker, the festival's medical officer, has asked for "hip doctors" and medical supplies such as heavy tranquilizers and anti spasmodics used in treating adverse drug reactions.

The doctors on the flight said they were familiar with drug cases but that they brought only normal first aid supplies such as aspirin and gauze pads. Aside from the contents of their black bags, there were no medical supplies on the flight.

SHERIFF'S deputies from Dutchess, Rockland and Saratoga Counties were called in by mutual aid agreement to help Sullivan County personnel and a 200-man security force employed by the festival.

The festival security police force was put together hurriedly Friday after permission was revoked for 346 New York City policemen to fill the security rolls.

The spirits of the audience remained high. Thousands of young people left in disgust, but their number was matched or surpassed by other arrivals who managed to fight their way through the traffic jams.

SHERIFF'S deputies from Dutchess, Rockland and Saratoga Counties were called in by mutual aid agreement to help Sullivan County personnel and a 200-man security force employed by the festival.

The festival security police force was put together hurriedly Friday after permission was revoked for 346 New York City policemen to fill the security rolls.

The spirits of the audience remained high. Thousands of young people left in disgust, but their number was matched or surpassed by other arrivals who managed to fight their way through the traffic jams.

Greek Airliner Hijacked

ATHENS — A Greek airliner with 31 persons aboard was hijacked to Albania Saturday while flying from the Greek capital to a city on the northwest coast, Olympic Airways announced.

The twin-engine Olympic plane, carrying 28 passengers and a crew of three, landed safely at Vlore on Albania's southwestern coast.

Speculation arose immediately that the hijacking was carried out by opponents of the authoritarian government that took power in Greece by coup in April 1967.

AN OLYMPIC Airways spokesman said the plane "was forced from its course to Vlore." The airline, owned by shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis, said all aboard were safe.

It was the second time in eight months that a Greek plane had been hijacked. A young, pistol-wielding Greek forced the pilot of a Greek DC-6 to fly to Cairo last Jan. 2 while the plane was traveling from Athens to Crete. The passengers were released the same day and the hijacker was arrested by Egyptian authorities.

Olympic Airways general director Ioannis Georgakakis said he was unsure how the plane and passengers hijacked to Albania could be returned.

"It's the government's job to contact the proper authorities for their return," he added.

OFFICIALLY, Greece is still at war with Albania, never having concluded a peace treaty at the end of World War II. The Greek-Albanian frontier is heavily guarded.

An Italian Embassy spokesman in Athens said he did not know how the matter could be treated because the Greek Foreign Ministry has never asked Italy to intercede on its behalf with Albania. Italy has diplomatic relations with Tirana, one of the few nations in the Western community which do.

Oil Firms Ask to Drill off Coast

Two major oil companies have applied for permits to do exploratory drilling on the outer continental shelf off slick-sickened Santa Barbara County.

Three permits were requested by Humble Oil and Refining Co. and one was requested by Shell Oil Co.

Written comments or objections to the proposed work may be filed with the Army Corps of Engineers by Sept. 2.

Announcement of the permit applications was made by Col. Norman E. Pehrson, district engineer, Los Angeles District, Army Corps of Engineers. The announcement carried a drawing showing location of the proposed work.

Each application pertains to a parcel for which the company has a valid lease which, according to Pehrson, "was reviewed, reevaluated and cleared by the Secretary of the Interior."

Tate Massacre Linked to Ring of Narcotics Sellers

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A police informant linked three persons to the Benedict Canyon massacre in which actress Sharon Tate and four others were murdered and gave narcotics as the motive for the slaughter, it was reported Saturday.

The informant, according to newspaper reports, said that Polish playboy Voltyek Prokowsky, 37, one of the victims, was the principal target and was executed because of his deep involvement with narcotics distributors.

POLICE refused to either confirm or deny the story and would say only that they had "no comment" on it.

According to the story, the informant, who said he feared for his life, gave police the names of at least three persons including one he believes as actively involved in the Aug. 9 slayings at Miss Tate's canyon estate.

The informant, a Polish immigrant like Prokowsky and a close friend of the victim, said he had been invited to the party at the estate the night of the murders but worked late into the night and did not go.

In addition to Miss Tate and Prokowsky, the victims were Jay Sebring, a man's hair stylist; coffee heiress Abigail Folger and Steven Parent, a friend of the estate's caretaker, William Garretson.

PROKOWSKY, a Polish film producer, was a close friend of Miss Tate's husband, Roman Polanski who directed the film "Rosemary's Baby."

The informant told police he is certain the killer or

Interest on Cal-Vet Loans Hiked

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The high cost of borrowing money will hit the holders of 125,000 California veterans farm and home loans beginning in December with interest rates due to jump 1/2 per cent.

The California Veterans Board, meeting in Eureka, voted Friday 5-2 to raise the interest rate on Cal-Vet loans from 3 1/2 per cent to 4 1/2 per cent. The 3 1/2 per cent rate has been in effect since 1962.

"THE INCREASE applies to all existing loans as well as future loans," said H. J. Johnson, manager of the Division of Farm and Home Purchases.

Johnson said the loan program — there are about 125,000 outstanding — has had a "flexible interest rate" since it was started in the 1940s.

"It will not cause the holders to pay more each month but it will extend the terms of the loans," he said.

HOLDERS of about 2,400 of the 125,000 loans will pay 6 1/2 per cent. These loans — 2 per cent higher than the regular rate — are held by divorced wives of veterans, veterans from other states who bought from a California veteran and persons who bought loans foreclosed by the agency.

BOSTON (UPI) — A Northeast Airlines propjet with 40 persons aboard landed safely Saturday after its nose landing gear apparently failed to lower while approaching New York City.

Firemen sprayed foam on a runway at Logan International Airport in case the plane, a twin-engine Fairchild-Hiller F-27, had killers know that he can identify them and he has been under constant police guard since he first talked to officers last Sunday, the newspaper said.

The informant told officers that Prokowsky was a cocaine user and that Miss Folger was in love with him and supplied him with money for his drug habit.

The exact nature of Prokowsky's involvement with drug distributors was not known but the informant claimed it was that which led to the mass murders.

Heiress' Search for Life Led to Death

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Coffee heiress Abigail Folger seemed to have everything — money, good looks and intelligence.

But she was searching for something more — a search that led her to Southern California and death with four others at the Bel Air mansion of actress Sharon Tate.

In Los Angeles, she found "something real to live for" by working in the Watts ghetto as a social worker and a taste of show business glamor through acquaintances in the television and motion picture world.

She died in the company of three of those Hollywood acquaintances Aug. 8 when killers went on a shooting and stabbing rampage that left five dead at the secluded mansion.

Her father, Board Chairman Peter Folger of J. A. Folger Coffee Co., said she had "more or less commuted" between Southern California and the family mansion in Woodside during the past six months. He said she had worked first in Watts and then on the mayoralty campaign last spring of Thomas Bradley, the Negro ex-policeman defeated by Mayor Sam Yorty.

"She always has lead a clean life," the grief-stricken father said.

BUT POLICE investigating the bizarre described her as a "rich hippie" running with a drug-using Hollywood crowd known for its "freakout" parties and discotheque night life. Acquaintances said she had attended a seance with actress Mia Farrow.

She apparently gained entrance into the show business scene through men's hair stylist Jay Sebring, after she invested in his chain of salons. Miss Folger was also described as a "longtime close friend of Voltyek Prokowsky, a Polish film director and compatriot of Miss Tate's husband Roman Polanski.

Both Sebring, 35 and Prokowsky, 37, died in the Bel-Air massacre. Both were later described as members of a "pot-oriented" Hollywood crowd. Police found marijuana and other drugs in Sebring's car outside the Bel-Air mansion.

Miss Folger's wealthy family in the San Francisco Bay area was unaware of many of her Hollywood friends.

Her stepmother, Beverly Folger, said they didn't know of her association with Miss Tate until after the killings.

But her mother, Ines Merja Folger, had joined her last May at the champagne opening of Sebring's new San Francisco Salon.

The slain heiress was the great-granddaughter of James Ahearn Folger, who founded the San Francisco coffee firm in 1850 after leaving Nantucket, Mass., in hopes of striking it rich in the California gold fields.

He struck it rich, instead, by importing and roasting coffee beans. His grandsons, James III and Peter Folger, built the family firm into the third largest coffee wholesaler in the United States before selling it in 1963 to Procter & Gamble for 1,650,000 shares of common stock. The family members still operate Folger's as a P&G subsidiary.

ABIGAIL, FOLGER, who would have celebrated her 26th birthday two days after her death, was raised in wealthy "social register" style. She attended the private Santa Catalina School for Girls near Carmel and had a big "coming out" party as a 1961 debutante.

But after graduating from Radcliffe, she took a 40-hour a week job at the University of California Art Museum in Berkeley.

"She was very outgoing, very able, very enthusiastic and did a beautiful job organizing the Art Museum Council," said her former boss, UC Prof. Peter Selz.

She quit her job last year because she wanted to live in New York City. She got a job there at the Gotham Book Mart, but returned to the West Coast.

30,000 Space Workers Jam Houston's Astrodome to Honor Apollo 11 Crew

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston said thanks "for a miracle" to the Apollo 11 moonmen Saturday, staging a parade and a "party" that filled the huge Astrodome with more than 30,000 space workers.

Neil A. Armstrong, Michael Collins and Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. were the honored guests at the massive show and party staged in the center of the baseball diamond at the dome.

Other astronauts, engineers, scientists and blue collar workers from the space industry jammed the multicolored seats of the sports palace as entertainers and government officials heaped praise and thanks.

The dome became perfectly still and quiet for almost a minute as Mayor Louis Welch of Houston started the program by asking for silent prayer "in memory of those astronauts who lost their lives" in the American race to the moon.

MAYOR WELCH said the party was "our way of saying thanks for moving man closer to the stars."

Master of ceremonies Frank Sinatra drew a huge roar as he opened the show with a quip: "I can't figure out why we paid $20 billion to get a bag of dirt when we could have paid a hippie $2 and got the same thing."

Singer Nancy Ames opened her performance with the words: "God Bless you all for a miracle you've given this world."

More than a score of other astronauts sat in ring-side seats along with top space officials and the Apollo 11 crew during the program.

It was a special night for Aldrin's oldest daughter Janice. She turned 12 Saturday.

The Apollo 11 spacemen were greeted with a huge roar of applause as they arrived individually in the center of the baseball diamond. Collins arrived with his mother, widow of the late Army Gen. James L. Collins of Washington.

There were protests that "the little man" on the lunar landing effort was left out in the planning for Saturday night's blowout, organized by Houston, adopted home town of the astronauts.

MORE THAN 31,000 persons connected with the space industry — got tickets, and another 19,000 tickets, made available to the public, were taken quickly.

Some persons were furious about not being able to get in.

"My husband was away from home getting us to the moon as much as anybody and now we can't even get to the celebration," said the wife of one excluded space worker.

The city gave NASA 31,000 tickets to distribute to the 4,700 employees at the Manned Spacecraft Center and the 18,000 employees of space contractors in the area.

But one official said "the little man was left out" after some supervisors took their share off the top.

In the parade the Apollo

11 spacemen and 26 other astronauts rode through the streets of the downtown business district while a Saturday morning crowd estimated at nearly 300,000 cheered and showered them with paper.

Crowds surged off the sidewalks several times and jammed around the cars of Armstrong, Collins and Aldrin, halting the parade.

ARMSTRONG seemed delighted. He reached out to touch hands of those around his car. He waved and winked and laughed. At one point he even threw paper back at the crowd.

Collins' car was filled with paper almost to the shoulder of his wife, who sat on the back seat of the convertible. Collins laughed and began bailing out the debris.

The week-long series of personal appearances started Tuesday with a news conference. On Wednesday, the astronauts had ticker tape parades in New York and Chicago and a state dinner with President Nixon in Los Angeles.

Moon Lots Sold

BELO HORIZONTE, Brazil — Police arrested Jose Cassiano De Jesus for selling lots on the moon at $24 each. Jose told potential clients he sold the first lot to Neil Armstrong and that Armstrong had gone to the moon to inspect his property.

and ominous growth of Camille occurred, forecasters said the storm would be the worst in 51 years along the target area.

Camille's hurricane force winds covered 80-mile wide circles, gales lashed across 200 miles of Gulf waters, and turbulent seas chased small craft skippers into Gulf ports from Florida to Louisiana.

At Apalachicola, one of the first points which will be hit if Camille goes ashore according to prediction, a commercial fishing fleet of some 40 boats steamed up the Apalachicola River.

NOT EVERYBODY was taking the same precautions. In a fragile wood-and-glass bar just 150 feet from the low water mark at Panama City, a crowd of Ft. Rucker, Ala., soldiers slipped their beer nonchalantly.

"Hell, no, they're not going to leave," said Jerry Johnson, the bar manager. "We're going to stay open and have music right up to the end — as long as the beer lasts, and we've got 25 kegs. It ought to be fun — for a while, anyway."

"We had 50 rooms vacate all at once. The people just up and left," said Mrs. H. L. Hudson, manager of a 150-unit motel just 80 feet from the water line at Fort Walton Beach.

"They're just scared to death," she said. "Mostly tourists. The radio just scares them to death."

Disaster crews rushed into the area and seaside residents were given urgent warnings to move out.

From Point au Fer southwest of New Orleans to St. Marks, the Coast Guard called all hands to duty and began reconnaissance flights into the gulf, on the lookout for skippers in trouble.

Meanwhile Tropical Storm Debbie grew to hurricane force in the Atlantic 1,200 miles east-southeast of San Juan, Puerto Rico.

With winds up to 80 miles an hour and gales sweeping a 175-mile broad area, Debbie was taking a west-northwest trail.

"Her footprints," said forecaster Neil Frank, "are on a very familiar path of previous August storms which have struck Florida."

30,000 Space Workers Jam Houston's Astrodome to Honor Apollo 11 Crew

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston said "thanks" for a "miracle" to the Apollo 11 moonmen Saturday, staging a parade and a "party" that filled the huge Astrodome with more than 30,000 space workers.

Neil A. Armstrong, Michael Collins and Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. were the honored guests at the massive show and party staged in the center of the baseball diamond at the dome.

Other astronauts, engineers, scientists and blue collar workers from the space industry jammed the multicolored seats of the sports palace as entertainers and government officials heaped praise and thanks.

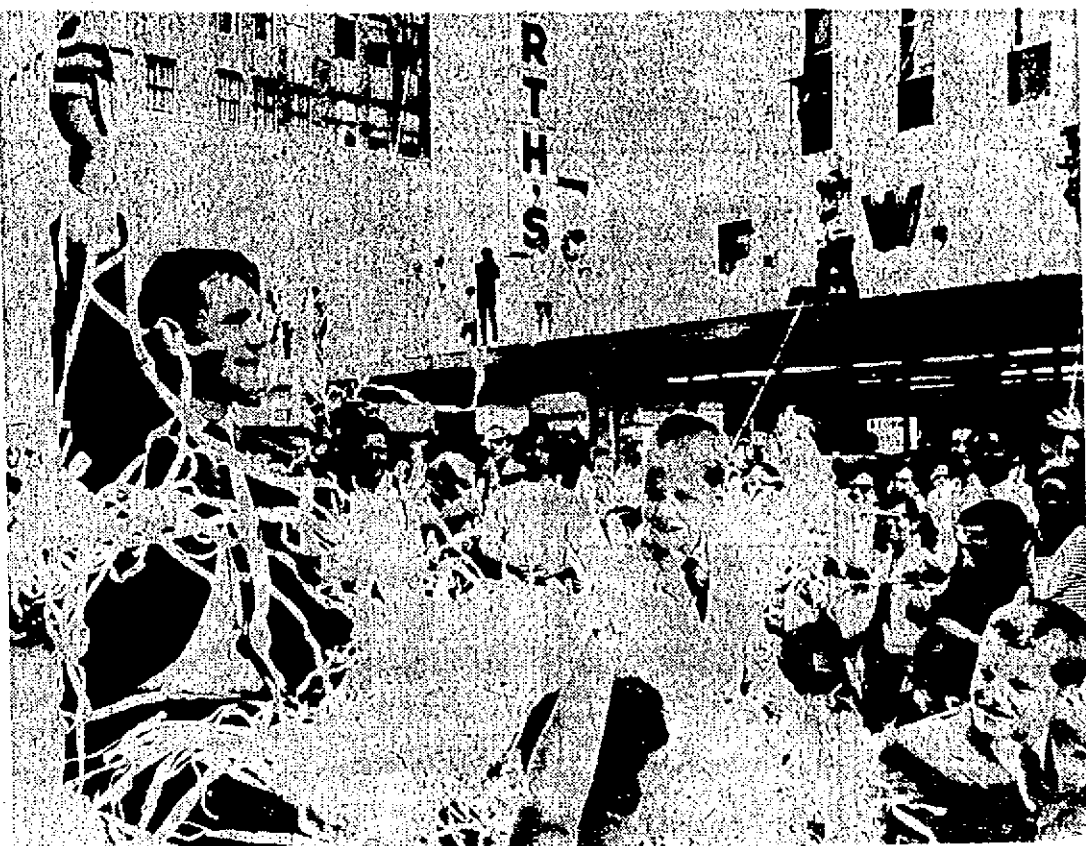

The dome became perfectly still and quiet for almost a minute as Mayor Louis Welch of Houston started the program by asking for silent prayer "in memory of those astronauts who lost their lives" in the American race to the moon.

MAYOR WELCH said the party was "our way of saying thanks for moving man closer to the stars."

Master of ceremonies Frank Sinatra drew a huge roar as he opened the show with a quip: "I can't figure out why we paid $20 billion to get a bag of dirt when we could have paid a hippie $2 and got the same thing."

Singer Nancy Ames opened her performance with the words: "God Bless you all for a miracle you've given this world."

More than a score of other astronauts sat in ring-side seats along with top space officials and the Apollo 11 crew during the program.

It was a special night for Aldrin's oldest daughter Janice. She turned 12 Saturday.

The Apollo 11 spacemen were greeted with a huge roar of applause as they arrived individually in the center of the baseball diamond. Collins arrived with his mother, widow of the late Army Gen. James L. Collins of Washington.

There were protests that "the little man" on the lunar landing effort was left out in the planning for Saturday night's blowout, organized by Houston, adopted home town of the astronauts.

MORE THAN 31,000 persons connected with the space industry — got tickets, and another 19,000 tickets, made available to the public, were taken quickly.

Some persons were furious about not being able to get in.

"My husband was away from home getting us to the moon as much as anybody and now we can't even get to the celebration," said the wife of one excluded space worker.

The city gave NASA 31,000 tickets to distribute to the 4,700 employees at the Manned Spacecraft Center and the 16,000 employees of space contractors in the area.

But one official said "the little man was left out" after some supervisors took their share off the top.

In the parade the Apollo

11 spacemen and 26 other astronauts rode through the streets of the downtown business district while a Saturday morning crowd estimated at nearly 300,000 cheered and showered them with paper.

Crowds surged off the sidewalks several times and jammed around the cars of Armstrong, Collins and Aldrin, halting the parade.

ARMSTRONG seemed delighted. He reached out to touch hands of those around his car. He waved and winked and laughed. At one point he even threw paper back at the crowd.

Collins' car was filled with paper almost to the shoulder of his wife, who sat on the back seat of the convertible. Collins laughed and began bailing out the debris.

The week-long series of personal appearances started Tuesday with a news conference. On Wednesday, the astronauts had ticker tape parades in New York and Chicago and a state dinner with President Nixon in Los Angeles.

Moon Lots Sold

BELO HORIZONTE, Brazil — Police arrested Jose Cassiano De Jesus for selling lots on the moon at $24 each. Jose told potential clients he sold the first lot to Neil Armstrong and that Armstrong had gone to the moon to inspect his property.

Disaster crews rushed into the area and seaside residents were given urgent warnings to move out.

FROM ATLANTA, the Red Cross deployed 28 workers with nine radio-equipped disaster vans to the storm area.

Military bases along the coast went on "Condition 3," which a Coast Guard spokesman said, means, "tie down everything you want to keep." Planes were flown inland.

From Point au Fer southwest of New Orleans to St. Marks, the Coast Guard called all hands to duty and began reconnaissance flights into the gulf, on the lookout for skippers in trouble.

Unearthed Human's Skull Could Be 2 Million Years Old

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists have reported discovery of the most complete skull yet found of "homo habilis" — the man-like creature, smaller than a pygmy, that roamed East Africa two million years ago.

It's the best relic yet uncovered of a race of hominids that may have been direct, remote ancestors of man, the National Geographic Society said Saturday in reporting the discovery.

The finding, made in the fossil-rich Olduvai Gorge in Tanzania, was reported to the society by Dr. Mary Leakey, she's the wife of Kenya-born anthropologist Dr. Louis S. B. Leakey and shares with him a number of discoveries at Olduvai and other African sites.

The skull was found by Peter Nzube, an African member of the Leakey's staff. It is said to be more complete than a skull found previously in the same region and identified as that of a young female.

Red China Attacks Nixon, Russians

New York Times Service

HONG KONG — Communist China combined an attack on President Nixon Saturday with continued expressions of anti-Soviet hostility and indignation over last Wednesday's clash between Russian and Chinese Communist troops on the Soviet border with Sinkiang.

As mass anti-Soviet demonstrations swept through Chinese cities, Hsinhua, the Chinese Communist press agency, charged Nixon with "squandering money" on his new "Western White Houses" at San Clemente and working out "counter-revolutionary schemes" in new San Clemente offices built for $75,000 in "taxes extorted from the people."

Hsinhua said Nixon and Soviet leaders are in collusion to form a "new counter-revolutionary holy alliance and rig up a ring of encirclement against China."

Hsinhua denounced Nixon for taking a "merry-making summer vacation" at his expensive new San Clemente residence "while millions of American working people are crowded in city slums during the hot summer."

Hsinhua claimed the U.S. President "in mortal fear of the ever-awakening American people" had walled in the new residence, put "reactionary troops and police" on guard around the clock and made San Clemente residents "furious" by "forcibly occupying the public beach" and excluding all but authorized persons.

Hsinhua cited statements by Nixon and Soviet leaders about their readiness to negotiate for a peaceful settlement of differences and their mutually favorable attitudes toward new cooperative arrangements between Asian countries as indicative of their collaboration to "redivide the world."

The agency said Nixon's call in his inauguration speech for an era of negotiation instead of confrontation with Russia was "synonymous to opposing China, communism and the people."

Another Hsinhua dispatch quoted Li Hsien-Nien, a vice-premier who has been acting lately as minister of foreign affairs, as telling a Congo (Brazzaville) National Day reception in Peking that Nixon's new Asian policy consisted of the U.S. supplying "money and guns to make Asians fight Asians."

Meanwhile reports of demonstrations in all major centers of China by hundreds of millions of people indicated Peking was taking maximum propaganda internally against Russia in the wake of the Sinkiang clash.

The skull was found by Peter Nzube, an African member of the Leakey's staff. It is said to be more complete than a skull found previously in the same region and identified as that of a young female.

The Leakeys claim that all members of the "homo habilis" clan were short, slender, and small-brained and probably were toolmakers.

THE NEWLY FOUND skull lacks only the lower jaw, some fragments of the brain case, and some of the upper teeth, Mrs. Leakey said.

"Homo habilis" was apparently quite different from two other hominids whose relics have also turned up in the gorge:

1. "Zinjanthropus" — apparently a contemporary of habilis, but a robust character who sported a heavy skull, immense teeth and a tiny brain.

2. "Homo erectus" — somewhat of a Johnny-come-lately in the evolutionary scene, and similar to types of primitive man found in Java and China.

"Dr. Leakey believes," the society said, "that homo habilis seems to be heading toward modern man, while Zinjanthropus and homo erectus mark dead-end branches in evolution's tangled growth."

Wives Unite to Fight Soaring Beef Prices

Associated Press

Soaring beef prices are beginning to produce beef boycotts by incensed housewives, and one group of Long Island, N.Y., women is so well organized it's being asked to send consultants to other towns.

The boycotts seem to have had little effect on prices so far, but the determined shoppers say they'll keep it up until the prices come down.

"The meat is not moving," said Mrs. Mickey DeLorenzo of Levittown, N.Y., a community on Long Island.

OTHER boycotts were in progress in such communities as Cocoa Beach, Fla., reported in the Los Angeles area and one was tried in Oregon, where some housewives held a "meatless week."

In Washington, D.C., the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics has figures to support the housewives, showing sharp increases in beef prices in six months.

Here were the national averages on retail price per pound:

	Jan. 1969	June 1969
Porterhouse	$1.46	$1.63
Steak	1.24	1.39
Round steak	1.19	1.33
Roast	1.17	1.29
Rib roast	1.03	1.15
Chuck roast	.65	.73
Hamburger	.57	.61

June was the last month for which such official figures were available. But an Associated Press survey this month produced these cost ranges for a pound of sirloin steak:

Los Angeles, $1.80 to $2.59; Atlanta, $1.43 to $1.47; Chicago, $1.29; Boston, $1.49; Washington, $1.49; Marshalltown, Iowa, $1.59; and Hutchinson Kan., $1.39.

In Levittown, the boycott began last Monday, after two weeks of planning.

"We will not be satisfied with sale prices," says Mrs. DeLorenzo.

"We want regular, everyday fair prices."

Mrs. DeLorenzo, wife of an electrician, said her group was not picketing now, but has stationed spotters in front of stores, handing out leaflets and meatless recipes.

One food market has admitted a 15-to-20 per cent decrease in beef sales, she said, although others deny any effect. She said her spotters have seen that the meat is not moving.

"We're getting phone calls from all over the island," Mrs. DeLorenzo said, "from women wanting to set up groups. They're inviting speakers from our committee and we have a firm meeting Tuesday night in Hicksville and we're working with two ladies in Bay Shore."

In the Cape Kennedy area of Florida, housewives planned a "steak out" at

Solons Ask Banks Aid Student

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sens. Jacob K. Javits R-N.Y., and Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., urged the nation's banks Sunday to make college student loans even though Congress has not passed interest-subsidy legislation.

The senators made public a telegram they sent to all banking clearing houses declaring it is vital that a large volume of loans be granted in the next few weeks.

IF THIS is not done, they said, as many as 220,000 students may find it impossible to enter college in the fall term.

They emphasized that the Senate has passed the subsidy bill and that a House Committee has approved a similar measure, and said prospects are good that the legislation will be sent to President Nixon soon after Congress returns Sept. 3 from its summer recess.

The legislation provides for government payments which would make it possible for the banks to realize up to 10 per cent interest on the loans. The present ceiling is 7 per cent, and many banks have dropped out of the program.

THE PROGRAM "is especially vital to young people who themselves, or whose families, have no banking connections now, but who have every potential for becoming great bank customers in the future," the senators said.

Javits was the sponsor of the Senate bill and Pell its floor manager as chairman of the education subcommittee.

Facts You Should Know About Diamonds

by Arch Shinder of Lawson's Jewelers Downtown Long Beach Only

We have now discussed that every diamond is imperfect, that the degree of imperfection is what is important, that imperfection, per se, is only one aspect in evaluating a diamond; that the size of the imperfection will influence the price; and now, we shall investigate how the location of the imperfection can affect the brilliance and cleanness, and thus, the value of the diamond.

Imperfections may be found anywhere within the diamond itself. Where its location is becomes a vital factor thusly:

Is it located in such a way that it materially affects the reflection of light passing throughout the diamond so that the diamond is less brilliant and clear than other diamonds where the imperfection is located some other place?

Is it located in such a way that it is easily visible to the naked eye and cannot be hidden by the setting in which the diamond will be located?

Naturally, if the imperfection is located in the exact center of the diamond, it will materially affect the diamond. If the imperfection is at the edge of the diamond and can be hidden by the prongs which hold the diamond in its setting, the imperfection will not materially affect the diamond.

Between these two relative standards, most diamonds will be.

We must then couple the factor of the size of the imperfection with its location.

How noticeable now is the imperfection?

Again, utilize the 10-power jeweler's loupe or microscope. Remember, every reliable jeweler possesses at least a 10-power jeweler's loupe. Every jeweler should be able to point out to you where the imperfection is located and its size.

But, to properly evaluate how much the imperfection (the trade term is "inclusion") then affects the value, we must ascertain what type of imperfection it is.

Next week we shall discuss the types of imperfection and how they affect value.

Remember, if you have any questions in reference to diamonds, please write to us at Lawson's Jewelers, 250 Pine Ave., Downtown Long Beach Only, and we shall be happy to answer them.

Mary Jo's Mom Has Doubts

NEW YORK (AP) — The mother of Mary Jo Kopechne, the Washington secretary drowned last month when a car driven by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy ran off a bridge, says she wants to hear "the whole story" from the senator himself, the New York Post said Saturday.

"Why wasn't help called for?" the Post quoted Mrs. Joseph Kopechne of Berkeley Heights, N.J., as saying. The newspaper said this was the first question she wanted answered at an inquest set for Sept. 3.

MARY JO, 28, was a passenger in the Massachusetts senator's car when it ran off a narrow bridge and into a pond at Chappaquiddick Island, Mass., last July 18.

Mrs. Kopechne, according to the Post, said she has not seen Kennedy since her daughter's funeral July 22. She said she would like to speak with him "if I could control myself from not breaking down." She added:

"I'd like to hear the whole story, just a continuation on from when I was informed that Mary Jo said she wanted to go back to the hotel that evening. She was tired, sunburned, and Sen. Kennedy offered her a lift. He said as long as she was going he'd take her, he was going, too. No, I never understood what time that was."

After Kennedy's televised explanation of the accident three weeks ago, Mrs. Kopechne said she was "satisfied."

"I was satisfied that he came forward and said anything," she told the Post. "Before that I was going out of my mind. It could have been in more depth, but I was satisfied."

Mrs. Kopechne spoke of Joseph Gargan, the senator's cousin, and Paul Markham, a Kennedy friend, who Kennedy said helped him in attempts to retrieve Miss Kopechne before authorities were notified.

"WHY WASN'T help called for my daughter by Gargan and Markham? I can understand shock, but I don't see where they went into shock," she was quoted as saying. "I don't think anyone has that control over you, to be quiet like that, do they? I mean, they're both intelligent men."

"Questions? There are a lot of questions in my mind. That's what I go on answered questions."

Wives Unite to Fight Soaring Beef Prices

Associated Press

Soaring beef prices are beginning to produce beef boycotts by incensed housewives, and one group of Long Island, N.Y., women is so well organized it's being asked to send consultants to other towns.

The boycotts seem to have had little effect on prices so far, but the determined shoppers say they'll keep it up until the prices come down.

"The meat is not moving," said Mrs. Mickey DeLorenzo of Levittown, N.Y., a community on Long Island.

OTHER boycotts were in progress in such communities as Cocoa Beach, Fla., reported in the Los Angeles area and one was tried in Oregon, where some housewives held a "meatless week."

In Washington, D.C., the Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics has figures to support the housewives, showing sharp increases in beef prices in six months.

Here were the national averages on retail price per pound:

	Jan. 1968	June 1968
Porterhouse	$1.46	$1.63
Sirloin	1.24	1.39
Round steak	1.10	1.33
Rump roast	1.17	1.29
Rib roast	1.03	1.15
Chuck roast	.65	.73
Hamburger	.57	.64

June was the last month for which such official figures were available. But an Associated Press survey this month produced these cost ranges for a pound of sirloin steak:

Los Angeles, $1.80 to $2.50; Atlanta, $1.43 to $1.47; Chicago, $1.29; Boston, $1.40; Washington, $1.40; Marshalltown, Iowa, $1.50; and Hutchinson Kan., $1.39.

In Levittown, the boycott began last Monday, after two weeks of planning.

"We will not be satisfied with sale prices," says Mrs. DeLorenzo.

"We want regular, everyday fair prices."

Mrs. DeLorenzo, wife of an electrician, said her group was not picketing now, but has stationed spotters in front of stores, handing out leaflets and meatless recipes.

One food market has admitted a 15-to-20 per cent decrease in beef sales, she said, although others deny any effect. She said her spotters have seen that the meat is not moving.

"We're getting phone calls from all over the island," Mrs. DeLorenzo said, "from women wanting to set up groups. They're inviting speakers from our committee and we have a firm meeting Tuesday night in Hicksville and we're working with two ladies in Bay Shore."

In the Cape Kennedy area of Florida, housewives planned a "steak out" at

Solons Ask Banks Aid Students

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sens. Jacob K. Javits R-N.Y., and Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., urged the nation's banks Sunday to make college student loans even though Congress has not passed interest-subsidy legislation.

The senators made public a telegram they sent to all banking clearing houses declaring it is vital that a large volume of loans be granted in the next few weeks.

IF THIS is not done, they said, as many as 220,000 students may find it impossible to enter college in the fall term.

They emphasized that the Senate has passed the subsidy bill and that a House Committee has approved a similar measure, and said prospects are good that the legislation will be sent to President Nixon soon after Congress returns Sept. 3 from its summer recess.

The legislation provides for government payments which would make it possible for the banks to realize up to 10 per cent interest on the loans. The present ceiling is 7 per cent, and many banks have dropped out of the program.

THE PROGRAM "is especially vital to young people who themselves, or whose families, have no banking connections now, but who have every potential for becoming great bank customers in the future," the senators said.

Javits was the sponsor of the Senate bill and Pell its floor manager as chairman of the education subcommittee.

Mary Jo's Mom Has Doubts

NEW YORK (AP) — The mother of Mary Jo Kopechne, the Washington secretary drowned last month when a car driven by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy ran off a bridge, says she wants to hear "the whole story" from the senator himself. The New York Post said Saturday.

"Why wasn't help called for?" the Post quoted Mrs. Joseph Kopechne of Berkeley Heights, N.J., as saying. The newspaper said this was the first question she wanted answered at an inquest set for Sept. 3.

MARY JO, 26, was a passenger in the Massachusetts senator's car when it ran off a narrow bridge and into a pond at Chappaquiddick Island, Mass., last July 18.

Mrs. Kopechne, according to the Post, said she has not seen Kennedy since her daughter's funeral July 22. She said she would like to speak with him "if I could control myself from not breaking down." She added:

"I'd like to hear the whole story, just a continuation on from when I was informed that Mary Jo said she wanted to go back to the hotel that evening. She was tired, sunburned, and Sen. Kennedy offered her a lift. He said as long as she was going he'd take her, he was going, too. No, I never understood what time that was."

After Kennedy's televised explanation of the accident three weeks ago, Mrs. Kopechne said she was "satisfied."

"I was satisfied that he came forward and said anything," she told the Post. "Before that I was going out of my mind. It could have been in more depth, but I was satisfied."

Mrs. Kopechne spoke of Joseph Gargan, the senator's cousin, and Paul Markham, a Kennedy friend, who Kennedy said helped him in attempts to retrieve Miss Kopechne before authorities were notified.

"WHY WASN'T help called for my daughter by Gargan and Markham? I can understand shock, but I don't see where they went into shock," she was quoted as saying. "I don't think anyone has that control over you, to be quiet like that, do they? I mean, they're both intelligent men."

"Questions? There are a lot of questions in my mind. That's what I go on answered questions."

PARTS OF PLANE ARE PULLED UP ON BEACH NEAR BALBOA POINT

Plane Ditches off Balboa; 4 Escape Serious Injury

By TONY CILLO
Staff Writer

Four Orange County residents suffered only minor injuries Saturday when they splashed to a safe but watery landing off the strand at Balboa Peninsula in their light airplane.

The plane made a futile attempt to reach Orange County Airport after the pilot, Sheldon Faust, 20, of Garden Grove, said he lost "throttle control" at 2,000 feet over Huntington Beach.

Faust fought to keep the plane in the air along the coast but was finally forced to put the plane down in the surf — before the eyes of hundreds of summer bathers — at G St. on the Balboa Peninsula at 4 p.m.

THE CRAFT, a single-engine Piper Cherokee 180, dropped into the surf, first one wheel, then the other. Finally the plane flipped during the set-down, the occupants hastily escaped the four-passenger cabin before surging ocean water could fill it and trap them. Police said the pilot, Faust, went out the door and one of the others inside kicked out a window.

Faust and others — Robert Phillips, 20, of 11502 Seclene Lane, Garden Grove; Jack Howley, 21, of Tustin, and his wife, Jan, 20 — were helped ashore in the waist-deep water.

About five blocks away, at the closest lifeguard station at L Street, Newport Beach lifeguard Bruce Black, 18, watched the aircraft fall and sounded an alarm. At the spot, two Ontario brothers, Charles David Reed, 22, and Eugene Reed, 17, went into the surf to help the plane's passengers.

ACCORDING TO a spokesman at Newport Beach's Hong Memorial Hospital, Howley and his wife received bruises and scratches and were released. Faust and Phillips were not treated.

The plane was not severely damaged in the "ditching," but pounding surf battered it again and again against the beach. The light craft was broken into pieces and declared a loss by officers at the scene.

The plane had been rented from Martin Aviation, at Orange County Airport.

60 Campers Injured as Truck Overturns

SUSSEX, N.J. (UPI) — Most of 60 campers riding in a crowded flatbed truck were injured Friday when the vehicle overturned on a rain-slick mountain road.

The teen-age campers had been picked up by the truck at the summit of a mountain in high point state park where they had camped overnight, according to state police. About 20 youths were hospitalized.

Laird Urged to Release Green Beret

SAIGON (AP) — A civilian attorney and two members of Congress have urged Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird to release one of all eight Green Berets charged in the alleged murder of a Vietnamese double agent. A senator accused Laird of giving the Green Berets a "black eye."

Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., demanded Saturday in Washington that Laird order the "immediate release" of Maj. Thomas C. Middleton. His office issued this text of a telegram to Laird:

"Your handling of the Green Beret case threatens to compromise our intelligence activities and gives the Green Berets a black eye. There is no justification for the continued confinement of Maj. Middleton and I demand his immediate release."

MIDDLETON'S civilian attorney, George W. Gregory of Cheraw, S.C., cabled Laird that his client was being held under "inhumane conditions" at the Army stockade at Long Binh, 12 miles north of here.

There was no immediate public response from Laird to either message Saturday.

On Friday, the defense secretary received a telegram from Rep. Carl Albert, D-Okla., House majority leader, urging that all eight Green Berets be freed pending trial.

Commenting on this, Gregory said: "I think this means Congress is convinced there is no criminal issue here."

Body of Youth Is Recovered

INDEPENDENCE (AP) — The body of a 16-year-old San Francisco boy who fell to his death in the Sierra 20 miles west of here was recovered Saturday.

Inyo County coroner Don Talmage identified him as Kurt F. Benkman, son of Herbert Benkman, of San Francisco.

Talmage said the boy, with a five-man Sierra Club clean-up party tidying up trails Friday in Sierra National Park, fell 600 feet and slid across an ice-field.

U.S. Thailand Involvement is Surfacing

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The U.S. government long has maintained a security blackout on the activities of its 50,000-man military force in Thailand.

The debate in the U.S. Senate over a secret military agreement between the United States and Thailand that has existed for five years points up how well this blackout has worked. It had escaped public notice until now.

Sources in President Nixon's administration say the agreement's main feature is that U.S. troops could be committed to help Thai forces stop the Communists in Laos before they reach Thailand. They would be under over-all Thai command. It cannot be put into effect without specific agreement of both governments.

The document, which Sens. J. W. Fulbright, Frank Church and Mike Mansfield claim could commit the United States to another Vietnam-style war, is the latest example to come to light of America's largely unpublicized commitment to this Southeast Asian kingdom.

In both Thailand and neighboring Laos, the U.S. government has pursued a deliberate policy of minimizing the extent of American involvement.

The activities of the estimated 300 B-52 bombers and F-4 fighters, and 45,000 U.S. Air Force men stationed at six big bases in Thailand go almost unreported because Air Force officers are forbidden to talk to newsmen.

It is no secret, despite U.S. denials, that Thai-based planes are mounting increasingly heavier raids on Communist positions in Laos.

Washington sources say U.S. planes are now flying an average 12,500 sorties — individual flights — a month over Laos, equal to the monthly average flown at the height of the air war over North Vietnam.

The U.S. Embassy denies the bombings are taking place.

This policy has persisted since 1964.

Apart from the bombing of Laos, there are other unknowns about U.S. activities in Thailand.

What, for instance, is the role of the 600 U.S. Special Forces troops stationed in Thailand.

The embassy and the military command say the Green Berets have simply a training and advisory role. Other sources say the Special Forces troops are actively engaged in Thai government operations against some 3,000 Communist terrorists in the remote mountains and jungles of Thailand.

The Green Berets are officially the only American troops in the country allowed to carry weapons, and do so on patrols with Thai forces. The embassy claims they are never sent to sensitive areas where they might make contact with the terrorists.

Another classified aspect of American involvement in Thailand is the figure of spending on the huge five-year construction program that has given Thailand seven of Asia's best airfields, linked by an American-built highway network to a $40-million, American-built deep water military port. Estimates from one official source put the total expenditure at $1.5 billion.

American spending and the numbers of military personnel have increased enormously since 1950, when a military assistance pact was signed and American money began to roll into the country at the rate of $7 million a year.

HOME PORT AT LAST FOR COMMUNICATIONS RELAY SHIP
A big welcome is slated for 9 a.m. Wednesday as the USS Arlington arrives in her new Long Beach home port. Pier assignment is to be announced later. She will be flying a 407-foot home-ward bound pennant, emblematic of being away from the U.S. for over nine months. She is a converted World War II light carrier, originally based in Norfolk. Arlington has been in the Vietnam war zone nearly three years, the 1,000-man crew rotated every year. Her five flight deck antennas provide world-wide, secure naval communications.

Salvation Army Slates Mass Rally

By LES RODNEY
Staff Writer

Downtown Long Beach will vibrate this evening to a nostalgic sound from out of the heart of Americana — the evangelistic compah of Salvation Army bands leading uniformed lads and lassies down the avenue to a mass rally.

No less than six of the Corps' crack Southland bands, following street corner meetings from 5 to 6:30 p.m., will converge at Long Beach Boulevard and Broadway and thump their cadenced way down into Municipal Auditorium for an evening session of the 12th annual Long Beach Camp Meetings.

It's a rousing tradition maintained by the modernized and streamlined Army, though many more converts are now made through its myriad of social service agencies than on the drumhead.

The street corner meetings will find the famed Congress Hall Band at Broadway and Cedar, Hollywood Tabernacle Band at Ocean and Pacific, Inglewood Band at Pine and Broadway, Long Beach Band at Third and Pine, Santa Ana Band at Fourth and Pine, and San Diego Band at Broadway and Long Beach Boulevard.

The nine-day Southern California Division Camp Meeting features nightly rallies in the Auditorium at 7:30, plus 3 p.m. Sundays (including today), and weekday prayer meetings at 2 p.m., followed by Bible study classes at 3 p.m., all with prominent Salvationists from this country and abroad as leaders.

Keynote on Friday night and next Sunday will be Commissioner Gosta Blomberg, territorial commander in Sweden.

It's all open to the public, which is really redempt, for reaching, influencing and aiding the public has been the name of the game for the Salvation Army throughout its 103 year history.

Miss White Hat Final Judging Set

Miss White Hat of 1970 will be selected Wednesday at an Independent Business Men's Association noon luncheon at the Lafayette.

Roland Baker, contest chairman, said nine beautiful and talented girls had survived two rounds of judging and were eligible for the finals.

Luncheon guests will assist the judges' panel in naming the girl who will represent Long Beach and area enlisted men for the coming year.

Her first major duty will be to reign over the White Hat Award Banquet next month.

Last year a turnaway crowd saw Diane Boney win the crown and Baker said he was expecting another banner turnout.

Judges include three enlisted men: Hospitalman 2.C. Jim Yeager, USS Jersey, Boatswain's Mate 2.C. Larry Stevens, USS Wichita, and Storekeeper 2.C. Jim Schreiber, Coast Guard Headquarters.

Also, Bill Brewer, IBMA president; Joe Waddington, IBMA executive director; Ed Purnell, member; Alma Kirkland, "Navy Circles" in the Independent, Press-Telegram; Mary Ellis Carlton, former I.P.T. women's editor and now Special Sections Editor; and Chet Baldwin, former IBMA president.

'SMUT AUTHOR GROUP' MEMBER TALKS Pregnant Wife Inspires Chapter in Best-Seller

George Vecsey is one of the 25 newspaper men and women who wrote the best-selling novel "Naked Came the Stranger" under the assumed name of Penelope Ashe. Now a sports reporter for the New York Times, he tells of his own role in the project.

By GEORGE VECSEY
Written for Associated Press

It started three years ago. I had never written a dirty book. I had never even read a dirty book.

Then one day I reported for work at Newsday, in suburban Long Island, and found a memo from Mike McGrady, the cool columnist. He was inviting 24 co-workers to join the first group dirty novel. Write as badly as we could, he cautioned.

"Look at the garbage that gets printed," McGrady said.

"We can be as bad as they are. It's a massive put-down, a hoax."

I took the challenge home with me.

I sat at my typewriter, trying to find an inspiration. But I had a headache and flecks of dried paint were falling in my hair. My wife was scraping paint off a window frame above my head. We were busy renovating our crumbling old farmhouse.

"How can I be a serious writer while you scrape paint?" I demanded.

THEN THE MUSE struck. I would write a chapter about a typical suburban man who can no longer "communicate" with his wife because they are too busy renovating their old house.

"What are you chuckling about?" Marianne asked.

"I'm writing a chapter for a dirty book," I replied.

"Why don't you help me fix the house instead," she said.

I completed the masterpiece in two hours. The next day I gave it to McGrady. He said, "Great. Some guys wrote

GEORGE VECSEY
First 'Dirty Book'

rived at my home. My wife grabbed it first.

"I want to see what you wrote," she said.

"Let me guess." She read for a few minutes, until she discovered a chapter about Morlon Earbrow, the man with a paint-scraping wife.

"You fink," my wife said. "Here I am, expecting our third child and you make it sound like we don't communicate."

"Artistic license, my dear. Besides, we might make some money out of this. They're trying to sell the movie rights."

"Oh," she said. "That's better."

From what I understand, the same thing happened in the other households as wives discovered a seamy but lucrative side to their journalist-husbands.

OUR FIRST reviews came. Martin Levin in The New York Times gave Penelope only a "C" grade in "erotic fantasy."

McGrady was philosophical. "The guy read the book," McGrady said. "He can tell bad writing when he sees it."

Then the word leaked out about our group authorship, and we were afraid that the public would lose interest in the book. But just the opposite. Bookstores ran out of copies. There was a third and then a fourth printing. We got letters from all over the world—even some propositions.

And what of the future? Well, this experience has opened up great possibilities for all of us. We are hoping to go to Hollywood to write the screenplay—perhaps portray our characters in the movie.

We are also thinking of forming a commune somewhere in the south of Spain, where we will collaborate on a new filthy novel—the story of 25 journalists who write a dirty book, and the consequences in all their private and public lives.

We're going to call it: "You Can't Go Home Again Naked."

'SMUT' AUTHOR GROUP' MEMBER TALKS

Pregnant Wife Inspires Chapter in Best-Seller

George Vecsey is one of the 25 newspaper men and women who wrote the best-selling novel "Naked Came the Stranger" under the assumed name of Penelope Ashe. Now a sports reporter for the New York Times, he tells of his own role in the project.

By GEORGE VECSEY
Written for Associated Press

It started three years ago. I had never written a dirty book. I had never even read a dirty book.

Then one day I reported for work at Newsday, in suburban Long Island, and found a memo from Mike McGrady, the cool columnist. He was inviting 24 co-workers to join the first group dirty novel. Write as badly as we could, he cautioned.

"Look at the garbage that gets printed," McGrady said.

"We can be as bad as they are. It's a massive put-down, a hoax."

I took the challenge home with me.

I sat at my typewriter, trying to find an inspiration. But I had a headache and flecks of dried paint were falling in my hair. My wife was scraping paint off a window frame above my head. We were busy renovating our crumbling old farmhouse.

"How can I be a serious writer, while you scrape paint?" I demanded.

THEN THE MUSIC struck. I would write a chapter about a typical suburban man who can no longer "communicate" with his wife because they are too busy renovating their old house.

"What are you chuckling about?" Marianne asked.

"I'm writing a chapter for a dirty book," I replied.

"Why don't you help me fix the house instead," she said.

I completed the masterpiece in two hours. The next day I gave it to McGrady. He said, "Great. Some guys wrote

GEORGE VECSEY
First 'Dirty Book'

too well and we had to turn their copy back for re-writing. But your stuff is just what we wanted."

Not sure how to take that, I asked what the others had written.

Bob Green, Newsday's stylish crime reporter, had written about a Mafia gangster. Bob Waters, a boxing writer who has been in the ring, wrote about a prize fighter. Harvey Aronson, the columnist about suburbia, wrote about a husband who can't get the courage to cheat on his wife. Jack Schwartz, another columnist, wrote about a rabbi. Jane Margold of the entertainment section wrote about a hippie couple. Bob Wiener, who reads pornography, wrote about a professional pornographer.

John Cummings, an ex-Marine, wrote about an ex-Marine. Other chapters were contributed by Bill Meltz, the editor; Bernie Bookbinder, the space authority; and Robert Maser, the gifted young columnist.

TIME PASSED. I moved on to The New York Times. My wife and I moved on to a newer, smaller house that doesn't need renovation.

Meanwhile McGrady's sister-in-law, Billie Young, posed as "Penelope Ashe" for us and Lyle Stuart, the publisher, purchased the book.

Finally the book arrived at my home. My wife grabbed it first.

"I want to see what you wrote," she said.

"Let me guess." She read for a few minutes, until she discovered a chapter about Morton Earbrow, the man with a paint-scraping wife.

"You fink," my wife said. "Here I am, expecting our third child and you make it sound like we don't 'communicate.'"

"Artistic license, my dear. Besides, we might make some money out of this. They're trying to sell the movie rights."

"Oh," she said. "That's better."

From what I understand, the same thing happened in the other households as wives discovered a seamy but lucrative side to their journalist-husbands.

OUR FIRST reviews came. Martin Levin in The New York Times gave Penelope only a "C" grade in "erotic fantasy."

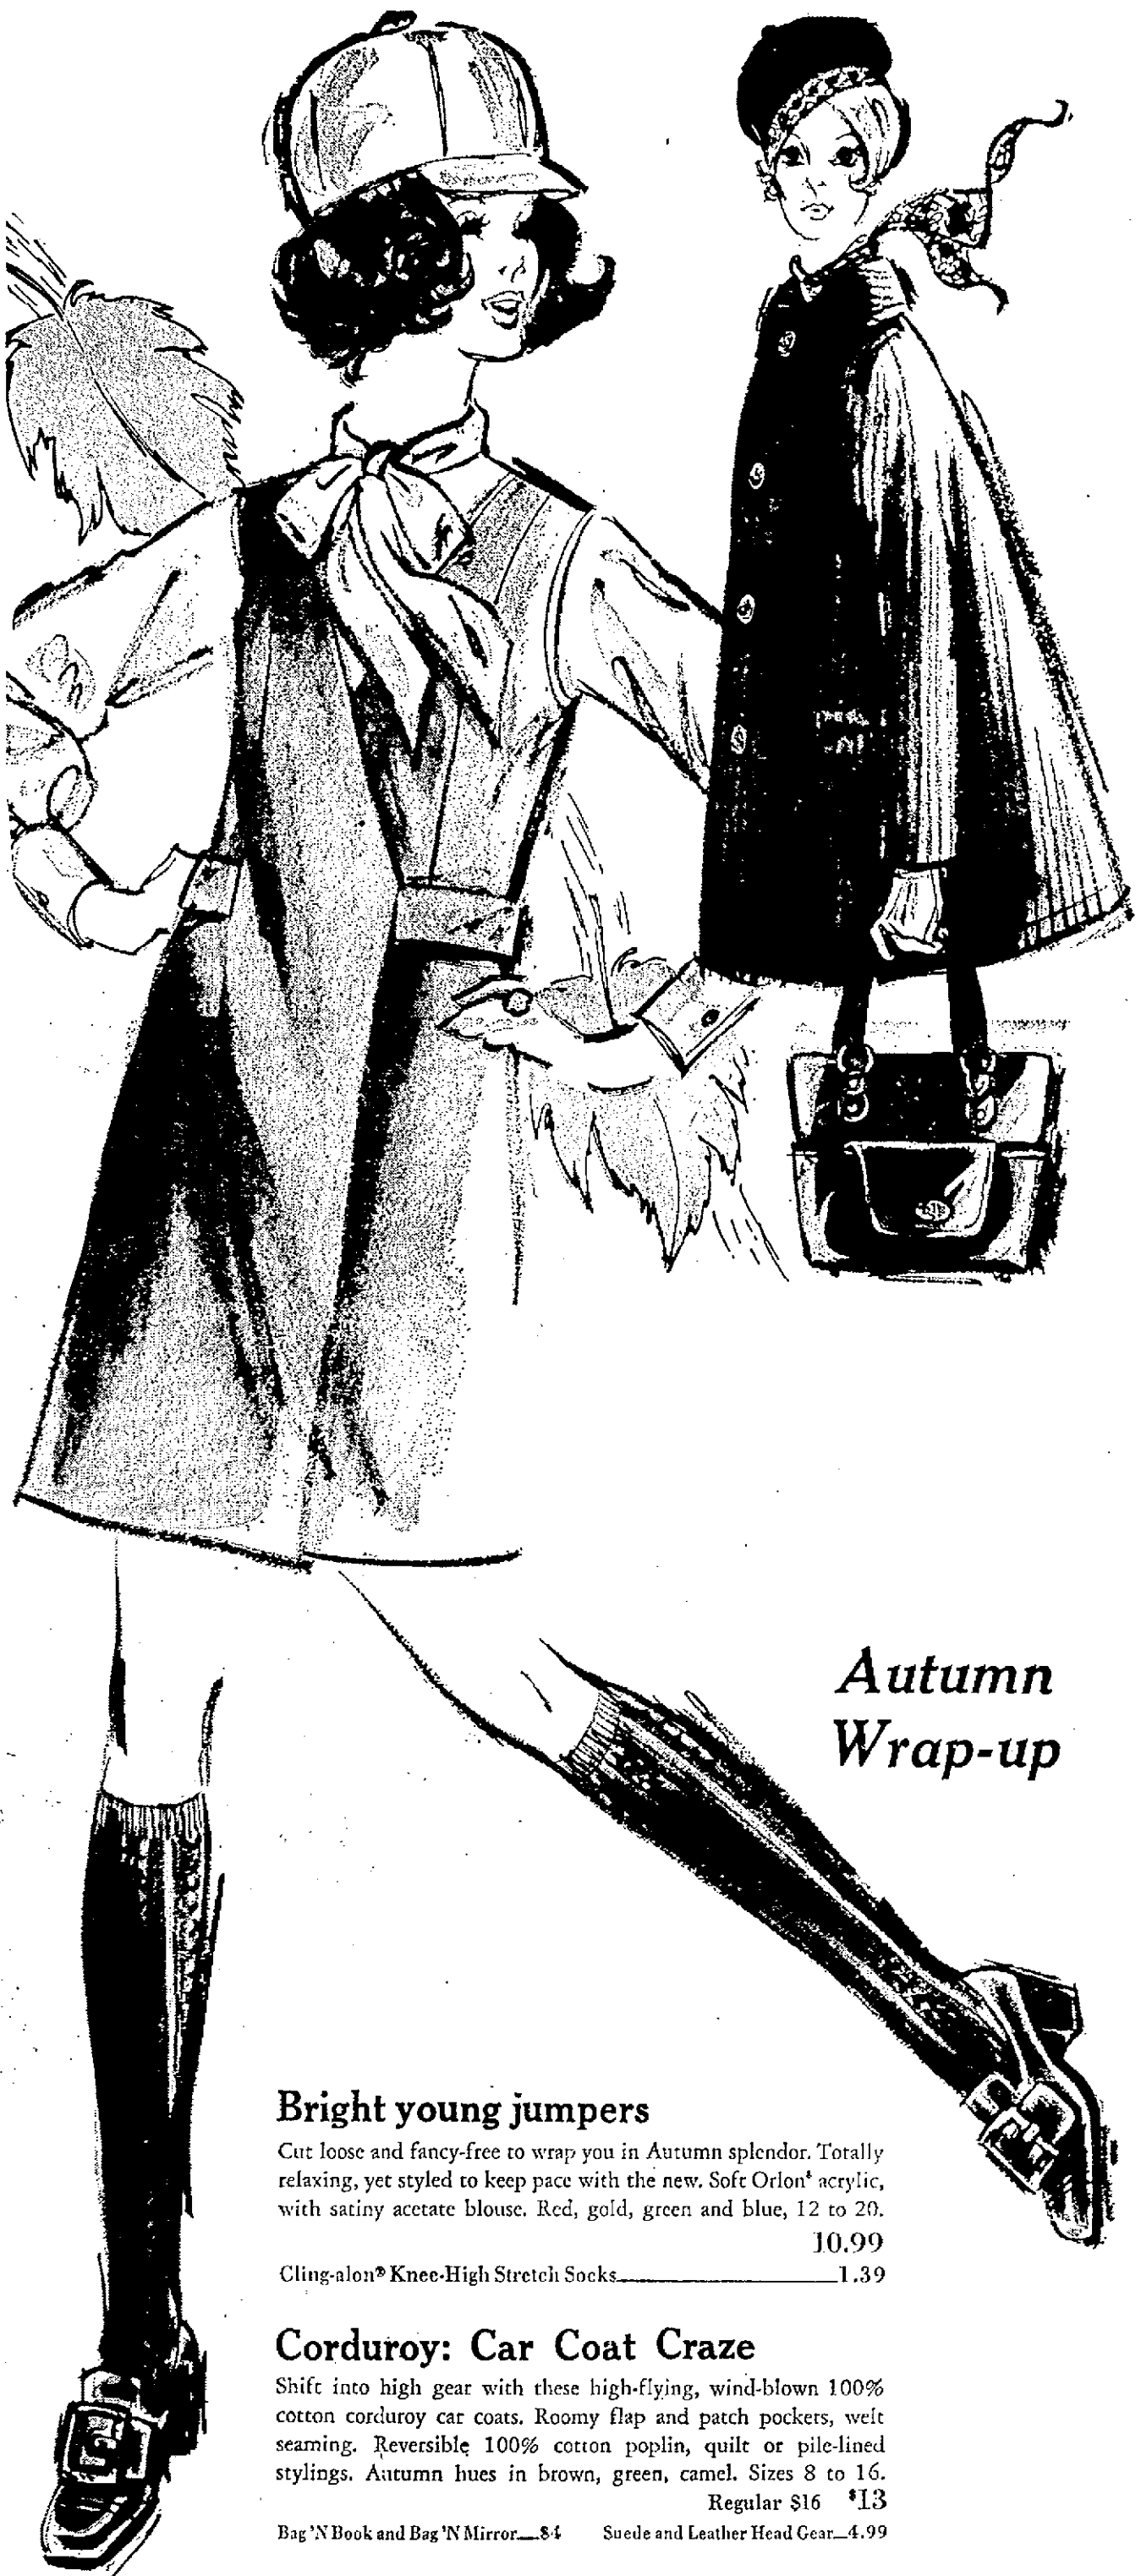

McGrady was philosophical. "The guy read the book," McGrady said. "He can tell bad writing when he sees it."

Then the word leaked out about our group authorship, and we were afraid that the public would lose interest in the book. But just the opposite. Bookstores ran out of copies. There was a third and then a fourth printing. We got letters from all over the world—even some propositions.

And what of the future? Well, this experience has opened up great possibilities for all of us. We are hoping to go to Hollywood to write the screenplay—perhaps portray our characters in the movie.

We are also thinking of forming a commune somewhere in the south of Spain, where we will collaborate on a new filthy novel—the story of 25 journalists who write a dirty book, and the consequences in all their private and public lives.

L.B.'s Four Solons Are Top Workers

By BOB SCHMIDT
From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — The "scorecard" for Long Beach's four legislators for this past session once again indicates that they are among the hardest working, most effective representatives in the Capitol.

All four — Sens. Joseph M. Kennick and George Deukmejian and Assemblyman James A. Hayes and Mike Cullen — served on key committees in the two houses. They introduced a total of 138 pieces of legislation, with 76, or 55 per cent, receiving legislative approval.

Gov. Reagan has until Sept. 7 to sign bills on his desk, but so far, he has placed his signature on 30 bills introduced by the Long Beach delegation.

The two Republicans, Deukmejian and Hayes, introduced the most legislation and will end up with the most bills signed into law by the GOP governor.

Deukmejian introduced 59 pieces of legislation, with 31 receiving legislative approval. Thirteen have so far been signed into law.

Hayes carried 43 measures, with 30 passing the two houses and 11 signed so far.

KENICK SPONSORED 17 items. Nine passed both houses and three have so far been signed.

Cullen introduced 19 measures, had six given legislative approval, and has had three signed so far by Reagan.

The governor only signs bills. Proposed constitutional amendments and resolutions do not go to his desk.

Simply comparing the number of measures introduced with the number signed by the governor is not an accurate gauge of a legislator's effectiveness. Not only do some types of legislation not go to the governor's desk, but others are merged into measures delaying with the same or a related subject and carried by another author, and some lead to important interim studies. As an illustration of how misleading the statistics can be, Sen. Donald L. Grunsky, R-Watsonville, will be able to list on his "scorecard" SB 252, the divorce reform bill.

Grunsky's bill passed the Senate, but when it reached the Assembly all of its language was removed and the language of AB 530, introduced by Hayes and approved by the lower house, was inserted. The bill which is now awaiting the governor's signature is substantially the same as AB 530, and bears very little resemblance to SB 252, but it carries the number SB 252 and Grunsky's name.

HAYES' DIVORCE reform bill was not the only important legislation the second-term assemblyman carried. He introduced a bill drastically revising the functions of the coroner's inquest jury, carried several measures protecting consumers involved with credit cards, and continued his campaign to tighten laws protecting adopted children.

Deukmejian carried Gov. Reagan's legislation enabling taxpayers to reduce next year's state tax bill by 10 per cent, and argued it through both houses despite considerable opposition.

He also introduced the bill adding a seventh judge to the Long Beach Municipal Court, and successfully carried a much-lauded bill enabling the Youth Authority to set up four pilot programs in California. The pilot programs will provide guidance, in the community, for youngsters who have already been in trouble and youngsters apparently heading for trouble.

Complementing legislation was carried by Kennick. His bill will permit county probation departments to provide guidance for youngsters displaying anti-social tendencies, even if they have not yet committed a crime.

The dean of the Long Beach delegation, Kennick continued his activity in legislation involving youth and senior citizens.

ONE OF CULLEN'S bills, already signed into law, may prove to be one of the most effective weapons against marijuana smoking by juveniles. It provides that a judge may suspend the driving license of a juvenile caught and convicted of having marijuana in his possession while driving a car.

He also closed an incredible loophole in the law which permitted a recipient of state aid to the blind to hold a valid driver's license, and closed another loophole which had made prosecution of Medi-Cal cheaters difficult.

In addition to carrying considerable legislation, the four sat on important committees which considered other bills. Cullen, the vice-chairman of the Commerce and Public Utilities Committee, also sat on the Governmental Organization and Health and Welfare Committees. He headed a governmental organizations subcommittee which did the main review on the governor's executive reorganization plans, and also served on the Joint Legislative Audit Committee.

Deukmejian had an incredibly busy year. He was chairman of the Elections Committee, and also served on the Judiciary, Labor and Social Welfare, Legislative Representation, and Revenue and Taxation Committees. He was a member of the California Council on Criminal Justice and headed one of its task forces, was named majority floor leader of the Senate in mid-session, and in his spare time began his campaign for state attorney general.

KENICK IS A member of the Senate Rules Committee, undoubtedly the most important committee in the upper house, and survived a mid-session upheaval in which three of the five members were ousted. He was vice-chairman of the Public Utilities and Corporations Committee, and also served on the Governmental Efficiency, Public Health and Safety, and Transportation Committees. In addition, he had to undergo numerous painful and worrisome treatments for an eye ailment which didn't begin clearing up until late in the session.

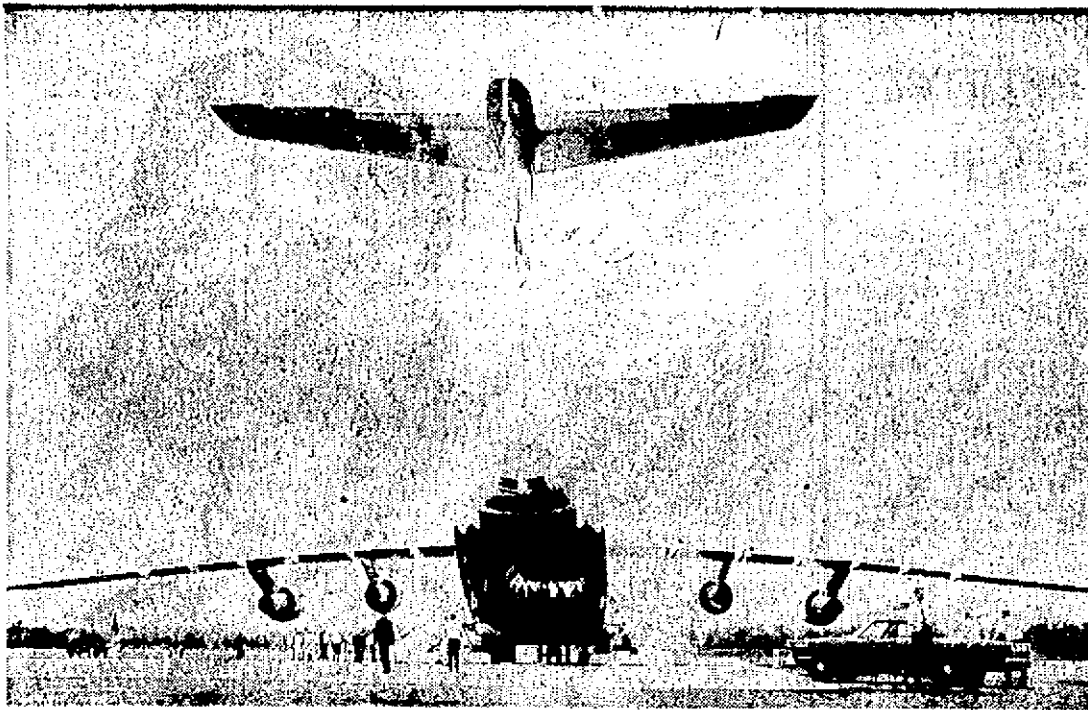

Hayes heads the Assembly Judiciary Committee, an assignment which also places him on the State Judicial Council. He also served on the Health and Welfare and Revenue and Taxation Committees, and was named to serve on the Select Committee on the Administration of Justice by Assembly Speaker Robert T. Monagan.

All four will return to Sacramento when the Legislature convenes Sept. 8 for a five-day session to consider bills Gov. Reagan votes this month. And from the end of that session until next Jan. 5, when the 1970 session commences, they will be taking part in interim hearings of their respective committees.

Sen. Philip Hart Daughter Wed

WASHINGTON — Miss Jane Cameron Hart, daughter of Michigan's Democratic Sen. Philip A. Hart, Saturday became the bride of Peter Sebastian Conserva, a schoolteacher.

The 20-year-old bride chose The Renaissance as the theme for the ceremony, which she wrote herself. It ended with the "kiss of peace" and featured readings from the Scripture by the couple's fathers and contemporary hymns played on guitars. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Lawrence Gallen in Holy Trinity Catholic Church.

Diplomat, Officer Attacked

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Soviet diplomat and a U. S. Air Force officer who stopped to help him were attacked by a group of young robbers shortly after midnight Saturday.

The officer, Lt. Col. Walter D. Brown, 55, was beaten on the head but managed to chase the attackers away. The diplomat, identified by police as Nikolai V. Zhilstov, a first secretary in the Russian Embassy's information section, told police the gang stole a $250 coat from him.

POLICE investigating the incident said Brown was walking to his home in northwest Washington at about midnight when he noticed a man, Zhilstov, peering under the hood of his car, obviously with car trouble.

He stopped and offered assistance, and five youngsters came along and demanded money. Brown fought them and Zhilstov ran, police said.

The police earlier had reported the two men were walking together near the park.

The colonel suffered minor head injuries and was treated at a hospital.

Gallup Poll Shows Adults Ignorant About Education

By M. A. FARBEN
New York Times Service

A Gallup survey of adult public opinion and knowledge of the public schools has concluded that the chief complaint against the schools is lack of discipline. The survey also indicated that the nation is about evenly divided in its unwillingness to pay more for the schools and that Americans are "ill-informed" about education itself.

Spokesmen for Gallup International said the survey, "based upon a representative sampling of all adults" in the country, was the "most extensive" on the subject by the polling organization.

The survey, directed by George Gallup for a non-profit educational group, also found that the teaching profession "has probably never been held in higher esteem" and that the public has accepted the right of teachers to join unions, but not to strike.

IT HELD THAT the public was so uninformed about educational innovation "and so lacking in objective ways of judging school achievement that little, if any, pressure is exerted by them to make improvement or is likely to be exerted until they are more knowledgeable in this area."

When the 1,505 adults who made up the sample of the general public were asked to appraise their knowledge of schools in their community, one in five (19 per cent) replied "quite a lot." At the other extreme, more than four in 10 (42 per cent) said they knew "very little."

The percentage claiming to know "quite a lot" was highest among parents of children now in the public schools — 27 per cent.

Fifty-seven per cent of the total sample said they did not know or could not

Delay Seen in Nixon Legislation Passage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1969 Congress now promises to be in session until the end of the year but apparently that will not be long enough to pass much of President Nixon's legislative program.

Nixon had submitted about 25 major new proposals to the Democratic-controlled Congress when it started its summer recess last week.

But Republican leaders could not guarantee to the President that a single one of these would be enacted this year although a few have a reasonable chance.

MANY APPEAR to be dead not only for the 1969 session but for the entire 91st Congress which runs through next year.

The major proposal which appears to have the best chance of enactment this year is tax reform.

The House passed a far-ranging bill earlier this month and the Senate Finance Committee has an intensive schedule for it starting Sept. 4, the day after the summer recess ends.

But the version drafted by the House Ways and Means Committee varies considerably from Administration recommendations, and more changes are in prospect in the Senate.

The President's most important recommendation to

Hardships Plagued Crash Investigation

Deputy Coroner Clyde King of Orange County is an airplane crash expert. He's so expert that Inyo County Coroner Don Talmage called on King when the "Gamblers Special" crash site was found 10 miles west of Lone Pine last week.

King, who has investigated hundreds of plane crashes in Orange County, was one of the first investigators at the snow-covered airliner's crash site three miles northeast of Mt. Whitney.

It was there that a DC-3, carrying 32 passengers and a three-man crew, crashed into a steep granite wall in one of the most rugged parts of the Sierra Nevada last Feb. 13.

The plane, which had carried its passengers to Hawthorne, Nev., for an evening of gambling was returning to Burbank and Long Beach in a heavy snowstorm.

Fourteen on the passenger list boarded the plane at Long Beach Airport.

"From an investigator's standpoint," King said on his return here Friday, "this crash was pretty much like any other."

"The big difference — and this was a big difference — was the conditions under which we had to work."

"In the first place we were working at just under 12,000 feet and, in that thin air, any exertion was heavy exertion."

The investigators — from the federal National Safety Transportation Board as well as the Inyo County Coroner's Office — were flown to the scene by helicopter. In fact, the first helicopter to reach the scene cracked up on its second trip, injuring Inyo County Sheriff Merrill Curtis.

"It's one thing to hike from the 3,000 foot level, which is where Lone Pine is, up to 12,000 feet," said the bespectacled King, who looks more like a college professor than a coroner's investigator. "But it's quite another to be flown up to that level."

"Hiking in you have a chance to adjust, at least somewhat, to the altitude. Flying in gives only a few minutes to make the adjustment."

King, assisted by a deputy coroner from Inyo County, had the job of getting the bodies out of the area with enough information that a six-man investigative team from the FBI could identify them.

Sierra weather kept working against the investigators. Heavy cloud layers kept building up every day shortly before noon, obscuring the scene and preventing the men from working.

Several of the five days they worked, storms battered the area and the investigators had to be brought out.

"The worst day was the second day we were in," King said. "The big Army helicopter came in with two smaller private ones to take us out as the storm clouds began building up."

"The smaller choppers each took two men and started off for Lone Pine. Five of us were waiting for the Army pilot to set down on the makeshift landing pad."

"We had run down the hundred or so yards from the base camp tent to be ready to get in as soon as he landed."

"While we waited it began to rain again. Hailstones were dropping all around when the chopper pilot decided not to set down. He took off for Lone Pine."

"We were all soaked to the skin. We ran back to the tent but there wasn't enough room. It was a two-man tent and, with the two security guards who were staying at the scene, there were seven men crowded into it."

"I was last, and there wasn't enough room for me inside, so I pulled a tarp over me and huddled outside. It was really a good thing I did."

"I looked up and saw the clouds lifting. If I hadn't seen it, the guys inside the tent probably wouldn't have. I yelled into them to radio Lone Pine Airport and ask for the chopper again."

"In a few minutes it showed up, landed and picked us up. Everybody at the airport was complaining about the 101 degree temperature when I arrived, but I didn't complain. My feet felt like they were frozen from walking around in the soft snow."

Eventually all the bodies were removed, although the investigators had to tear the fuselage of the airplane apart to get some of them out.

Gallup Poll Shows Hardships Plagued Crash Investigation

INDEPENDENT,
PRESS-TELEGRAM—A-17
Long Beach, Calif., Sun., Aug. 17, 1969

Adults Ignorant About Education

By M. A. FARBER
New York Times Service

A Gallup survey of adult public opinion and knowledge of the public schools has concluded that the chief complaint against the schools is lack of discipline. The survey also indicated that the nation is about evenly divided in its unwillingness to pay more for the schools and that Americans are "ill-informed" about education itself.

Spokesmen for Gallup International said the survey, "based upon a representative sampling of all adults" in the country, was the "most extensive" on the subject by the polling organization.

The survey, directed by George Gallup for a non-profit educational group, also found that the teaching profession "has probably never been held in higher esteem" and that the public has accepted the right of teachers to join unions, but not to strike.

IT HELD THAT the public was so uninformed about educational innovation "and so lacking in objective ways of judging school achievement that little, if any, pressure is exerted by them to make improvement or is likely to be exerted until they are more knowledgeable in this area."

When the 1,505 adults who made up the sample of the general public were asked to appraise their knowledge of schools in their community, one in five (19 per cent) replied "quite a lot." At the other extreme, more than four in 10 (42 per cent) said they knew "very little."

The percentage claiming to know "quite a lot" was highest among parents of children now in the public schools — 27 per cent.

Fifty-seven per cent of the total sample said they did not know or could not guess the cost to educate a child per year in their local schools. Thirty-three per cent did not know or could not guess the proportion of high school graduates who enroll in college; 30 per cent did not know or could not guess whether there were many high school dropouts.

THE ADULTS who did reply were not necessarily accurate in their responses.

According to the survey, the adults were least informed about "the kind of knowledge that has to do with curriculum and goals of education."

"But, significantly, it added, 'there is great interest in the very areas that school publicity presently neglects — the content of courses and the educational process vs. school operations.'"

The survey said that the public's comments on criteria for "good schools" revealed "a very low level of sophistication."

Cited most frequently as an element of "good schools" was "qualified teachers. Yet, the replies, the survey maintained, showed that "there is little understanding of what is meant by a 'qualified teacher.'"

Second in importance of judging "good schools" — by number of mentions — was "discipline." Third was schools' physical facilities.

When asked to name "the biggest problems with which the public schools in the community must deal," the greatest number of mentions went to "discipline." Second in order was lack of buildings and equipment and next were answers dealing with teachers, including shortages and lack of proper selection. Fourth was finances and fifth, "integration and segregation."

Deputy Coroner Clyde King of Orange County is an airplane crash expert.

He's so expert that Inyo County Coroner Don Talmage called on King when the "Gamblers Special" crash site was found 10 miles west of Lone Pine last week.

King, who has investigated hundreds of plane crashes in Orange County, was one of the first investigators at the snow-covered airliner's crash site three miles northeast of Mt. Whitney.

It was there that a DC-3, carrying 32 passengers and a three-man crew, crashed into a steep granite wall in one of the most rugged parts of the Sierra Nevada last Feb. 18.

The plane, which had carried its passengers to Hawthorne, Nev., for an evening of gambling was returning to Burbank and Long Beach in a heavy snowstorm.

Fourteen on the passenger list boarded the plane at Long Beach Airport.

"From an investigator's standpoint," King said on his return here Friday, "this crash was pretty much like any other."

"The big difference — and this was a big difference — was the conditions under which we had to work."

"In the first place we were working at just under 12,000 feet and, in that thin air, any exertion was heavy exertion."

The investigators — from the federal National Safety Transportation Board as well as the Inyo County Coroner's Office — were flown to the scene by helicopter. In fact, the first helicopter to reach the scene cracked up on its second trip, injuring Inyo County Sheriff Merrill Curtis.

"It's one thing to hike from the 3,000 foot level, which is where Lone Pine is, up to 12,000 feet," said the bespectacled King, who looks more like a college professor than a coroner's investigator. "But it's quite another to be flown up to that level."

"Hiking in you have a chance to adjust, at least somewhat, to the altitude. Flying in gives only a few minutes to make the adjustment."

King, assisted by a deputy coroner from Inyo County, had the job of getting the bodies out of the area with enough information that a six-man investigative team from the FBI could identify them.

Sierra weather kept working against the investigators. Heavy cloud layers kept building up every day shortly before noon, obscuring the scene and preventing the men from working.

Several of the five days they worked, storms battered the area and the investigators had to be brought out.

"The worst day was the second day we were in," King said. "The big Army helicopter came in with two smaller private ones to take us out as the storm clouds began building up."

"The smaller choppers each took two men and started off for Lone Pine. Five of us were waiting for the Army pilot to set down on the makeshift landing pad."

"We had run down the hundred or so yards from the base camp tent to be ready to get in as soon as he landed."

"While we waited it began to rain again. Hailstones were dropping all around when the chopper pilot decided not to set down. He took off for Lone Pine."

"We were all soaked to the skin. We ran back to the tent but there wasn't enough room. It was a two-man tent and, with the two security guards who were staying at the scene, there were seven men crowded into it."

"I was last, and there wasn't enough room for me inside, so I pulled a tarp over me and huddled outside. It was really a good thing I did."

"I looked up and saw the clouds lifting. If I hadn't seen it, the guys inside the tent probably wouldn't have. I yelled into them to radio Lone Pine Airport and ask for the chopper again."

"In a few minutes it showed up, landed and picked us up. Everybody at the airport was complaining about the 104 degree temperature when I arrived, but I didn't complain. My feet felt like they were frozen from walking around in the soft snow."

Eventually all the bodies were removed, although the investigators had to tear the fuselage of the airplane apart to get some of them out.

Delay Seen in Nixon Legislation Passage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 1969 Congress now promises to be in session until the end of the year but apparently that will not be long enough to pass much of President Nixon's legislative program.

Nixon had submitted about 25 major new proposals to the Democratic-controlled Congress when it started its summer recess last week.

But Republican leaders could not guarantee to the President that a single one of these would be enacted this year although a few have a reasonable chance.

MANY APPEAR to be dead not only for the 1969 session but for the entire 91st Congress which runs through next year.

The major proposal which appears to have the best chance of enactment this year is tax reform.

The House passed a far-ranging bill earlier this month and the Senate Finance Committee has an intensive schedule for it starting Sept. 4, the day after the summer recess ends.

But the version drafted by the House Ways and Means Committee varies considerably from Administration recommendations, and more changes are in prospect in the Senate.

The President's most important recommendation to Congress probably is the far-reaching welfare reform plan which he outlined in a speech Aug. 8.

There is no chance for final action on this in 1969, but the Administration was reconciled to this in advance.

Other Nixon proposals on which action is highly unlikely this year include:

A 7 per cent increase in social security benefits.

Creation of a self-sustaining corporation to take over the postal system.

A penny increase in the letter stamp to 7 cents.

Revision of the draft laws to establish a lottery system.

Tax credits to encourage industry to hire the hard-core unemployed.

A broad mass transit development system.

Revenue-sharing with the states and cities.

Authority for the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission to bring civil enforcement suits.

A revision of the Electoral College system.

In some cases, Democrats say they agree with the President's objectives but complain that his recommendations are timid.

This is the case in the fields of mass transit, enforcement of equal opportunity in employment, and electoral reform.

In a few areas other than tax-law revision, there are fair prospects for Nixon recommendations.

One of these is coal mine safety. The Senate may pass a bill in September.

ANOTHER is hunger and malnutrition. There is strong sentiment for measures to combat these.

Other Nixon items may get attention in the final four months of the session but this is uncertain.

In this category are his anticrime proposals, airways development, drug abuse, antiobscenity and job safety.

Philanthropist Dies at Oakland

OAKLAND (AP) — Irving H. Kahn, 79, long prominent here as a merchant, philanthropist and city planner, died at Mount Zion Hospital Friday following a heart attack.

The Kahn Foundation, of which he was president, helped create the East Bay Regional Park System and donated $125,000 to establish the Oakland Art Museum's Kahn collection of 19th century western art.

Attorney Says AF Using Mentally Disturbed Guards

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The Air Force has maintained at least three men with dangerous psychiatric problems to guard a super-secret nuclear weapons base 25 miles from here.

The instability of the guards was revealed in the record of the preliminary hearing for Sgt. Robert V. Ballou, 22, Corvallis, Ore., who was accused of going berserk with a loaded carbine at Hamilton Air Force Base.

"It scares the hell out of me," said Ballou's civilian attorney, Robert R. Carrow, former mayor of nearby Novato. "It's like Dr. Strangelove."

However, Master Sgt. William M. Leopold testified at the hearing that he was supervisor of the base's nuclear weapons arsenal and that accidental detonation of the weapons is impossible. The testimony was the first public disclosure that nuclear weapons are stocked at the base.

After the hearing Air Force spokesman at Hamilton refused comment.

LEOPOLD was called as a witness to counter a statement by Maj. Donald H. Tidwell, 37, who was Ballou's commanding officer. Under cross-examination, Tidwell had said accidental explosion was a possibility.

Tidwell, who is a security officer and not a nuclear specialist, said he had received unfavorable psychiatric evaluations of three of his men, including Ballou, but did not relieve them of their sensitive duties for lack of replacements.

Without guards, Tidwell said "people from the Haight-Ashbury" would try to get at the weapons.

A psychiatrist testified Ballou had been diagnosed as a "passive-aggressive personality," specifically proscribed by regulations, last May 20. Tidwell was informed at the time but concluded Ballou was only a "goldbricker."

In Ballou's case, Tidwell said he had not utilized the human reliability program, and in-depth interview of prospective personnel and their records.

TWO OTHER nuclear guards at Hamilton with records of instability were mentioned in the hearings which first were revealed by the San Rafael Independent Journal on Friday.

One of the guards is now in a psychiatric ward and the other has been discharged.

According to testimony, Ballou asked another sergeant Aug. 2 to take him to his barracks because he was sick. On the way in a truck, Ballou was said to have held a loaded carbine to the sergeant's head and to have taken and cocked his pistol.

Assistance arrived and Ballou was disarmed and put in the stockade.

His attorney said he would ask the Air Force to put him in a hospital instead. A hearing officer is expected to make a recommendation next week to the commanding officer as to whether Ballou should be court-martialed.

LEBEC (UPI) — Morio Shimabukuro, 38, Gardena, was killed and six other persons injured when the car they were in went out of control and overturned three times on Interstate 5 Highway near here early Saturday morning.

The victim was dead on arrival at Kern General Hospital. His wife Elsie, 39, David Arakawa, 41, Los Angeles, and Laureen Arakawa, 14, were injured.

here Spahn Ranch and said they took 30 persons into custody for investigation of grand auto theft, illegal possession of firearms and possession of marijuana.

FOURTEEN arrested were men, 15 women, and one was a boy. The youth and four infants were turned over the juvenile authorities.

Officers said the group lived there on the old movie lot communally, apparently without knowledge of the owner, 89-year-old millionaire George Spahn, a semi-invalid.

On the premises, officers said they found 10 stripped-down Volkswagens — apparently in the process of being converted into dune buggies.

THE ARRESTED were associated with the Santa's Slaves Motorcycle Club, officers said. A cache of seven rifles, a 45-caliber automatic, a 9 millimeter machine gun and supplies of ammunition were confiscated, deputies said.

The Spahn ranch is in the northern-most portion of the San Fernando Valley in suburban Los Angeles.

WEEPS RESIN Wood Cross Mystery Puzzles South Africa

By C. MacDERMOTT
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — A wooden cross brought to South Africa more than 50 years ago has mystified forestry experts by weeping resin on every anniversary of the bloody battle it commemorates.
The cross comes from Delville Wood in pastoral France, where a murderous battle took place on July 13, 1916. In four days of terrible fighting, the 2nd South African Infantry Brigade was virtually wiped out by the Germans. The men were expendable pawns of World War I. In those four days of fighting so fierce that trees were felled by machine gun fire, the strength of the second brigade was cut from 121 officers and 3,332 men to 143 officers and men left to fight. There were also 607 wounded, dragged out of the wood alive.
NOW THE NAME Delville-Wood is ingrained in

Industries Experiment With Non-Gasoline Cars

By BILL MULLINS
TULSA (UPI) — The petroleum industry — though it probably won't have to contend with an electric car — faces the possibility that efficient cars will be developed in the next decade that run on something besides gasoline.
Several industries are experimenting with such methods of powering cars as liquefied natural gas and steam.
The government's main experiment involves a contract awarded to the Thermo Electron Corp. of Waltham, Mass., by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.
The experiment is intended to develop a steam engine for automobiles that will meet future air pollution standards and provide performance equivalent to that of current internal combustion engines.
General Motors also is trying out different kinds of engines, including two steam engines.
But GM emphasized both engines are experimental, do not contain any breakthroughs in steam technology and are not suitable for mass production.
Even if no firm builds an efficient steam engine, another segment of the petroleum industry may be challenging the conventional gasoline engine.
The experimenting with cars powered by liquefied natural gas has gone far enough that San Diego Gas and Electric Co. operated several company vehicles with it.
The California firm also conducted a 50,000 mile test run with such a car and reported dramatic reductions in air pollution are possible.
After 42,000 miles, the car was releasing unburned hydrocarbons into the air at a rate of 93 parts per million.

Mrs. Jane Andre, an $18,000-a-year engineering supervisor at the General Dynamics plant in Pomona tells newsmen that she has been dismissed for proposing a "bra-less Friday" for the 2,200 women at the plant. WEEPS RESIN

Wood Cross Mystery Puzzles South Africa

By C. MacDERMOTT

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — A wooden cross brought to South Africa more than 50 years ago has mystified forestry experts by weeping resin on every anniversary of the bloody battle it commemorates.

The cross comes from Delville Wood in pastoral France, where a murderous battle took place on July 13, 1916. In four days of terrible fighting, the 2nd South African Infantry Brigade was virtually wiped out by the Germans. The men were expendable pawns of World War I. In those four days of fighting so fierce that trees were felled by machine gun fire, the strength of the second brigade was cut from 121 officers and 3,032 men to 143 officers and men left to fight. There were also 607 wounded, dragged out of the wood alive.

NOW THE NAME Delville-Wood is ingrained in South African history. Every year thousands of South Africans pay homage to their countrymen who died in the battle.

The roughly-hewn cross, of wood cut from the battle scene after the war, stands in a memorial garden in Pietermaritzburg, the small capital of Natal province.

Every year in July, resin starts flowing from the two ends of the cross-bar, the places where Christ's hands were nailed to the cross on which he was crucified. By July 16, the anniversary of the battle, the resin is dripping to the ground.

Each August around this time, the cross is cleaned and all the resin removed, but the following year the bleeding begins again.

FORESTRY EXPERTS in Pietermaritzburg cannot explain why this happens, they just know it does.

Henry Haigh, research officer in the Department of Forestry, said the only explanation he could offer was that the wood was so resinous that it had not finished exuding resin, even after 50 years.

"But it is very rare, even for slow-grown resinous wood to seep for more than two years," he said.

Experts from Natal University's faculty of agriculture are also puzzled. They said trees normally dry up within a few months of being cut. Further seepage of resin might occur because of heat, but July is one of the coldest months in Pietermaritzburg.

Industries Experiment With Non-Gasoline Cars

By BILL MULLINS

TULSA (UPI) — The petroleum industry — though it probably won't have to contend with an electric car — faces the possibility that efficient cars will be developed in the next decade that run on something besides gasoline.

Several industries are experimenting with such methods of powering cars as liquified natural gas and steam.

The government's main experiment involves a contract awarded to the Thermo Electron Corp. of Waltham, Mass., by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

tion and Welfare.

The experiment is intended to develop a steam engine for automobiles that will meet future air pollution standards and provide performance equivalent to that of current internal combustion engines.

General Motors also is trying out different kinds of engines, including two steam engines.

But GM emphasized both engines are experimental, do not contain any breakthroughs in steam technology and are not suitable for mass production.

Even if no firm builds an efficient steam engine, another segment of the petroleum industry may be challenging the conventional gasoline engine.

The experimenting with cars powered by liquified natural gas has gone far enough that San Diego Gas and Electric Co. operated several company vehicles with it.

The California firm also

conducted a 50,000 mile test run with such a car and reported dramatic reductions in air pollution are possible.

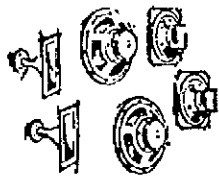

After 42,000 miles, the car was releasing unburned hydrocarbons into the air at a rate of 93 parts per million.

Famed Psychiatrist Sketches Profile of 'Phantom Rapist'

Dr. James A. Brussel, assistant commissioner of mental hygiene for New York, has won acclaim for describing New York's "Mad Bomber" and the "Boston Strangler" before they were caught.

These are two examples of Dr. Brussel's ability to study a crime committed by someone obviously psychotic or insane and from it construct a word picture of the criminal—his nature and his appearance and personal idiosyncrasies, and in some instances the personalities of members of his family.

Recently, passages from "The Mad Bomber," taken from Dr. Brussel's "Casebook of a Crime Psychiatrist," were quoted by the defense in the Sirhan Sirhan trial in Los Angeles.

Dr. Brussel provides a profile of the Long Beach area's "Phantom Rapist." The psychiatrist was chief of neuropsychiatric service at Ft. Dix, N.J., in World War II and the Army neuropsychiatric center in the Korean War.

"... He is not sociable or social, but as a paranoid he is polite, well-mannered, and if you say 'hello' to him he will respond similarly and add a smile to show his superiority..."

From these words emerge a "Profile of the Phantom Killer Rapist," developed by the brilliant and renowned crime psychiatrist, Dr. James A. Brussel of New York City.

At the request of the Independent Press-Telegram and in co-operation with the Long Beach police, Dr. Brussel has done a thorough analytical study of the man who is now believed to have added murder to his long list of crimes.

The "Phantom Rapist" who has terrorized women—ages 15 to 75—in the Long Beach-Lakewood area since Jan. 1, has now been linked to the brutal murder of 50-year-old Rose Hableson Parker.

Mrs. Parker, a registered nurse at Memorial Hospital, was found murdered in her modest home at 4306 Arbor Rd., where she lived alone, on July 21.

Veteran police investigators theorize the sexually motivated slayer may have intentionally killed Mrs. Parker by stuffing a gag in her mouth and tying a pillow case tightly around her head and face. Her hands were bound in front of her.

The coroner's office attributed Mrs. Parker's death to asphyxiation due to suffocation.

The Phantom has killed once; will he kill again?

Says Dr. Brussel on multiple sex crimes:

"... Many of these are 'bunched' within a few months or a year or two and then stop. In other words, the seething unconscious drive for revenge breaks through the conscience's resistance and is given full rein until satisfied. Examples are Jack the Ripper, England's Nude Murders, and the current multiple murders in and around Hackensack, N.J."

On his habits:
"... He is not married; he is fundamentally a loner—no friends of either sex..."

On stealing from his victims:

"... Unlike a psychopath, he doesn't become infuriated when he finds nothing more than 50 cents or a couple of dollars. The thorough rifling of a purse, however, indicates a symbolic search for something taken from him—as a child—or looking for something he never had and very much wants, i.e., love. Certainly, the prime motive is not theft. He seems to have no urgent need for money (car, dressed in a suit, fine prescription sunglasses, a cigarette lighter, etc.). At least in one case he did not remove the victim's gold wristwatch. He took nothing other than money..."

Concerning neighborhoods where the Phantom operates:

"... These are selected with paranoid deliberateness. In these communities the crime rate is low and, therefore, not more than routinely patrolled (probably by a patrol car rather than a patrolman on foot) which the suspect probably checked and timed. There is no risk of extra or surprise details. Residents, too, would not 'expect' a criminal—certainly not this type of felon..."

On his victims:

"... 'Average, middle class' suggests his mother's background and, quite probably, his own. It is obvious that a man who is a paranoid cases his victims and selects those he believes live alone or, if they don't, can be reached without arousing others in the house."

"The ages ranging from 15 to 75 bring to mind Albert DeSalvo, the 'Boston Strangler' whose victims also ranged from youth to senility. This suggests a mother hatred because he was either rejected as a child or was deprived of mother love (her premature death, divorce, etc.). Older women symbolically stand for mother. Younger women indicate rejection by the female sex of the suspect from his puberty on—probably due to his failure to achieve psychosexual maturity. This inferiority he projects, making it women who reject him."

"His crimes are symbolic attempts to prove he is a man—even a 'gentleman' (his frequent solicitation of his victim's appreciation of his love-making, his gentleness, etc.). There is one possible other factor that suggests an organic reason for his feeling of inferiority, why he doesn't seek out women companions, his feeling of inadequacy in the company of men, and his insatiable drive to 'prove' his manhood..."

On trying his victim's hands:
"... The tied hands are not merely to nullify resistance—they signify his power to render all women impotent, helpless. The tied hands may also symbolize the hands of a mother who struck him as a child, and now those hands are immobilized..."

On his personality:

"... He is a cautious planner, precise, cool, prepared for any emergency, even carrying a knife in case he is interrupted. He leaves shoes (sneakers as one person testified) out doors to avoid footprints, wears cotton gloves (no fingerprints), is neat in his work (opening locks, screens, doors) in his appearance (no body odor, washes after sexual assaults), is clean shaven, apparently keeps nails and hair well groomed (one witness described barbered hair)."

"The paranoid is neat but not ostentatious. Thus, no facial adornments (mustache, beard, etc.), no face lotion or body cologne, etc. He follows a set routine—hence the almost invariable method of operation..."

On his build, age, etc:
"... (Victim's name withheld) described the paranoid's body habitus as 'athletic.' This does not necessarily mean the paranoid is a muscular bruiser; it does mean that perpendicular and lateral development are well-proportioned. However, in this case, the suspect must be athletic to do what he did. In addition, two witnesses describe suspect as 6 feet, 4 inches, 250 pounds..."

"He hurried the fence like an athlete, etc."

"The dark hair rules out the blond, Nordic type. He is a white male in excellent physical shape, and since paranoid activity reaches its zenith—generally—by the middle 30s, he is certainly no older than that."

"His penchant for tying hands, wrapping a towel around a neck, etc., suggests a Mediterranean background—Italy, Spain, France, etc. His unaccented speech and other features point to a man born in the United States. The one time he affected a Mexican accent and the story he told one woman about losing his wife and child in a revolution suggests possible personal knowledge of Central and/or South America and the Caribbean. Incidentally, if his knots point to the sea, he could be a merchant marine officer."

"His speech is without profanity or accent. Grammar and rhetoric are impeccable. He has the superficial approach in his talk of a soft-spoken, suave, solicitous lover (on one or two occasions he did speak 'roughly' or 'harshly,' but only as a threat). These features indicate at least middle-class, genteel origin, and education of high school level, possibly some college or post-high school training institution (vocational, marine academy, etc.). He is highly intelligent and capable of holding a job, even a responsible one, a long time."

"His constantly repeated queries, 'Isn't this good?', 'Isn't this nice?', point to the (unconscious) childish desire to be accepted by women."

"His skilled use of tools (means of gaining entrance to residences) hints at mechanical aptitude, training, or work."

"As a paranoid he is devoid of bad habits (although it seems he does smoke); no drugs, no hard liquor. He apparently drinks beer (obviously not very much) and this light alcoholic content is enough to give him Dutch courage and rules out alcoholism (he certainly is clear-headed at all times)."

"The use of ether does not imply medical knowledge, although he could be a hospital worker—even a nurse—or has the average layman's knowledge of ether as an anesthetic. Incidentally, ether is popular in South America as a stimulant (the so-called 'first-stage' of ether inhalation) and intoxicant. He could have observed this in Central or South America."

"His religion is obviously Christian. There is nothing to indicate he is a Jew, Moslem, etc."

"His build and agility ('he hurdled, etc.') suggests athletics when he was in school."

"Further evidence of his immaturity is his 'amateurishness in sex' and 'sex was brief.' Finally, I would be surprised if he has a record; that is, before these felonies there were no crimes."

Diagnoses:
"The felonies are, of course, psychopathic acts. However, I feel the symbolism, the introversion, the lack of other criminal manifestations (ruthlessness, beating of victims, mishandling, etc.), the solicitation, gentle interest, the failure to steal other valuables, the schizoid personality, and the ritualism, point to a diagnosis of schizophrenia, paranoid type."

"So far as mental competence is concerned, however, this man knows what he is doing, knows that society disapproves of his crimes, and knows what the law, religion, and mores think of him and their conceptions of right and wrong. He can stand trial and plead his defense..."

Dr. Brussel also went on to suggest that a pair of prescription sunglasses (safety glasses) now in the hands of the police that were found at a crime scene, perhaps may be the very clue that will lead to

Brazilian Death Squad Kills Two

VITORIA, Brazil (AP)—The charred corpses of two more victims of the Death Squad were dug up at a beach near Vitoria in eastern Brazil and the police official in charge of the area was arrested, authorities said Saturday.

Police said the remains of two suspected criminals bring to 11 the number of bodies dug up near Vitoria, capital of Espirito Santo State.

The Death Squad is made up of policemen who have sought to lower Brazil's crime rate by executing criminals on their own.

the Phantom's identification.

He said an optician could provide the prescription of the lens and police could then possibly trace them to the optician who ground them. He pointed out that a pair of glasses found in a Chicago dump cracked the infamous "Leopold-Loeb Case" of the 1920s.

Another possibility he suggests is tracing a van-type, light green Chevrolet, 1965 or 1966 model, seen in the vicinity of some of the attacks.

Anyone who might have information as a result of Dr. Brussel's "Profile of a Phantom" is asked to contact Long Beach police or the Major Crimes Unit of the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Office.

He leaves shoes (sneakers as one person testified) outdoors to avoid footprints, wears cotton gloves (no fingerprints), is neat in his work (opening locks, screens, doors) in his appearance (no body odor, washes after sexual assaults), is clean shaven, apparently keeps nails and hair well groomed (one witness described barbered hair)."

"The paranoid is neat but not ostentatious. Thus, no facial adornments (mustache, beard, etc.), no face lotion or body cologne, etc. He follows a set routine—hence the almost invariable method of operation..."

On his build, age, etc:

"... (Victim's name withheld) described the paranoid's body habitus as 'athletic.' This does not necessarily mean the paranoid is a muscular bruiser; it does mean that perpendicular and lateral development are well-proportioned. However, in this case, the suspect must be athletic to do what he did. In addition, two witnesses describe suspect as '6 feet, 4 inches, 250 pounds...'; he hurled the fence like an athlete, etc."

"The dark hair rules out the blond, Nordic type. He is a white male in excellent physical shape, and since paranoid activity reaches its zenith—generally—by the middle 30s, he is certainly no older than that."

"His penchant for tying hands, wrapping a towel around a neck, etc., suggests a Mediterranean background—Italy, Spain, France, etc. His unaccented speech and other features point to a man born in the United States. The one time he affected a Mexican accent and the story he told one woman about losing his wife and child in a revolution suggests possible personal knowledge of Central and/or South America and the Caribbean. Incidentally, if his knots point to the sea, he could be a merchant marine officer."

"His speech is without profanity or accent. Grammar and rhetoric are impeccable. He has the superficial approach in his talk of a soft-spoken, suave, solicitous lover (on one or two occasions he did speak 'roughly' or 'harshly,' but only as a threat). These features indicate at least middle-class, genteel origin, and education of high school level, possibly some college or post-high school training institution (vocational, marine academy, etc.). He is highly intelligent and capable of holding a job, even a responsible one, a long time."

"His constantly repeated queries, 'Isn't this good?', 'Isn't this nice?', point to the (unconscious) childish desire to be accepted by women."

"His skilled use of tools (means of gaining entrance to residences) hints at mechanical aptitude, training, or work."

"As a paranoid he is devoid of bad habits (although it seems he does smoke); no drugs, no hard liquor. He apparently drinks beer (obviously not very much) and this light alcoholic content is enough to give him Dutch courage and rules out alcoholism (he certainly is clear-headed at all times)."

"The use of ether does not imply medical knowledge, although he could be a hospital worker—even a nurse—or has the average layman's knowledge of ether as an anesthetic. Incidentally, ether is popular in South America as a stimulant (the so-called 'first-stage' of ether inhalation) and intoxicant. He could have observed this in Central or South America."

"His religion is obviously Christian. There is nothing to indicate he is a Jew, Moslem, etc."

"His build and agility ('he hurled, etc.') suggests athletics when he was in school."

"Further evidence of his immaturity is his 'amateurism in sex' and 'sex was brief.' Finally, I would be surprised if he has a record; that is, before these felonies there were no crimes."

Diagnoses:

"The felonies are, of course, psychopathic acts. However, I feel the symbolism, the introversion, the lack of other criminal manifestations (ruthlessness, beating of victims, mishandling, etc.), the solicitous, gentle interest, the failure to steal other valuables, the schizoid personality, and the ritualism, point to a diagnosis of schizophrenia, paranoid type."

"So far as mental competence is concerned, however, this man knows what he is doing, knows that society disapproves of his crimes, and knows what the law, religion, and mores think of him and their conceptions of right and wrong. He can stand trial and plead his defense..."

Dr. Brussel also went on to suggest that a pair of prescription sunglasses (safety glasses) now in the hands of the police that were found at a crime scene, perhaps may be the very clue that will lead to

Brazilian Death Squad Kills Two

VITORIA, Brazil (AP) — The charred corpses of two more victims of the Death Squad were dug up at a beach near Vitoria in eastern Brazil and the police official in charge of the area was arrested, authorities said Saturday.

Police said the remains of two suspected criminals bring to 11 the number of bodies dug up near Vitoria, capital of Espirito Santo State.

The Death Squad is made up of policemen who have sought to lower Brazil's crime rate by executing criminals on their own.

the Phantom's identification.

He said an optician could provide the prescription of the lens and police could then possibly trace them to the optician who ground them. He pointed out that a pair of glasses found in a Chicago dump cracked the infamous "Leopold-Loeb Case" of the 1920s.

Another possibility he suggests is tracing a van-type, light green Chevrolet, 1965 or 1966 model, seen in the vicinity of some of the attacks.

Anyone who might have information as a result of Dr. Brussel's "Profile of a Phantom" is asked to contact Long Beach police or the Major Crimes Unit of the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Office.

Russ Aides, Miffed by Nixon Visit, Expected to Snub Romanian Liberation Fete

INDEPENDENT
Long Beach Call, S.N., Aug. 17, 1969

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet leaders, still annoyed over President Nixon's visit to Romania, are expected to snub the 25th anniversary celebration of Romania's liberation Saturday, by sending a second rank delegation to the festivities.

For the second time this month the Kremlin's leading troika — party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev, Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and President Nikolai V. Podgorny will personally stay away from a key event in Bucharest which, if relations had been normally friendly, they would have attended.

No member of the ruling troika was included in the delegation to the 10th Romanian Party Congress Aug. 6, two days after Nixon's triumphal visit. Brezhnev had attended the 9th Romanian Congress in 1965 and all other congresses of allied ruling Communist parties since he succeeded Nikita S. Khrushchev as first Communist Party secretary in October 1964.

The heads of other East

European ruling Communist parties followed the Soviet example and also boycotted the Romanian Party Congress.

The Russians originally showed their displeasure at Nixon's surprise visit to Romania by canceling a visit to Bucharest scheduled for July 14 at which the Soviet leaders were to have signed a 20-year friendship pact with Romania.

Time alone will assuage the Soviet anger at Romania's failure to coordinate its foreign policy with the Soviet Union. The Romanians are hopeful that the Soviet leaders will go to Bucharest sometime before the end of the year to sign the friendship treaty.

Aug. 23 will be a red letter day in the history of the present Romanian regime. It was the day when the parties then in opposition to dictator Marshal Ion Antonescu, including the underground Communist Party, staged a successful palace revolution and seized power.

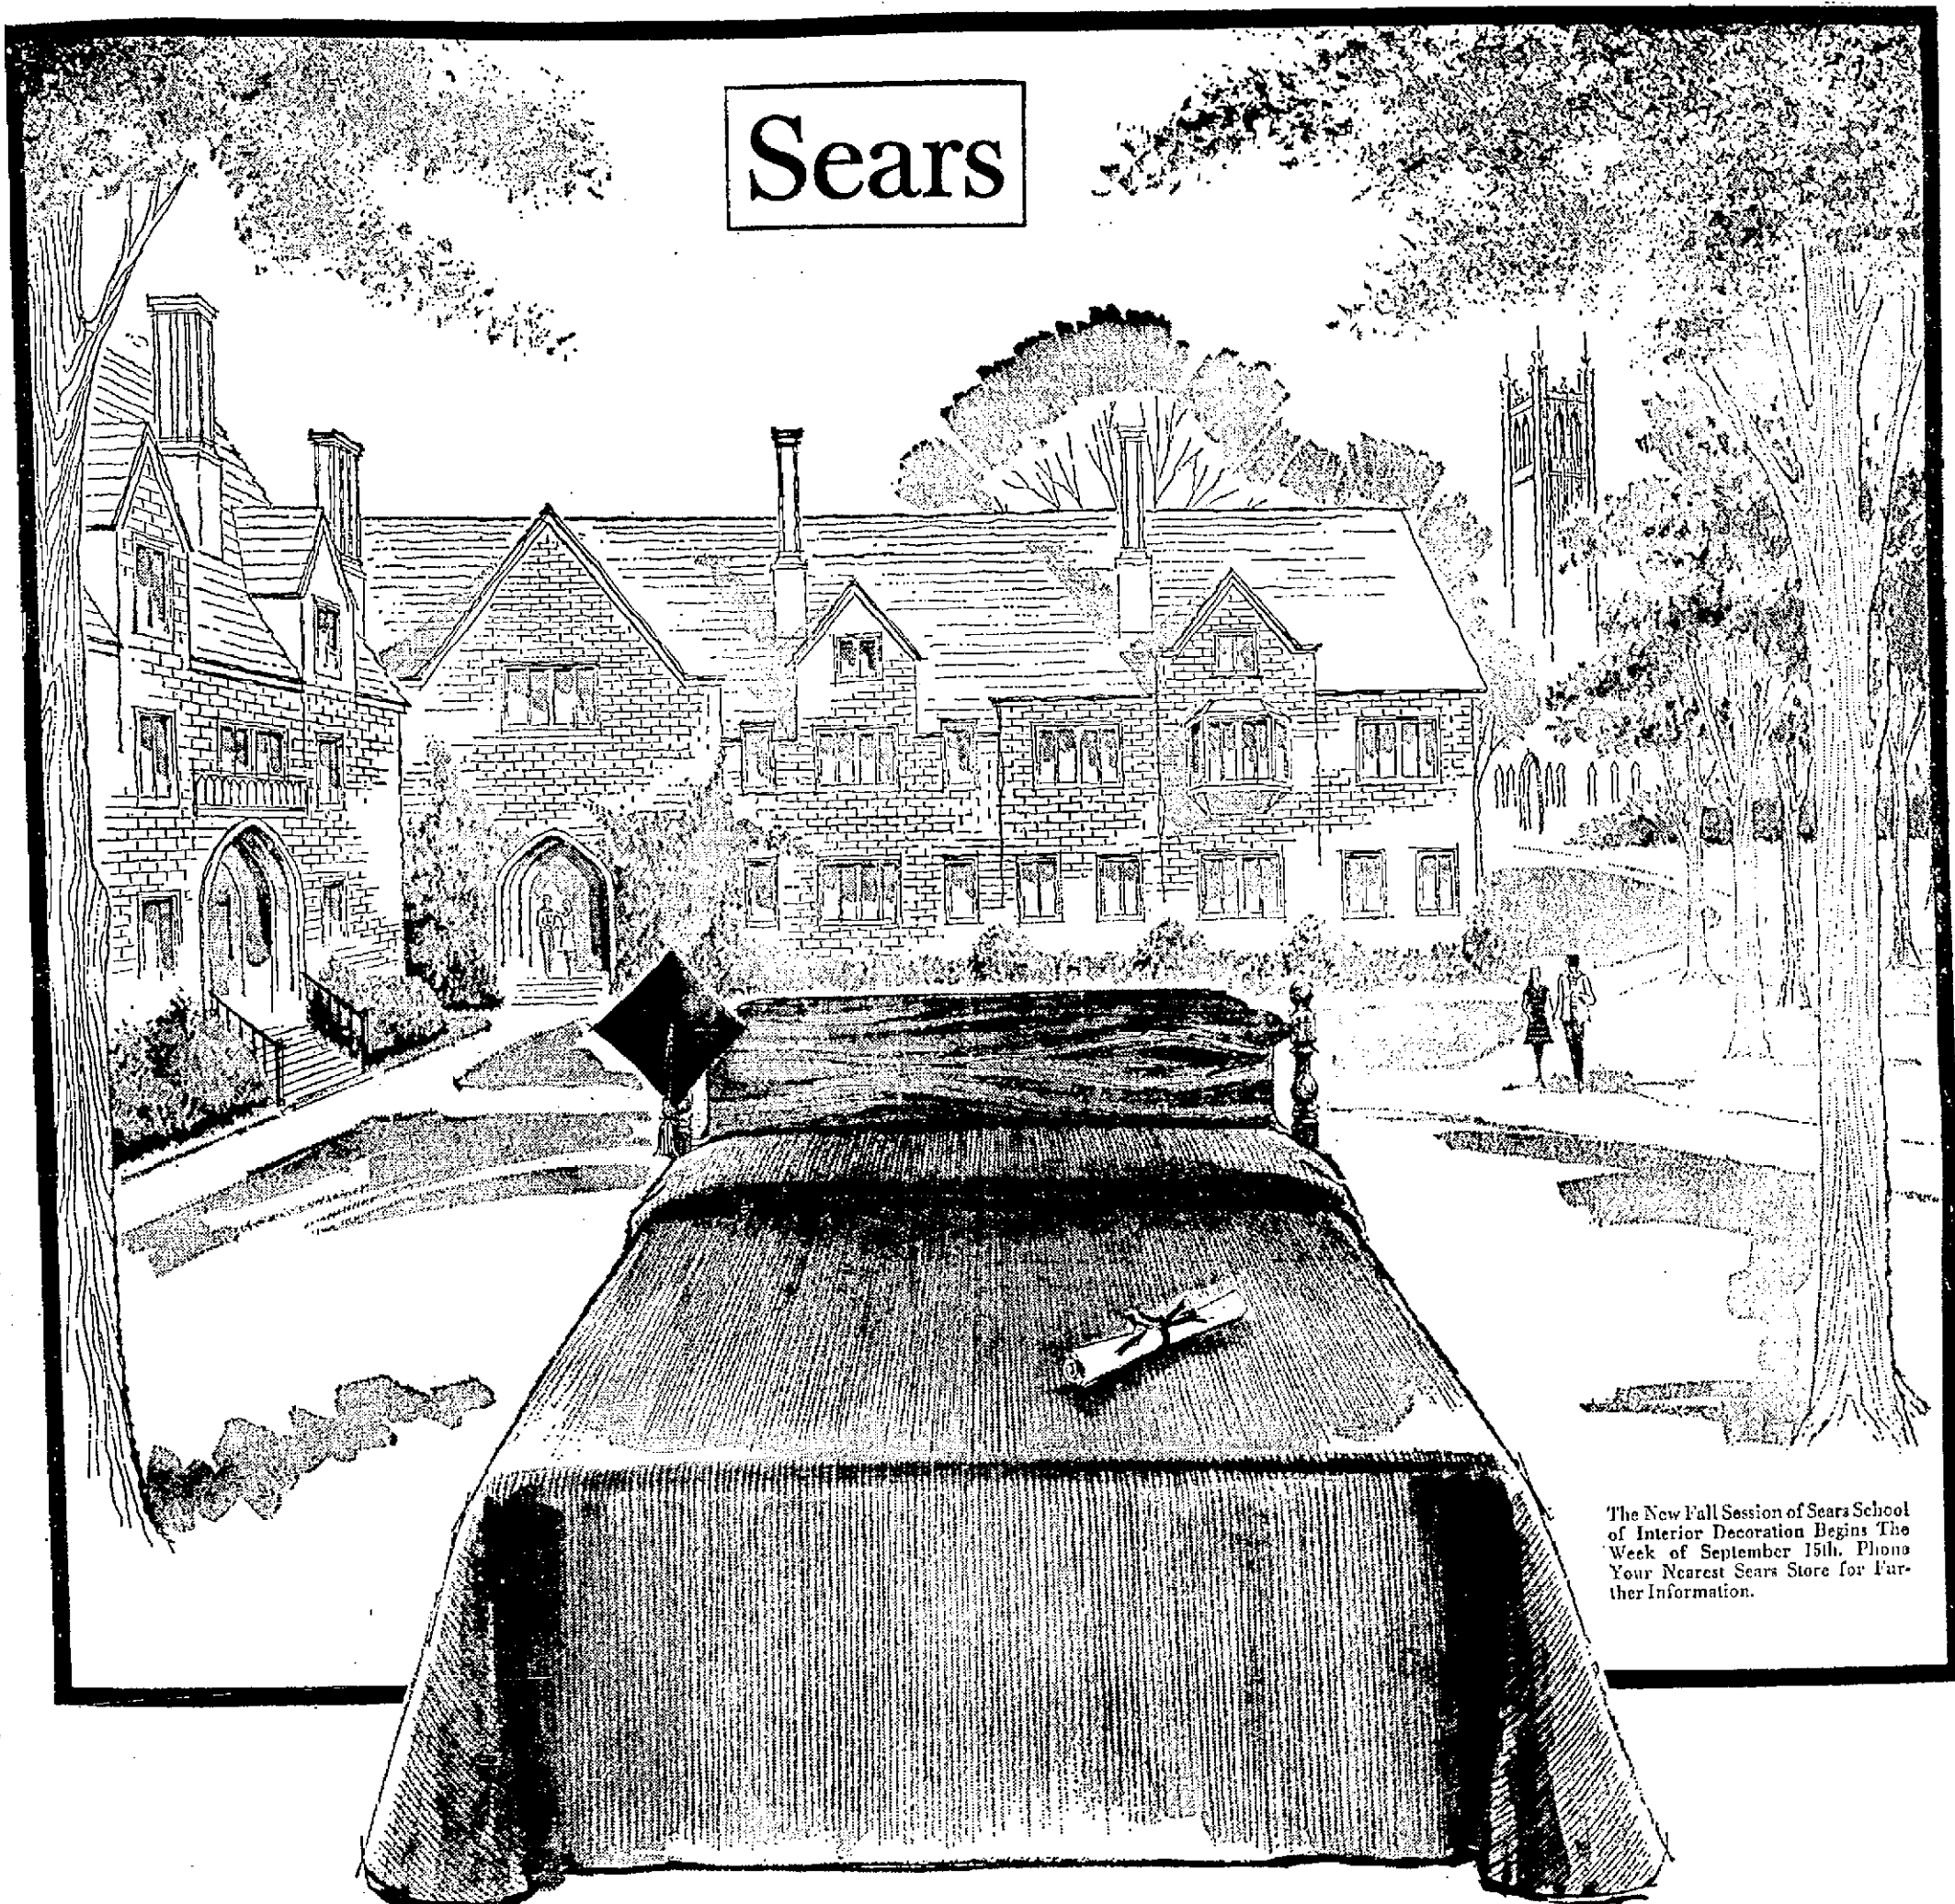

Romania increasingly became a "National Communist" country with the advent to power of the present president and party leader Nicolae Ceausescu.

Ceausescu's defiance of the Kremlin was expressed in growing opposition to some of the policies of Comecon (Communist Common Market), the Warsaw Pact, the Soviet intervention in Czechoslovakia and to some aspects of Soviet foreign policy.

The Soviet-Romanian 20-year friendship pact expired in February 1968 and has not been renewed yet by contrast with such pacts signed, at the highest level, with Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary, and Bulgaria.

First Poison Gas Shipment Arrives Safely at Plant

Associated Press

Eight carloads of poison gas pulled up to a Louisiana chemical plant Saturday and another shipment rumbled cautiously toward a New York destination despite delays and protests that the cross-country trip was dangerous.

The two shipments, totaling 300 tons of the World War I phosgene gas, were sold from the Defense Department's Rocky Mountain Arsenal in Colorado for peaceful use in industry. The gas was in liquid form, contained in canisters.

The eastbound shipment, traveling at 30 miles an hour on the Erie-Lackawanna line, was expected to reach Lockport, N.Y., late Saturday.

THE LOUISIANA shipment arrived without incident aboard Illinois Central flatcars. It had moved through south Mississippi to a suburban New Orleans trainyard without stopping, then turned north to Geismar, La., its destination some 100 miles away.

There, Harry Lloyd, safety supervisor at Rubicon Chemical Co., said the train would remain on a siding for 24 hours before the phosgene is bled from the 120 one-ton tanks. It will be used in plastics making.

The eastbound shipment, consigned to Vandemark Industries at Lockport for planned use in insecticides or synthetic foam, generated two routing difficulties and the wrath of the governor of Iowa.

It was first scheduled to shortcut through Canada, but was barred, held over in a Chicago railway yard and rerouted through Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania. Then the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad said it would have to stop at the Ravenna, Ohio, federal ordnance plant for clearance.

'Copycat' Hunted as Pair Buried

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A market owner and his wife whose brutal murders resembled those of actress Sharon Tate and four of her friends were buried Saturday.

Police, who first thought there might be a connection between the two sets of slayings, said they believed the deaths of Leno La Bianca and his wife Rosemary were the work of a "copycat killer."

The bodies of La Bianca, 44, and his 38-year-old wife were discovered Sunday by their children from a previous marriage, Susan Struthers, 21, and Frank Struthers, 14.

La Bianca's body had the word "war" and a series of X's carved on the chest and a white hood over the head. Mrs. La Bianca was found in a bedroom. Both had been stabbed repeatedly. The word "death" was written in blood on a refrigerator.

Some of the grisly details were similar to those at the Benedict Canyon estate where five persons were found slaughtered Saturday.

However, police indicated that they now believe the La Bianca murders were not connected with the Tate case. They indicated they believed the La Biancas were victims of a "copycat killer" who was either trying to gain personal satisfaction or confuse police.

Paris Talks Slow Down Without Lodge

PARIS (UPI) — The Vietnam peace talks are expected to mark time for a week as the participants await the return of U.S. negotiator Henry Cabot Lodge and the results of a possible government shake-up in Saigon, Allied sources said Saturday.

Lodge left Friday for Washington in a surprise unexplained move. It was not known who requested the trip or with whom Lodge will confer in the United States.

During his 10-day stay in the U.S. he may meet with President Nixon at San Clemente. Nixon and Lodge both warned this week that renewed Communist attacks might slow down withdrawal of U.S. troops.

News dispatches from Saigon reported President Nguyen Van Thieu was holding talks with political leaders amid demands for a government shakeup.

Philip C. Habib, deputy U.S. negotiator, will take Lodge's place at the 31st session of the talks next week.

2 Survive Air Crash

EL MONTE (UPI) — Two persons escaped with minor injuries early Saturday when their light plane crash landed in the yard of a manufacturing plant shortly after takeoff from the airport here. Aboard were pilot James P. Schubert, 34, and Judy Lynn Vallance, 21, both of Monterey Park.

PAC Will Picket President

By BILL HOMER
Staff Writer

Peace Action Council spokesmen said Saturday they expect up to 2,000 persons to attend an anti-Vietnam war demonstration in San Clemente today when President Nixon's plush "White House West" will be picketed.

"We have been informed about 200 people from Long Beach plan to join the demonstration," said Terry Hardy, a committee member.

Local residents have planned to meet at 11 a.m. at the Peace and Freedom Party office, 805 Redondo Ave., and then go by auto convoy to the Orange County seaside resort town.

Miss Hardy said the demonstration probably will begin at about 1 p.m. and end at about 5:30 p.m.

SAN CLEMENTE police said they are taking a "wait-and-see" approach to the demonstration.

"We don't anticipate any problems at this point," a spokesman said. "But if we get too big a crowd in town for our department to handle, we'll probably ask for assistance from nearby cities."

"As far as current planning goes, our department will handle crowd control on city streets, the areas near the beach and the President's home, and the Secret Service will be in charge of security on and adjacent to the Nixon estate."

Miss Hardy said demonstrators will take the San Diego Freeway to Avenida Calafia, where they will exit and be directed by demonstration monitors to a rally point. Participants will come from as far away as Seattle and Denver, she said.

"We expect only a few people from those cities, but about 200 are coming from San Diego, 300 are scheduled to come from Hayward (in Northern California) and two bus loads are on their way down from the San Francisco area," she said.

SHE SAID the demonstrators are scheduled to hold a pre-picketing rally either on San Clemente State Beach or at the state park's picnic area. Then they will go to the Nixon home, she said.

The PAC apparently failed to obtain an injunction sought in Los Angeles Federal Court to prohibit the State Department of Parks and Recreation from enforcing a ban against a pre-picketing rally on a vacant field at the San Clemente park.

U.S. Dist. Judge Albert Lee Stephens declined to issue the injunction Friday, but American Civil Liberties Union attorneys, who represented the PAC in a suit against the state agency, said they would seek the order from another federal judge.

Miss Hardy said the injunction had not been obtained by late Saturday.

The antiwar demonstration will be the second in four days for the Nixons.

Demonstrators from the Student Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam peacefully picketed outside the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles Wednesday during a gala "state dinner" for moon astronauts Neil Armstrong, Edwin Aldrin and Michael Collins.

'Dead' Son Lives But Grave Is Full

KATONAH, N.Y. (UPI) — A 21-year-old Harvard graduate student, reported killed in France and "buried" last Saturday, relaxed at his Katonah, N.Y., home Saturday as officials wondered who lay in his grave.

"We were delighted and pleased to say the least,"

Joseph Savago Sr., said when his son returned to his Westchester home Friday night. Joseph Jr., shocked when told of his reported death, said he was "glad to be back."

The State Department in Washington told the family the youth was killed July 31 in an automobile accident in France. A body, in a sealed coffin, was shipped to the United States for a funeral and burial last Saturday.

Two days later, the grieving parents received a letter from their son. It was dated Aug. 8, mailed from London and proved Joseph Jr. was still alive.

Rep. Ogden R. Reid, R-N.Y., when notified by the family, helped them locate the youth by contacting the American Embassy in London and having him paged over the British Broadcasting Corp.

INDEPENDENT PRESS-TELEGRAM—A-23.
Long Beach, Calif., Sun., Aug. 17, 1969

Savago, on a student tour, walked into the embassy Friday and told officials his passport had been either lost or stolen. His documents officials were found on the body of the as yet unidentified victim buried in St. Mary's Cemetery in Kingston, N.Y.

THE B&O LATER said the Army and the U.S. Department of Transportation asked that it not stop.

Gov. Robert D. Ray of Iowa vowed to complain to the White House about the movement of the New York-bound train across his state. He said neither he nor any state agency was told the train was passing through and, "an accident by this train would have been disastrous."

But Allen Vandemark, president of the Lockport firm, said the gas was not so dangerous. He said phosgene was being confused with diphosgene, an enriched form of phosgene with carbon monoxide and chlorine.

Jerald Gerson, owner of Chemical Commodities Corp., of Olathe, Kan., purchaser of the Louisiana shipment, said the gas presents no greater danger than that of gasoline or explosive hauled by railroads. A Rubicon spokesman said the firm had been receiving rail shipments of phosgene for a year and a half.

"We have been informed about 200 people from Long Beach plan to join the demonstration," said Terry Hardy, a committee member.

Local residents have planned to meet at 11 a.m. at the Peace and Freedom Party office, 605 Redondo Ave., and then go by auto convoy to the Orange County seaside resort town.

Miss Hardy said the demonstration probably will begin at about 1 p.m. and end at about 5:30 p.m. SAN CLEMENTE police said they are taking a "wait-and-see" approach to the demonstration.

"We don't anticipate any problems at this point," a spokesman said. "But if we get too big a crowd in town for our department to handle, we'll probably ask for assistance from nearby cities."

"As far as current planning goes, our department will handle crowd control on city streets, the areas near the beach and the President's home, and the Secret Service will be in charge of security on and adjacent to the Nixon estate."

Miss Hardy said demonstrators will take the San Diego Freeway to Avenida Calafia, where they will exit and be directed by demonstration monitors to a rally point. Participants will come from as far away as Seattle and Denver, she said.

"We expect only a few people from those cities, but about 200 are coming from San Diego, 300 are scheduled to come from Hayward (in Northern California) and two bus loads are on their way down from the San Francisco area," she said.

SHE SAID the demonstrators are scheduled to hold a "pre-picketing rally" either on San Clemente State Beach or at the state park's picnic area. Then they will go to the Nixon home, she said.

The PAC apparently failed to obtain an injunction sought in Los Angeles Federal Court to prohibit the State Department of Parks and Recreation from enforcing a ban against a pre-picketing rally on a vacant field at the San Clemente park.

U.S. Dist. Judge Albert Lee Stephens declined to issue the injunction Friday, but American Civil Liberties Union attorneys, who represented the PAC in a suit against the state agency, said they would seek the order from another federal judge.

Miss Hardy said the injunction had not been obtained by late Saturday.

The antiwar demonstration will be the second in four days for the Nixons.

Demonstrators from the Student Mobilization Committee to End the War in Vietnam peacefully picketed outside the Century Plaza Hotel in Los Angeles Wednesday during a gala "state dinner" for moon astronaut Neil Armstrong, Edwin Aldrin and Michael Collins.

'Dead' Son Lives But Grave Is Full

KATONAH, N.Y. (UPI) — A 21-year-old Harvard graduate student, reported killed in France and "buried" last Saturday, relaxed at his Katonah, N.Y., home Saturday as officials wondered who lay in his grave. "We were delighted and pleased to say the least,"

Joseph Savago Sr., said when his son returned to his Westchester home Friday night. Joseph Jr., shocked when told of his reported death, said he was "glad to be back."

The State Department in Washington told the family the youth was killed July 31 in an automobile accident in France. A body, in a sealed coffin, was shipped to the United States for a funeral and burial last Saturday.

Two days later, the grieving parents received a letter from their son. It was dated Aug. 8, mailed from London and proved Joseph Jr. was still alive. Rep. Ogden R. Reid, R-N.Y., when notified by the family, helped them locate the youth by contacting the American Embassy in London and having him paged over the British Broadcasting Corp.

Savago, on a student tour, walked into the embassy Friday and told officials his passport had been either lost or stolen. His documents officials were found on the body of the as yet unidentified victim buried in St. Mary's Cemetery in Kingston, N.Y.

Threatening Calls Upset Film Folk

NEW YORK — Since the Sharon Tate and Jay Sebring murders, some other Hollywoodians have the terrors.

You can hardly blame their nervousness. Warren Beatty told some journalists that he and many other Hollywood friends had received threatening phone calls and are, frankly, upset about them. Beatty, in particular, was a friend of Sharon Tate and Roman Polanski, and spent days with Polanski at an Italian film festival just before Polanski was called with the word of the mass killings.

This is one reason that Hollywoodians and some New Yorkers have private phone numbers and keep switching those. They don't want to get the crank calls, the bigot calls, the sex calls, and sometimes, the threats.

Jay Sebring was always getting such calls and made it a point never to let more than five people have his number. When it got to be more, he got a new number.

IF THE MURDERS have not been solved by the time you read this, it may be interesting to know that Polanski has had some definite suspicions and told some friends, "The pieces are falling into place." "The persons he suspected are known to him."

The Hollywood tendency was to suspect "some creeps," "some ritualistic weirdos," "some former friends who were on LSD and didn't know what they were doing," "some long-time enemies," and "some members of the woman-hating set since they murdered a girl eight months pregnant."

The horrible sexual mutilation indicates extreme savagery. Obscenities were printed across one girl's body.

Jayne Mansfield's former secretary and companion Greg Tyler has asked New Orleans Prosecutor Jim Garrison to investigate the crash into a truck in which she and her lawyer were killed. . . . Bob Considine's in Drs. Hospital for a check up . . . What was a famous defense lawyer doing measuring the bridge of Teddy Kennedy's distress? Is he advising, observing, or going to represent somebody?

"Liberace cut himself, claims Slappy White. "His leg was bleeding something terrible."

THE MIDNIGHT EARL . . . Joe W. Lewis took his hospitalization at Lenox Hill typically: "I'm gonna be out here — in about four years. It's gonna be tough to walk, but the bars have rails. I have double vision on my right side, and wear a patch; I'm the Moishe Dayan of Lenox Hill."

When they asked Joe Namath at his press conference with Mickey Mantle whether he was uptight about the Jets-Giants game, he grinned and just like a comedian replied, "Uh — uh — uh — uh — uh — no."

Moon boy Neil Armstrong's wife picked out three suits for him for his triumphant tour by taking several sample suits from the Houston Hart Schaffner & Marx store, Leopold Price & Raleigh, up to the isolation window. He nodded his approval — of the conservative models.

There's amazing interest in Sal Mineo who's coming in to direct "Fortune and Men's Eyes" at stage 73. Mineo, 30ish now, revised the script of the play about prison homosexuality . . . the MacDonald Careys are splitting after 27 years.

Frank Gorshin gave in to the producers of "Jimmy" — he'll cut his blond hair and dye it black for the role . . . Bill Miller was flying to Europe with Cary Grant and Kirk Kerkorian, but turned back at Gander when he discovered his passport has expired . . . Peter Falk (of "Castle Keep") does "Mickey and Nicky" next with Elaine May, who'll also direct . . . George C. Scott was at the Ginger Man, with full beard.

A Honolulu cafe sent out 1,000 engraved invitations to Don Ho's 39th birthday party — then had to send 1,000 postponement cards when Ho was invited to the Astronauts' dinner in L.A. . . . The John Weitzes (actress Susan Kohner) are expecting . . . Liberace was all set to buy a famous London town house — but Richard Harris got there an hour earlier with check in hand . . . Joe Louis may go to Israel September 7, with Sammy Davis, who'll perform in the huge Ramat Gan stadium.

Diane Varsi'll play a gun moll in "Bloody Mama," written by her husband Robert Thom . . . Acting is the old skin game for Elliott Gould — he has three nude scenes in "Getting Straight."

TODAY'S BEST LAUGH: Joan Rivers says her young daughter's favorite food is peanut butter and jelly, on white: "White walls, white sofa, white chairs . . ."

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Nothing improves your driving like having two speeding convictions on your license.

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "An American looks up to a woman. A German looks down at a woman. But a Frenchman . . . a Frenchman looks AT a woman."

EARL'S PEARLS: Some of the summer camps are so fancy that the kids don't start roughing it till they get home.

A man just back from Las Vegas said that he'd been in a casino and watched Dean Martin blow $2,000 in one night: "And he wasn't gambling — just drinking." That's earl, brother.

Lakewood Plaza 'Unification' Hit

Councilmen were asked Friday by letter to take a positive action to prevent "unification" of the Lakewood Plaza Shopping Center.

Mrs. Jane Danron, 6502 Pageantry St., representing the Neighborhood Action Group, said that more 1,100 signatures have been obtained on a petition asking for a "positive plan" for beautification of the center.

THE PETITION asks the Planning Commission to "incorporate a unifying theme, landscaping and diversified business establishments of high quality."

"We prefer quality rather than novelty," she said.

"We now have oozing urban sprawl bolstered by inadequate zoning regulations, which result in a complete lack of unity," Mrs. Danron wrote.

She urged councilmen to "please consider esthetic factors when determining all future policy."

Richard A. Olson, 6731 Pageantry St., pointed out that nearby residents tried unsuccessfully to halt construction of a drive-in restaurant in the plaza, and said it is "extremely ironic" that these "unwelcome" drive-ins now ask police assistance to control crowds.

"I WOULD be very disillusioned if an ordinance were passed to protect the operation of these establishments, without the city Planning Commission, or other city agency, being authorized to positively control development of our city," Olson wrote.

Olson said the shopping center could be "immeasurably beautified" by trees and plants.

Beefs on Taxis Accepted

Local taxi patrons who may have any complaints about fares or service are invited to appear Tuesday afternoon before the Long Beach Bureau of Franchises.

The bureau meeting will be held at 3 p.m. in the City Council chambers in City Hall. It previously had been set for Monday at 9:30 a.m.

Louis Possner, chief engineer of the bureau, said agenda items include a hearing on the application of Diamond Cab Co. and Yellow Cab Co. for a rate increase.

Possner said the bureau probably will make no decision on the application at Tuesday's meeting, but is expected to continue the matter to the bureau's meeting in September to give the staff time to analyze evidence submitted by the cab companies.

Lakewood Cab Co., which operates in a small section of Long Beach, also has applied for an increase in rates, but this request is expected to be held over until the September meeting, pending receipt of financial and other information from the company.

FUEL-FED FLAMES SHOOT ALOFT

Bucyrus Victory, a federally-owned freighter, stands ablaze in Los Angeles Harbor as firemen at dockside scramble to battle the fuel oil-fed flames. The fire, of undetermined origin, caused up to $250,000 damage to the vessel, which is operated for the National Shipping Authority by American President Lines. It took 28 units of Los Angeles city firemen to contain the blaze at Pier 92, San Pedro, late Friday. Thirteen men were overcome by smoke and a fireman was treated for an eye injury. Consolidated Marine Inc. spokesmen, at whose freight terminal Bucyrus Victory was berthed, said it is unknown yet whether the vessel will be refitted.

Dr. Sam Sheppard, a General Practitioner, Ponders Offer to Wrestle Abroad

By EDWARD DIMITRIO
COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Dr. Sam Sheppard says he has no immediate plans to trade his stethoscope for a pair of wrestling trunks. But the husky former neurosurgeon and osteopath admitted that offers to wrestle in Australia, Japan and other foreign countries have tickled his interest.

Sheppard, who made a successful public debut as a wrestler recently in a benefit match, said, however, that he does not anticipate going anywhere.

"I'm a general practitioner and my practice comes first," Sheppard said. "I have always had an interest in wrestling. "My father pushed me into medicine. I have wrestled since I was a sophomore in high school. But wrestling and other forms of athletics are more enjoyed when you don't rely on them as a vocation."

George Strickland, Sheppard's business adviser and trainer, said Sheppard would participate in more wrestling bouts. "It's quite possible Sam will go on tour," Strickland said.

Sheppard, 45, was champion of a prison wrestling team while he served nearly 10 years of a life sentence in the Ohio Penitentiary for the 1954 slaying of his wife, Marilyn. He was acquitted at a second trial ordered by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1964.

He established a practice in Gahanna, a village near here, shortly after he left the staff at Youngstown Osteopathic Hospital where he was named defendant in two wrongful death suits. Legal costs over the years have left Sheppard in debt.

"But I'm chipping away at what I owe," Sheppard said. "I can buy dinner, but what money I make I pay back."

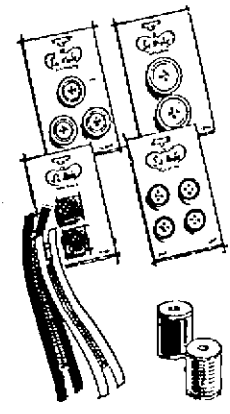

Strickland said wrestling could make a difference in Sheppard's pocketbook. "It's not a gimmick," Strickland said. "Sam likes to wrestle and if we can make money at it that's fine. I just hope it is not ridiculed."

Sheppard said he would never go back to being a specialist lest he become "stereotyped."

Sheppard has another interest — the Peace Corps.

By EDWARD DIPIETRO
COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI)—Dr. Sam Sheppard says he has no immediate plans to trade his stethoscope for a pair of wrestling trunks.

But the husky former neurosurgeon and osteopath admitted that offers to wrestle in Australia, Japan and other foreign countries have tickled his interest.

Sheppard, who made a successful public debut as a wrestler recently in a benefit match, said, however, that he does not anticipate going anywhere.

"I'm a general practitioner and my practice comes first," Sheppard said. "I have always had an interest in wrestling.

"My father pushed me into medicine. I have wrestled since I was a sophomore in high school. But wrestling and other forms of athletics are more enjoyed when you don't rely on them as a vocation."

George Strickland, Sheppard's business adviser and trainer, said Sheppard would participate in more wrestling bouts.

"It's quite possible Sam will go on tour," Strickland said.

Sheppard, 45, was champion of a prison wrestling team while he served nearly 10 years of a life sentence in the Ohio Penitentiary for the 1951 slaying of his wife, Marilyn. He was acquitted at a second trial ordered by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1964.

"I find my practice exhilarating," Sheppard said. "There is a need for family doctors. General practice is quite a challenge."

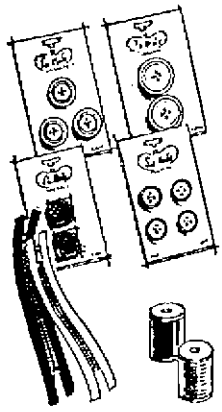

Sheppard has another interest — the Peace Corps.

Sheppard's pocketbook. "It's not a gimmick," Strickland said. "Sam likes to wrestle and if we can make money at it that's fine. I just hope it is not ridiculed."

Sheppard said he would never go back to being a specialist lest he become "stereotyped."

FLOYD LEADS BY FIVE

Demonstrators Disrupt PGA Play

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Ray Floyd, playing under mental duress, moved out to a five-stroke lead in the third round of the PGA national championship Saturday while South African Gary Player remained in contention despite several ugly incidents by a civil rights group.

Player was jostled on the 10th hole when spectators broke through the restraining ropes and grappled with security police. A heavy, 278-page program was thrown at him on another hole. Water was thrown on him on another and a ball was thrown near him on still another.

The tough little veteran, grim-faced and light-tipped, rammed in birdie putts after two of the incidents, however, and shot a par 71 for 277.

That put him five strokes back of the husky Floyd, who issued a public apology to fellow player Bob Ferrier for remarks made following the second round.

Floyd, the second-round leader, had a sparkling 67 for 272, including a spectacular birdie on his final hole when he came out of a fairway trap to within a foot of the pin.

Player was tied for second at 277 with Bunky Henry, the former Georgia Tech placekicker, who had a third-round 70, and slim Bert Greene, in with a 68. Jimmy Wright, a club pro at the Inwood Country Club on Long Island, was next at 278 after a 69.

Jack Nicklaus, in third place going into Saturday's play and Player's twosome partner, fell back with a 74 for 282. He fell out of it with a triple bogey seven on the final hole, when he hit a tree, got into a trap and failed to get out, then three-putted.

None of the leaders was allowed to come to the press tent for the usual post-round interview. They were hustled off the course under a tight cordon of police and guided to the dressing room.

Player and Nicklaus took the brunt of most of the demonstrations by the group, which calls itself the Dayton Organization, headed by Mel Jackson. It is a coalition of several other organizations, including local chapters of the Students for a Democratic Society and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

The demonstrators, who had picketed the entrance to the NCTR Country Club course in an orderly fashion for the first two days of the tournament, had presented a long list of demands, including 3,000 free tickets for the poor, access to all private clubs in the area and time, effort and money equal to that devoted to the tournament.

The event, one of the world's four major championships, carries a total purse of $175,000.

Security chief Paul Price, a former Dayton police chief, said at least 10 men and one woman were arrested in the series of incidents.

Floyd, a stocky, 26-year-old had problems of a different nature. He apologized to Ferrier in a mimeographed statement after conferring with PGA commissioner Joe Dey.

In a game that will be little noted and soon forgotten, the Rams suffered through their lowest point production since losing to Baltimore (17-3) in 1966 when the Cleveland Browns took advantage of two pass interceptions to defeat George Allen's punless gang, 10-3, Saturday night at the Coliseum.

The crowd of 54,937 was still late in the second quarter when reserve line-backer Bill Andrews picked off Karl Sweetan's pass and rambled 50 yards to overcome the Rams' 3-0 lead.

Andrews, pressed into action when starter Jim Houston became ill in the dressing room shortly before game time, set up Don Cockroft's 31-yard field goal midway in the final quarter stealing Roman Gabriel's pass as he attempted to ditch the ball.

The Rams, who had beaten the eastern invaders six successive times dating back to 1965, settled for David Ray's 42-yard field goal with 1:29 elapsed in the second period. Ray's kick hit the cross-bar but trickled over to tickle the Gabriel, who's enjoyed better days, directed the Ram attack three quarters, completing 11 of 27 attempts for 111 yards and two threes. Sweetan, who steered the club the second period, completed 3 of 8 passes for 20 yards and one easily intercepted.

In defense of Sweetan, the pass was on target, but Pat Studstill juggled the ball and Andrews rushed up to take the ball away and set sail at midfield for the goal line and the decisive six points.

The dejected Allen said: "I guess after beating the Browns six times we figured we only had to show up to win and that wasn't the case."

"We made too many mistakes -- fumbles, interceptions and penalties."

Allen pointed out that rookie Larry Smith's fumble in the third quarter after the Rams had marched from their 20 to the Browns' 42 was costly.

Also Mike Finkle's clip which nullified Ron Smith's 60-yard kickoff return following Cockroft's field goal muddled matters.

"All of the penalties were made by rookies. I think as we get closer to the season you'll see the regulars playing more."

"Before I thought we had made a lot of progress during training camp, but I'm not so sure," Allen added. "They put a good rush on Gabe and he was off target."

In the Browns' dressing room, Blanton Collier said: "It was a tremendous defensive game. We stuck to our game plan which was to play many people. We didn't violate this."

Questioned about his quarterback rotation, Collier explained: "We planned to play Nelsen the first quarter, Rhyme in the second and then split the second half with Ryan and Rhyme if he wanted to come back in. We didn't vary from our play plan."

all surprising if the Montreal management hoisted a white flag and begged the fans to lay off the Dodger shortstop.

Maury continued his personal battle with his one-time fans Saturday by hitting a grand slam homer — the first of his career — to bust up what had been a tight tussle and provide the Dodgers with a 9-3 romp over the Expos for Claude Osteen's 16th win of the year.

Not only was the win the Dodgers fifth in a row in Maple Leaf country, it also popped them into second place in the National League's Western Division madness, two games back of Cincinnati.

"Naturally, it felt great to hit a grand slam," Maury said after the game, the second one in a row in which he's been the instigator.

"But the best thing was the fact it helped win the game. Osteen's never won 20 games and now he has a great shot at it. He was struggling a little at the time and it helped win the game for him. That's what was great about the homer."

"I didn't say, 'there, take that' when I hit it out. It's been hard for me not to get that attitude the way they've been booing me and all. But I was just tickled to help win the game."

Walter Alston, the Dodgers' skipper, wasn't quite so modest about the blow.

"Taking account of the circumstances," said the manager, "I'd have to list it as one of the greatest."

Atwood Betters World Backstroke Standard

LOUISVILLE (Special) — Susie Atwood bettered a world record Saturday while three other American standards were washed off the books diving championships.

The victory was worth nine points to Miss Atwood's Lakewood Aquatic Club, which leads the women's point standings with 91. Arden Hills Swim Club of Sacramento is second at 72.

In men's standings, Long Beach Phillips 66 won only one event, but increased its point total to 166 while Santa Clara, team champion the past five seasons, continued to hold the runnerup spot with 10½ points.

Miss Atwood cracked the world 200-meter backstroke record Thursday and bettered the existing world mark in the 100-meter backstroke with a 1:06.0 clocking, two-tenths of a second under the current standard. Her effort will stand as an AAU record.

But the performance may never be entered as a world record. South Africa's Karen Muir has a pending mark of 1:05.5

Even after her record swim, Susie had enough energy to swim the anchor leg in the 800-meter freestyle relay.

The Lakewood quarter of Sue Mallonee (2:15.9), Ann Simmons (2:10.4), Bonnie Adair (2:14.3) and Atwood (2:17.1) placed third in 8:57.7 behind Arden Hills American record 8:42.3 and Santa Clara's 8:44.0 but Lakewood's B team picked up four additional points with a seventh.

Lakewood easily smashed the SPA/AAU record of 9:00.1 set in 1965 by a City of Commerce team led by

Rich Kindergarten Run for Whataway To Go

By DAVE DANIEL

"Never bet against an unbeaten horse" is an old race track adage that proved true Saturday night at Los Alamitos Race Course as Whataway To Go won the $90,100 Kindergarten Stakes before 13,571 fans.

The two-year-old filly by famed Go Man Go zipped the 350 yards in 17.8 seconds to pull a mild upset and collect $19,555 for Vessels Stallion Farm, the next door enterprise of the Orange County track.

Whataway To Go defeated 1-2 favorite Nulther Brother by a half length in winning her fifth consecutive race as the latter suffered only his second loss in seven starts.

Ridden by Terry Lipham, who was aboard his second winner of the evening, Whataway To Go trailed Nulther Brother in the sprint until he caught him in the final strides and won going away.

"This is the best filly I've ever ridden," said the 25-year-old Lipham. "I've never had to hit her once."

As second favorite, the entry of Whataway To Go and Ought To Go paid $8 for the win but only $2.60 for the place and show.

Jaguar Rocket, the only other horse to defeat Nulther Brother, was third and 80-1 shot Go Snooper was fourth.

Nulther Brother was the fastest qualifier in last week's trials in a speedy 17.7 as Whataway To Go won her heat in the relatively slow time of 18.0. Rica's Gold, which won a heat last week in 17.9, got

Atwood Betters World Backstroke Standard

LOUISVILLE (Special) — Susie Atwood bettered a world record Saturday while three other American standards were washed off the books diving champion-the books in the third day of competition in the National AAU swimming and diving championships.

The victory was worth nine points to Miss Atwood's Lakewood Aquatic Club, which leads the women's point standings with 91. Arden Hills Swim Club of Sacramento is second at 72.

In men's standings, Long Beach Phillips 66 won only one event but increased its point total to 166 while Santa Clara, team champion the past five seasons, continued to hold the runnerup spot with 104½ points.

Miss Atwood cracked the world 200-meter backstroke record Thursday and bettered the existing world mark in the 400-meter backstroke with a 1:06.0 clocking, two-tenths of a second under the current standard. Her effort will stand as an AAU record.

But the performance may never be entered as a world record. South Africa's Karen Muir has a pending mark of 1:05.6

Even after her record swim, Susie had enough energy to swim the anchor leg in the 800-meter freestyle relay.

The Lakewood quarter of Sue Mallonee (2:15.9), Ann Simmons (2:10.4), Bonnie Adair (2:14.3) and Atwood (2:17.1) placed third in 8:57.7 behind Arden Hills American record 8:42.3 and Santa Clara's 8:44.0 but Lakewood's B team picked up four additional points with a seventh.

Lakewood easily smashed the SPA/AAU record of 9:00.1 set in 1965 by a City of Commerce team led by

Rich Kindergarten Run for Whataway To Go

By DAVE DANIEL

"Never bet against an unbeaten horse" is an old race track adage that proved true Saturday night at Los Alamitos Race Course as Whataway To Go won the $90,100 Kindergarten Stakes before 13,571 fans.

The two-year-old filly by famed Go Man Go zipped the 350 yards in 17.8 seconds to pull a mild upset and collect $49,555 for Vessels Stallion Farm, the next door enterprise of the Orange County track.

Whataway To Go defeated 1-2 favorite Nuthier Brother by a half length in winning her fifth consecutive race as the latter suffered only his second loss in seven starts.

Ridden by Terry Lipham, who was aboard his second winner of the evening, Whataway To Go trailed Nuthier Brother in the sprint until he caught him in the final strides and won going away.

"This is the best filly I've ever ridden," said the 25-year-old Lipham. "I've never had to hit her once."

As second favorite, the entry of Whataway To Go and Ought To Go paid $8 for the win but only $2.60 for the place and show.

Jaguar Rocket, the only other horse to defeat Nuthier Brother, was third and 80-1 shot Go Snooper was fourth.

Nuthier Brother was the fastest qualifier in last week's trials in a speedy 17.7 as Whataway To Go won her heat in the relatively slow time of 18.0. Rica's Gold, which won a heat last week in 17.9, got

JOHNSTONE NO LONGER JOKE

Messersmith Tomahawks Tribe

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

Jay Johnstone used to evoke laughs and deep-throated guffaws from rival dugouts. He patrolled centerfield with all the confidence of a guy sneaking home at 3 a.m. with lipstick on his collar.

"One day he's gonna get killed out there," was a statement heard round the American League. His manager Lefty Phillips merely covered his eyes and looked the other way. He was thinking the same thing.

Johnstone wasn't much better at the plate, either. Back on June 28, he was struggling along at a less-than-lusty .205 which, at the time, was only slightly better than his fielding average.

It is only humane to report that Jay Johnstone is no longer the comedy relief act on a team which cries out for a serious slugger.

Jay was dropped into the cleanup spot by manager Phillips Saturday night and he responded with a triple and single, scored two runs and made a fine running catch on Duke Sims' blast.

ANGEL OF DAY

ANDY MESSERSMITH blanked Indians, 4-0, on five hits.

In the seventh inning, When blended with Andy Messersmith's five-hit pitching, it all added up to a 4-0 Angel victory and one which kept them from falling into the cellar of the American League West.

"Jay is now playing centerfield the way it should be played," was the way Phillips put it.

Not coincidentally, Johnstone's hitting has improved along with his outfield play. His two hits in three trips hiked his seasonal average to .258 and since that black day in June, he has hit at a commendable .331 pace.

Messersmith was another happy story Saturday. Battered and bruised in his last two starts, Andy did a complete turn-about and picked up his second shut-out of the season and his fifth victory.

"I was wild and it kept me on pins and needles most of the game but I think I'm over the hump now," Messersmith said.

He racked up seven strikeouts and ran his total for the year to 146, fifth best in the American League. He also walked four, including the leadoff batters in two innings.

Messersmith entered the ninth inning working on a three-hitter but Ken Harrelson opened with a single and one out later, Dave Nelson blooped a single to right sending Harrelson to third, the first all night a Cleveland runner had ventured so far. Andy protected his shutout by getting Ken Suarez to pop out and pinch hitter Cap Peterson to hit into a force play.

The loser was Luis Tiant, now 8-15. He left after working six innings and yielding only four hits. But one was Johnstone's triple which led to the first Angel run in the second and the other three were bunched with a walk and an error for three more California runs in the fourth.

Johnstone opened the second with a triple into the gap in left-centerfield and Rick Reichardt, who has apparently rediscovered the secret of driving in runs, sent Jay home with a long sacrifice fly to left.

Tiant put himself on the spot by walking Jim Fregosi with one out in the fourth and Johnstone followed with a hot smash off Tony Horton's glove. The ball rolled into foul ground as Fregosi sped to third. Reichardt's single to left scored Fregosi and when outfielder Russ Snyder couldn't find the handle, Johnstone decided to score. Reichardt took third on the misplay and counted the final run of the night on a crisp single by Bill Voss. Horton, who couldn't hold Johnstone's smash in the fourth, also lost a battle with plate umpire Emmett Ashford in the eighth. After being called out on strikes to end the inning, Horton gave Emmett some lip and received a warning in return. After the first Angel batter had been retired Horton decided to give Ashford some more chatter and was hastily dispatched to the showers.

ANGEL ANGLES: Cleveland's rookie outfielder, Frank Baker, escaped serious injury in his losing argument with the leftfield fence Friday night. X-rays taken Saturday at St. Joseph's Hospital in Orange disclosed no fracture in his right foot. Baker was not in uniform Saturday and the club was reported stiff and sore but he is expected back to the Tribe lineup shortly. Jim Fregosi, the Angel cleanup hitter of late, was dropped into the third spot in the order Saturday and Jay Johnstone took over as No. 4 man. Johnstone has hit in every spot except pinch this season. "Sometimes I feel like a wop," he snickered. Jim McGeehan, who holds a 53 lifetime advantage over Cleveland, faces Mike Paul in today's matinee affair at the Big A.

Dan Drysdale has ended his retirement sort of. The former Big D of the Dodgers has agreed to put on a uniform for the first annual Angels-Dodgers Out-Runners Game a week from today. Baseball commissioner and Mrs. Bowie Kuhn will be on hand for the game, the community's office revealed. Catcher Bob Rodgers blew out at St. Louis on his birthday cake Saturday. Ken Tatum's father, Ray, was in the stands Saturday and got a look at his son for the first time in a major league uniform. Third baseman Aurelio Rodriguez put his name into the club record book Friday by participating in two double plays. That ran his season total to 31, surpassing the former mark of 27 held by the illustrious Felix Torres.

BASEPATH RODEBLOCK

New York's Bud Harrelson finds basepath between first and second bases hit crowded during second inning Saturday. Harrelson falls as San Diego's Larry Stahl (14) tries to avoid collision and Jose Arcia (left) arrives to make tag.

Executive Sports Editor

Are You Ready for This, Joe?

The Irish rebellion isn't confined to Belfast these days. It's taking place right here in Southern California as Joe Mullaney prepares to take over reins of the talent-laden, but bridesmaid, Lakers.

Mullaney isn't one bit scared about the difficult task of handling Chick Hearn's ball club despite the fact that recognized professionals have shuddered at the thought.

As Hearn, from Southern Ireland, remarked to Mullaney, whose ancestry also goes back to that area of the currently troubled nation, "All you can do is to take yourself into the popcorn machine or lose your job."

Mullaney, showing no fear, spat back at Hearn: "Irish, take your hair piece and keep your mouth to the mike and let me do the coaching."

All of which shows that Joe Mullaney isn't worried — yet.

Joe, a mere 44 years old, has a major problem. But the smiling Irishman isn't reluctant to discuss it.

The hesitant question was posed to Mullaney: "Sir, you've never coached a professional basketball team, so why do you think that you can handle three super-stars and still win a championship? It wasn't done last year with another coach."

Replied Mullaney: "I don't delve in the past tense. It took a lot of thought for me to leave college basketball and try to coach the pros. I think I can do the job, or else I wouldn't have accepted the position. As far as those three super-stars you mentioned, I come to the Lakers with an open mind. At this moment, as far as I'm concerned, the rawest of rookies is on an equal basis with the stars. The men who produce for me are the men who'll be my starters. And I don't give a hang about their salaries."

SUCH A STATEMENT is adjacent to treason, especially if you work for Jack Kent Cooke. Yet, the Southland's Napoleon stands 110 per cent behind his new coach.

"I don't hire and fire for fun," remarked Cooke. "I do what I think is right to get the job done. I think Mullaney will get the Laker job done this season or I wouldn't have given a three-year contract to him or anybody else."

Asked why he conceded a three-year pact to Butch Van Breda Kolf, who was subsequently dismissed, Cooke with his usual aplomb replied: "The guy had a great record at Princeton. I mean great. But somehow he couldn't get to the players."

MENTION OF THIS FACT to Mullaney, himself an outstanding college coach brought this response:

"I've been conditioned," said the smiling Irishman. "I mean conditioned to the pros. What I mean is that I played with and against them. I know the rules of the game, and they're rough."

Few realize that Joe played professional basketball. In the 1949-50 era, Mullaney was attached to the Boston Celtics.

But Mullaney had a problem. The guy who was hawking him was someone who matched the name of Bob Cousy.

"No way; no way at all, that I'm going to take Bob's place. He was a super-super."

THE PROBLEM which would seem to confront Mullaney doesn't appear to be that much of a tribulation to Irish.

"I came into a situation which many people thought impossible," said Joe. "I don't think so, else I wouldn't have accepted the job."

"I think that I'm a fairly good basketball coach. My record speaks for itself."

It does, indeed.

While the maestro (for 15 years) at Providence, Mullaney accumulated a 293-78 record. Only Lew Alcindor's coach, John Wooden, and the Great Baron, Adolph Rupp of Kentucky, posted better records.

The thing going for Mullaney is that he has guts — and super-stars.

NOW CHECK the super-stars, all of whom are great. The question to Joe: How do you think you'll be able to handle Wilt Chamberlain, Elgin Baylor, and Jerry West?

The Mullaney answer:

"This sort of question rather amuses me. I've heard of Wilt for many years. I've heard that Wilt is trouble. I can't call him trouble until he gives me proof."

"As far as West and Baylor are concerned, I have to believe what others have stated. They're both tremendous."

Suffice to say that Joe Mullaney, with a college record third only to Kentucky's Baron Rupp and UCLA's John Wooden, intends to improve.

"The pros are the same as the kids, I think," remarked Joe. "You just have to bring them all down to earth."

Joe Mullaney, wife and five children, is all set for the So. Calif. earth. The question is — is Mullaney set for Wilt and the other super-stars?

Inventive Baseball Coach Resigns Post at So. Illinois

CARBONDALE, Ill. (UPI) — Colorful Joe Lutz, a successful college baseball innovator, has stepped down as head baseball mentor at Southern Illinois University here.

Richard C. Jones, 31, a one-time baseball star at SIU and a former assistant coach, was named as the school's new head coach Friday to succeed the wily Lutz. Lutz, 44, resigned after four years at SIU with a record of 129-50-2.

Lutz, who introduced such things as batgirls and jazz music, guided the Salukis to two consecutive NCAA College World Series at Omaha after both times winning the NCAA district 4 playoffs at Minneapolis.

In 1958 SIU finished as runner-up to No. 1-ranked USC in the Salukis' finest baseball showing.

Cubs Wait Until Ninth, Beat Giants 3-0 Behind Jenkins

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Paul Popovich snapped a scoreless tie with a run-scoring pinch single in the ninth inning and two more runs scored on Ron Hunt's error as the Chicago Cubs blanked San Francisco 3-0 Saturday behind the three-pitching of Ferguson Jenkins.

Jenkins brought his record to 17-10, matching New York's Tom Seaver for the National League victory high, in outlasting Gaylord Perry, (15-9), who yielded five hits until the ninth.

Then, with two out, Bill Heath walked, raced to third on Jim Hickman's single and scored on Popovich's single to left. When Hunt booted Jenkins' bounce to second, Hickman and Popovich scored to give the Cub ace breathing room.

Jenkins held the Giants hitless until Bob Kierbridge singled with one out in the fifth.

Perry's seventh-inning single and a pinch single by Dave Marshall in the ninth where the only other hits off the big right-hander, who fanned eight, boosting his league lead to 217 strikeouts.

Cater Hero for Oakland

OAKLAND (AP) — Danny Cater lashed a two-run double in the 10th inning Saturday, giving Oakland a 4-3 victory over Detroit.

Detroit tied the game 2-2 on Norm Cash's two-run homer off John Odom in the ninth and moved ahead in the top of the 10th when Don Wert homered off reliever Rollie Fingers.

K.C. Earns Split Against Red Sox

KANSAS CITY (UPI) — Pat Kelly's three-run homer paced the Kansas City Royals to an 8-7 victory over Boston Saturday night after the Red Sox romped to a 10-1 win in the opener with the help of four runs batted in by George Scott.

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs blanked the San Francisco Giants 3-0 Saturday night behind the three-pitching of Ferguson Jenkins.

Seaver Has Help, but Gets 17th Win as Mets Take Two

NEW YORK (AP) — Jerry Grote's run-scoring pinch single in the seventh inning — after a three-base throwing error by pitcher Gary Ross — gave the New York Mets a 2-1 victory and a doubleheader sweep over the San Diego Padres Saturday.

New York won the opener 2-0 behind Tom Seaver, who became the National League's first 17-game winner with ninth-inning help from Ron Taylor.

The two setbacks extended San Diego's losing streak to eight games.

The second game was tied 1-1 when Ross replaced started Dick Kelley at the start of the Mets' seventh and promptly threw wildly past first on Ron Swoboda's leadoff bouncer.

In the opener, Seaver (17-7) yielded all four San Diego hits before giving way to Taylor in the ninth. The Mets scored a fifth-inning run off Tom Sisk (0-7) on singles by Bud Harrelson and Tommie Agee around Seaver's sacrifice bunt.

Wise Pushes String to 39 Runless Frames

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Right-hander Rick Wise fired a four-hitter and smacked a home run and single Saturday as the Philadelphia Phillies drubbed Houston 7-0 for their fourth consecutive shutout victory.

Wise's shutout extended the Phillie pitching staff's string of scoreless innings to 39.

Richie Allen gave Wise (10-10), the only run he needed when he crashed his 26th homer in the first inning. Wise left off the third against Astros starter Tom Griffin with his third career homer and the Phils pulled away in the fifth with a four-run burst against reliever Jim Ray.

Wise ignited the rally with a leadoff single, took second on a sacrifice bunt and scored on Allen's two-out single. Allen continued to second on the throw to the plate, stole third and tallied on a single by Deron Johnson. Larry Hise's double and Ray's wild pitch sent two more runs across.

Gibson Tops 200 Strikeouts Again

ATLANTA (AP) — Bob Gibson scattered five hits and set a National League record—his seventh season over 200 strikeouts—in pitching the St. Louis Cardinals to an 8-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves Saturday.

HOUSTON (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies drubbed the Houston Astros 7-0 for their fourth consecutive shutout victory.

Boswell Handed Fine for Part in Twin Brawl

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pitcher Dave Boswell was fined an undisclosed amount by Minnesota President Calvin Griffith Saturday for his part in a highly publicized fight with two other Twins players.

Griffith, after a 45-minute meeting with the three participants, declined to say how much he fined Boswell.

"We decided a long time ago that no good would come of announcing fines," Griffith said. "But I wouldn't say it was a token fine."

Boswell said of the fine only that it was "enough."

Griffith said all the participants told their sides of the story and "they were very honest about it. They all jibe with the stories as written."

Boswell reportedly attacked the Twins Bob Allison outside a Detroit bar and knocked the big outfielder down.

Manager Billy Martin allegedly tried to restrain Boswell and the pitcher then landed on Martin. Boswell was knocked unconscious in the ensuing fight with Martin.

Griffith said Boswell apologized to Allison and Martin and both accepted. He said Martin and Allison then shook hands with Boswell.

In his official statement, Griffith said: "Billy Martin and I met with Dave Boswell and Bob Allison this evening. Apologies were offered and accepted all around concerning the incident that happened in Detroit."

"Boswell has been fined an undetermined amount for his part in this affair."

"I am confident our club will work together as a unit under my manager, Billy Martin, to win the American League pennant this season."

Asked if the amount of the fine had been decided since the word "undetermined" had been used in the statement, Griffith said: "Boswell knows how much it is and I know how much it is. Perhaps a better way would have been 'undisclosed'."

Griffith said it was the first time he had ever fined a ballplayer but believed it was "necessary for the fine to come from the top since it involved a ballplayer and the manager, and in cases like this you have to back the manager."

Martin said afterward: "Everything is a dead subject as far as I'm concerned on this incident. He's (Boswell) welcome back with open arms."

Martin said Boswell would start against Boston Monday night.

DEFENSE TURNS TIDE Bears Subdue Packers, 19-9

MILWAUKEE, Wis. (AP) — The Chicago Bears, stymied throughout the first half, unleashed a powerful, time-consuming ground game and capitalized on the breaks in the final two periods to defeat the Green Bay Packers 19-9.

Chicago moved ahead for the first time on Concanon's pass to Gordon, who had left defender Bob Jeter 10 yards behind. Percival's extra point gave the Bears a 10-9 advantage 5:47 into the third stanza.

Behind 9-3 at the intermission, the Bears scored on a 30-yard pass from Jack Concanon to Dick Gordon and three field goals by Mac Percival in the second half.

The Packers, who had things their own way in the first two periods although unable to score a touchdown, failed to move consistently after the half.

Chicago moved ahead for the first time on Concanon's pass to Gordon, who had left defender Bob Jeter 10 yards behind. Percival's extra point gave the Bears a 10-9 advantage 5:47 into the third stanza.

The drive was highlighted by Gale Sayers' 19-yard dash up the left sideline after grabbing a Concanon aerial.

Green Bay charged right back upfield before Major Hazell intercepted a Bart Starr pass and returned the ball 38 yards to the Packers' 15. Four plays later Percival kicked his second of four field goals and Chicago led 13-9.

With the Packers trying desperately to get back into the game, Percival booted two more field goals to close out the scoring.

It was the first loss in two starts this year for Green Bay, while Chicago upped its record to 2-1.

The Packers got on the scoreboard shortly after the opening kickoff when Mike Mercer drilled a 46-yard field goal. Mercer booted field goals of 13 and 47 yards for the Packers' other points.

Interceptions Aid Chargers

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — Veteran linebacker Rick Redman looted 24 yards into the end zone with an intercepted pass to give the San Diego Chargers a 10-7 victory over the Oakland Raiders in a penalty riddled American Football League exhibition game Saturday night.

Oakland had gone ahead 7-0 early in the second quarter when Darley Lamonica hit Warren Wells on a 32-yard pass play to cap a 14-play, 80-yard march.

Penalties cost the Raiders a 62-yard punt return for a touchdown by George Atkinson in the first quarter and a 14-yard touchdown pass to Wells in the second. They also nullified a 69-yard punt return by San Diego's Speedy Duncan.

Oakland was penalized 11 times for 136 yards and San Diego, 10 times for 143 yards as both clubs used rookies liberally.

San Diego's only other score came on a 33-yard field goal by Dennis Partee with 20 seconds left in the first half.

Rookie quarterback Marty Domres set up the score with passes of 18 and seven yards to Lance Alworth.

The loss was the third in a row for the defending Western Division champion Raiders while the victory was San Diego's second in three games.

Lamonica completed 13 of 28 passes for 165 yards while San Diego quarterback John Hadl was 13 of 27 for 167 yards.

League exhibition game Saturday night.

The interception came off quarterback Eldridge Dicksey with San Diego behind 7-3 in the third quarter. Defensive back Bob Howard threw a key block to enable Redman to score.

QB SPARKS RALLY Cards All Hart, Bump Steelers

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Quarterback Jim Hart brought St. Louis back behind in the first half Saturday night and the Cardinals went on to a 27-13 victory over the Pittsburgh Steelers in an exhibition game between two National Football League teams.

He directed the Cardinals to within range for a 40-yard field goal by rookie Gerald Warren that tied the score at 10-all in the second quarter, then passed 33 yards to John Gilliam for a touchdown with time running out in the first half that gave them the lead for good.

Chuck LaCourrette had brought the Cardinals from behind earlier when he picked up a blocked Steeler field goal attempt and streaked 91 yards for a first-period touchdown that offset a 12-yard Pittsburgh scoring pass from Dick Shiner to J. R. Wilburn.

Quarterback Charley Johnson iced the Cardinals' victory when he threw a scoring pass in the fourth period and Warren kicked his second field goal, a 21-yarder.

The Cardinals kept the Steelers in the hole much of the rest of the night, as field goals of 25 and 35 yards by Booth Lustig were the only points scored by the Steelers after the opening touchdown.

The Cardinals hit on 10 of 19 passes for 137 yards. The Steelers connected on 17 of 35 for 157 yards but got just the one touchdown that opened the game.

Saints Outlast Denver, 28-22

DENVER (UPI) — Veteran Bill Kilmer guided the New Orleans Saints to two quick touchdowns Saturday night and the Saints used the fearless foot of Tom Dempsey to withstand a late Denver Broncos rally for a 28-22 pre-season victory.

Kilmer, the eight-year veteran who won the starting quarterback spot with New Orleans last year, guided the Saints easily through Denver's rookie-studded defensive secondary. He retired for the night midway in the second period after taking the Saints to a 16-0 lead.

Kilmer put New Orleans ahead to stay with a six-yard toss to tight end Ray Poage with 8:52 gone in the first quarter. He also guided a 68-yard drive which was capped by a 10-yard burst by Tom Broadhead.

The Saints were unable to move under 12-year veteran Jim Nicoski or rookie Edd Hargett. But Dempsey, who has stunted toes and only one hand, kicked field goals of 54, 49 and 12 yards.

A 79-yard gallop by fullback Andy Livingston set up the Saints fourth quarter score, a one-yard sweep by Ernie Wheelwright.

The Broncos couldn't move under the direction of starter Pete Liske in the first half, but veteran Steve Tensi got Denver going in the second half with a series of long bombs.

RAMS-

The Rams failed to muscle any offense but the defense repulsed two bold Browns' threat in the first quarter.

Bill Nelsen maneuvered Cleveland into scoring range on the first series when he connected with Paul Warfield for 39 yards. But after Leroy Kelly spurted for 11 yards to give the Browns a first-and-goal situation on the seven, Gary Collins muffed a touchdown pass. The usually reliable pass-catcher from Maryland had Willie Daniel beat on a third-down pass from the five but Collins dropped the ball.

The Browns couldn't even pick up an easy three points because on the next play Gregg Schumacher broke through to block Cockroft's field goal attempt on the 12.

On the next series, the Browns picked up three first downs on passes to Collins (15), Warfield (12) and Warfield again (18), but then ran into another road when Daniel intercepted Nelsen's pass on the Rams' 4 and returned it 32 yards.

Like Collier, Allen elected to substitute freely. Les Josephson carried twice in the first period, gaining 10 yards before retiring for the night.

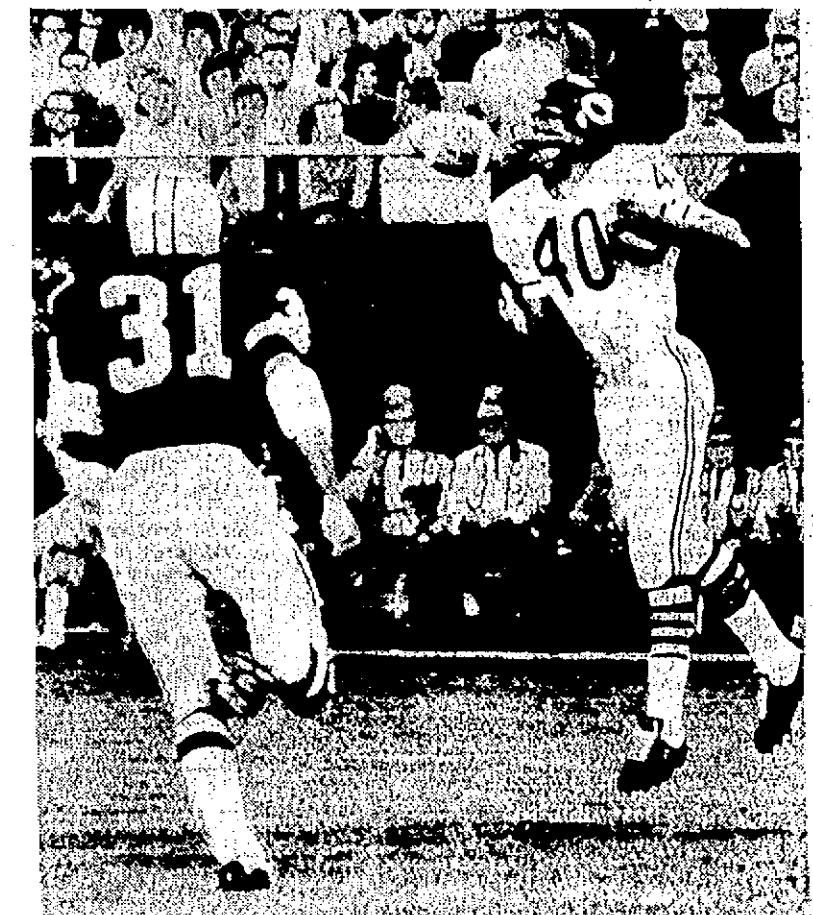

Larry Smith looked impressive before committing his costly fumble. The No. 1 rookie halfback from Florida netted 18 yards in five trips. Izzy Lang led all ball carriers, netting 34 yards in 12 plunges.

Leroy Kelly, the Browns' celebrated ball carrier, played only the first quarter and settled for 19 yards in four cracks.

Nelson completed 4 of 7 attempts for 34 yards; Rhyme was 7 of 9 for 52 and Ryan 1 of 6 for 11. Ryan also was dumped three times for losses of 28 yards.

Wendell Tucker was the leading receiver again, fielding five passes for 72 yards, a long gainer of 27 coming as the gun sounded on the Browns' 35.

Reserve Dave Jones, a rookie receiver from Kansas State, led the Browns with four catches for 45 yards. Warfield caught three for 69 yards.

SLIPPERY LITTLE PIGSKIN — Gale Sayers of Chicago leaps to catch short kickoff Saturday but fumbled seconds later when tackled by Packers' Perry Williams (31). Green Bay recovered and kicked field goal for early lead.

Stenerud Boots Three FGs Goals in Kansas City Win

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Kansas City, relying primarily on an opportunistic defense and the field goal kicking of Jan Stenerud, defeated the Cincinnati Bengals 23-7 Saturday night in an American Football League exhibition game.

A crowd of 24,513 saw the first professional football game ever played in Mississippi.

The Chiefs' defense accounted for one touchdown and set up another while Stenerud had field goals of 20, 18, and 22 yards.

Cornerback Emmitt Noland Smith set up Stenerud's first field goal in the second quarter with a 45-yard punt return to the Cincinnati 25. The 145-pound Smith, playing before a hometown crowd, had an earlier 89-yard punt return nullified by a penalty.

Reserve quarterback Mike Livingston, who played the second half in relief of Len Dawson, led the Chiefs to a touchdown early in the fourth quarter. Wendell Hayes scored on a one-yard plunge.

The march began when Johnny Robinson intercepted a Cook pass at the Cincinnati 42.

Cook got the Bengals rolling late in the game with a 55-yard drive. The big gainer was a 35-yard interference penalty on a pass from Cook to Tommy Smith. Jess Phillips scored on a three-yard plunge.

The win was Kansas City's third against no losses. Cincinnati is 0-2.

Eagles Sputter, Then KO Miami

MIAMI (AP) — Philadelphia sputtered least Saturday night and the Eagles delivered the National Football League's third consecutive knockout punch on the Miami Dolphins 14-10 in a preseason game at the Orange Bowl.

John Huarte, the Eagles' fourth quarter, Jim Niles barreled over from the 3-yard line to cut the deficit to 14-10 with 8:45 to play.

The Eagles' massive front four halted all Miami threats thereafter and Philadelphia joined Minnesota, which beat the American Football League Dolphins 45-10, and Chicago, a 16-10 winner here a week ago, as conquerors of the fourth-year expansion team.

Rick Norton stood in for regular quarterback Bob Griese and, although moving the ball well, failed to generate points for the Dolphins.

Philadelphia is 1-1 after losing to Atlanta 13-7 in its preseason opener last week.

The starting quarterback, Norm Snead, moved them 47 yards for the first touchdown, with Cyril Pinder going over from the three-yard line to score.

Miami's first three points came on a 19-yard field goal by Karl Kremser.

No. 2 quarterback was less than sensational but managed to hook up with speedy Harold Jackson on a 67-yard scoring pass that spurred the Eagles.

Drag Driver Dies in Freak Accident

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. (UPI) — A Texas man was killed in a racing mishap Saturday at Oklahoma City Raceway when the accelerator stuck on his AA-fuel dragster and he crashed through a chain-link fence.

The victim, James Cagle of Seminole, Tex., had earlier turned times of 7.20 seconds and speeds of 215-218 mph on the quarter-mile drag strip.

JETS-GIANTS PLAY BIG GAME TODAY

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — The New York Jets and New York Giants, who have had more than three years to think about their first meeting, clash today in a game that is expected to unleash emotions rarely seen in an exhibition game.

The game, before a sellout crowd of 70,784 that will cram into every corner of massive Yale Bowl, is expected to unleash the pent-up emotions of the members of the two teams who remember the not-so-long ago when the Giants were applauded and the Jets demeaned.

That, of course, is not the case anymore. The Jets have risen with Joe Namath to the No. 1 spot in pro football and reign as Super Bowl champions. The Giants, despite quarterback Fran Tarkenton's obvious talents, have lost their luster.

This game, which has been awaited since the merger of the American and National football leagues on June 8, 1966, then can be expected to pack the emotional wallop of a Super Bowl game despite comments of the coaches to the contrary.

"I can appreciate the spirit of the game and the people involved but the main idea of an exhibition game is to better your football club," Allie Sherman of the Giants has said during the week. "We've got to have a football team for the whole year."

"I want to make progress toward our final 40 men," Weeb Ewbank of the Jets has said during the week. "If I have to find out who's the 'better' between the players I've got to find out. If it's that or winning I'd rather do that."

At the same time, Ewbank also has admitted: "It'd be ridiculous to say we don't want to win. And I think that for the kids who have been old Titans and who have taken a lot of guff over the years it's bound to mean something more than an exhibition."

Arts & Letters Adds Travers to 'Horse of Year' Campaign

Associated Press

Arts and Letters took another powerful stride toward Horse of the Year honors Saturday by demolishing five other 3-year-olds in the 100th running of the Travers Stakes at Saratoga.

In making the Travers, oldest major stake race in this country, his fourth straight stakes triumph of the year, Arts and Letters reeled off a sizzling final quarter of a mile in 24 4/5 seconds for a romping 5 1/2-length victory over Dike.

Arts and Letters carried the silks of Paul Mellon's Rokeby Stable and jockey Braulio Baeza over the 1 1/4 miles in 2:01 3/5 to equal track and stakes record.

The Travers, worth more than $75,000-added for the first time since its inaugural running in 1863, added $69,290 to Arts and Letters' career bankroll, making it $436,472. This Travers carried a gross purse of $106,000.

Sent off as the 1-5 choice by a crowd of 28,016, Arts and Letters returned $2.40, 2.20 and $2.10. Dike running for Bull Hancock's Clairborne Farm, paid $2.40 and $3.10 and King Ranch's Distray, three-quarters of a length back of Dike, was $2.10 to show. There was a minus show pool of $16,776.48.

Night Invader, 9-to-1 shot, came from far behind to score an upset victory in the $13,050 Washington Park Handicap before 25,653 rain-soaked fans at Arlington Park.

The first 3-year-old winner of the one-mile race since 1960, Night Invader, scored a one-length victory over Out the Window on a track made sloppy by a mid-afternoon cloudburst.

Third was the 5-to-2 favorite, Rising Market, finishing 1 1/2 lengths behind Night Invader.

Fast Hilarious, ridden by the comeback-trying Bill Shoemaker, placed sixth in the nine-horse field. Tropic King II, an Argentine import, won the $84,900 William Penn Handicap at Liberty Bell Park by 3/4 length over Irish Dude.

Irish Dude was three-quarters of a length in front of Elmdorf Farm's Verbatim, the 3-2 favorite with the crowd of 15,204.

Tropic King II paid $16.60, $7 and $3.80 and ran the 1 1/8 miles over a good track in 1:50 flat, just three-fifths of a second off the track record.

Balustrade, winning for only the second time in 10 starts this year, and Ruffled Feathers, winning for the first time since May 12, each won a division of the $20,000-added Philadelphia Handicap at Atlantic City.

The Dodgers had opened fast against their one-time nemesis Larry Jaster, scoring four runs in the first inning, three of them on Bill Sudakis' 11th homer of the year and second in as many nights.

But the Expos whittled the lead to a single run by scoring once in the second and twice more in the third.

Now it was the fifth inning. Wes Parker, continuing his amazing comeback, singled and swiped second. Jaster got the next two batters, intentionally walked Jeff Torborg and then intentionally walked Osteen.

That loaded 'em for Maury.

"It was a fast ball, up high," said Wills, recalling the magic moment.

"I was just trying to hit the ball. Honestly, a home run was the furthest thing from my mind."

It was Maury's third homer of the year and 14th in his big league career.

"I almost had a grand slam at Dodger Stadium," Wills said, mentioning some of his more explosive moments. "It was against the Reds ... in 1965, I think ... But it hit the wall and went for a three-run double."

When Osteen drew the walk to load the bases, Alston popped a big smile.

"I was happy to see Maury up there," said Walter. "He might be the best man in a spot like that. He's been a great clutch player over the years and that's exactly the reason why."

Favorite Triumphs In Crosby

DEL MAR — West Coast sprint champion Kissin' George, topweighted at 127 pounds, overtook the filly Time to Leave in the final strides to win the $20,825 Bing Crosby Handicap in track record-equalling time of 1:07-4/5 for six furlongs Saturday.

Thrilling a crowd of 15,103, Jockey Bill Mahoney and Kissin' George, sent postward the 2-2 favorites, triumphed by a head in one of the most exciting renewals of the Crosby Handicap in the history of the sprint classic.

Canterbury Road, a well-backed second choice, finished third, 1/2 length behind Time to Leave after moving up turning into the stretch. Count the Green was fourth, followed by Triple Tux and Stalking Neke.

For Kissin' George, it marked his second success in the Crosby Handicap. He won the dash in 1967 while carrying 122 pounds, and last summer he was second, to Pretense, who also failed in 1:07-4/5. The track standard was established by Crazy Kid in this event in 1962. Zip Pocket owns the world record of 1:07-2/5 set at Turf Paradise in 1966.

Kissin' George rewarded his supporters with $5, $3 and $2.40. Time to Leave paid $4 and $2.60, and Canterbury Road $2.40.

"The victory was Kissin' George's third in six starts this year and over-all it was his 18th win in 28 lifetime outings. First money of $10,450 increased his career earnings to $237,012."

Albacore Water Changes Amazing

My firm resolution to keep albacore in the back of my mind and not bring that specie forward as long as the fish are out of range of Long Beach boats has to be broken, and for several reasons. First of all, at this writing late Friday, the longfins still were out of reach of Long Beach sportfishing and private boats unless a skipper elected to ride the swells for two or three days and keep searching.

A strange incident occurred off San Diego Tuesday and Wednesday. If you are a constant reader of our daily FISHIN' FACTS, you noticed that the albacore count went far down — close to 100 — on Tuesday's report, then up to more than 700 on Wednesday. And this is the odd thing about it: Most of the San Diego party boats were fishing in the same area both days.

Skippers reported that the surface temperature went up several degrees on Tuesday, then settled back into the low 60s the following day. When surface temperatures go above 70, depend on the albacore to do what comes naturally to them — go down to the cooler water.

Largest fish reported out of the San Diego landings Wednesday was a yellowfin tuna weighing 121 pounds, taken on Russ Izor's Truth, which Russ has been running as a charter out of Point Loma Sportfishing this year.

Jon Tribbey, El Monte, hooked the fish while trolling a jig and fought it for three hours. Russ then headed for home and it was the only fish of the day for passengers on the Truth.

THIS YEAR'S ALBACORE RUN, if it can be called a "run" is one of the worst for Long Beach area party and private boats. The 60-to-70-mile run each morning from San Diego landings is almost a nightmare for skippers there; they must leave about 11 p.m. to reach the fish at daybreak. Naturally, they must give their patrons four of five hours of fishing, then face that long haul to home port.

This statement may be out in left field, but it's entirely possible that the albies will give Long Beach and the surrounding area the big run-around this season. Skippers fishing Catalina and San Clemente Islands continue to talk about 70-72 degree water. If that doesn't change, the longfins might head around both islands and go north.

The first few albacore have been caught off Morro Bay already. The ocean off Morro Bay always seems to be a milling area for the albies before they go northward and then head across the Pacific toward Japan. While fish have been taken off the Oregon and Washington coasts in small numbers, skippers have had to go far out to reach the albacore.

Bill Craig, who at least makes a more thorough study of albacore habits than the average biologist, unless he is compared with Hal Clements, and both work at the Department of Fish and Game on Terminal Island, says there has never been a recent year in which such violent temperature changes have occurred.

BIOLOGISTS KEEP A CONSTANT CHECK on the temperature at the La Jolla Pier for the Scripps Institute and for the Fish and Wildlife Service. Craig says that there has been a variation this summer of from 58 to 72 degrees in surface water temperature there, and that is a most unusual range of mercury readings.

The same has been true for readings far out at sea where the game fish roam. Somebody raised the question just this week about maulin and broadbill being caught and others being sighted off Catalina and San Clemente Islands. They have asked, "Why aren't the albacore showing there?"

It must be remembered that albacore prefer a temperate climate and would rather swim in water reading in the low 60s, while billfish prefer tropical areas, with water 70 degrees and sometimes far above that. Members of the tuna family, particularly yellowfin and bluefin, are like the billfish. Sometimes albacore get into that warm water and are taken along with billfish and tuna.

Some unidentified reader, who at least thinks about albacore, sent a clipping to this department from The Seattle Post-Intelligencer. The clipping was brief, explaining that Westport, Wash., boats were having two-day runs and trying for albacore 50 to 60 miles outside the harbor. Ten fishermen on the China Clipper took 75 fish ranging from 20 to 25 pounds.

The proclamation includes a map of all areas, seasons, limits, hunting regulations and all that a person needs to know if he plans to hunt in Utah this year.

Richard J. Scott, Redondo Beach, doesn't have a green thumb for gardening, but apparently he has a hook on one finger for fishing. He's a real lucky one. He was dabbling an outfit off the Nautical Inn Dock at Lake Havasu City just before noon the other day when a 7 1/2-pound largemouth took his crawfish bait. For a few moments, Scott was on every part of the dock and finally had to climb into a boat and land his fish that way.

Just a few days before that, he hooked and landed a 7-pound catfish while fishing from the Havasu Cove dock.

Best and closest places for the week: Get into the San Bernardino Mountains. The DFG is planting trout in the high lakes like Arrowhead, Big Bear, Gregory and Green Valley. The fish aren't big, but you'll enjoy the scenery. Go on a weekday and you won't have so much company.

'Something I've Got to Do,' Small to Give Pro Golf Try

Terry Small, one of California's leading amateur golfers, has announced that he will turn pro, thus following by two days a similar statement by Long Beach city champion Bill McCormick.

Small, like McCormick, is 25 years old and a product of Long Beach courses. Small graduated from Poly, then went on to become an NCAA champion at San Jose State.

"I'm not 100 per cent sure I'm doing the right thing," said Small about his plans to try the tour. "It's something I've got to get into or out of my system now. I'm not getting any younger."

Small feels he may be "getting in on the ground floor" of a new golf format. He believes that there will be two tours next year, or soon after, and said, "this is the biggest single reason I've decided to turn pro."

The 6-foot-1, 210-pounder will make his debut in the play-for-pay ranks at the State Open in Santa Maria next week.

To win tour privileges, Small must finish near the top in a 54-hole sectional tournament in Oakland in early October, then in the top one-third in a 72-hole event at Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., one month later.

"The tour at times seems like one of those get-rich quick schemes," Small philosophized. "I realize how

REPORT ALBACORE CATCH

The first significant catch of albacore by patrons on a Long Beach boat came Saturday when Whitey Ashley, skippering the Fisherman, out of Pacific Landing, reported by radio that his passengers on a special charter had caught 32 longfins, all in the 25-30-pound class. Nearly 100 other fish were hooked but lost.

Whitey, an oldtime skipper for Pacific but who has been operating work boats to the oil islands, takes on an occasional shift at Pacific when there is a help shortage, did not reveal where he got the fish, but it is presumed that he was far south, near the 60-Mile Bank, where the San Diego boats have been fishing. He reported that he would dock sometime before midnight Saturday.

Lew to Make Pro Bow in Stokes Benefit Game

MONTICELLO, N.Y. (UPI) — Lew Alcindor, the three-time all-America from UCLA who was given a $1 million package to sign a National Basketball Assn. contract with the Milwaukee Bucks, will make his pro debut Tuesday night in the 11th Maurice Stokes Benefit Game at Kutscher's Country Club.

Alcindor was given permission to play in the game, which features some of the top stars in the NBA, Saturday by Wes Pavalon, chairman of the board for the Bucks.

"We are extremely pleased to have Lew make his debut in a game that means so much to all of us in the NBA," said Pavalon. "Maurice Stokes' courageous battle should be an inspiration to all of us."

Funds for the game are used to defray medical costs for Stokes, a former Cincinnati star who suffered brain damage following an injury and is still confined to a wheelchair.

Alcindor will be matched against Wilt Chamberlain, the Lakers' star who was named most valuable player in the game when he made his pro debut in it in 1959.

NBA stars appearing in the game include Oscar Robertson (Cincinnati), Billy Cunningham (Philadelphia), John Havlicek (Boston), Zelmo Beaty (St. Louis), Wes Unseld (Baltimore) and Willis Reed and Walt Frazier (New York).

Astros Trail Only Cincy in Getting Runners on Base

By BUD GOODE

The Houston Astros are one of the most improved teams in the National League. The Astros are getting on base at a .340 clip, second only in the Western Division to Cincinnati.

On base average, defined by Computer Corner as the percentage of batters who reach first base on a hit, walk or hit-batter, is more important than a team's slugging percentage and is a good reason why the Astros are currently in the race for the Western Division title.

Statistics show back-to-back singles win many more games than a double.

To measure this On Base Average through games of Aug. 12, Computer Corner poured the season statistics into our Univac sports analyzer with these results.

Romanians Gain Challenge Round

Combined News Services

The Nastase, 23-year-old former shepherd boy, defeated Mark Cox of Britain, 3-6, 6-1, 6-4, 6-4 Saturday and sent Romania's tennis team into the challenge round for the Davis cup for the first time.

The Romanians won, 3-2. They led 2-1 at the start of the final day but Graham Stilwell kept Britain's hopes alive by dowing Ion Tiriac, Romania's strong man, 6-3, 6-2, 6-4.

The Romanians next will meet the United States for the trophy at Cleveland, Sept. 13-21.

They are the first team from a Communist country to reach the challenge round.

A sellout crowd of 7,000 surrounded Wimbledon's No. 1 court and was kept on edge as Britain's hopes rose and then faded.

The result finally was settled by strong nerves. Nastase, after losing the first set of the deciding singles, raised his game while Cox became flustered and faltered badly, especially his backhand.

Wildly excited Romanians danced and shouted as Nastase hit the last few winning points.

It took Cox only 17 minutes to win the first set, and it looked as if Britain was heading for the challenge round for the first time since 1937.

But then the English left-hander lost control of his backhand. Nastase won four games in a row at the start of the second set and his confidence went sky high.

The agile Romanian sped around the court, hitting spectacular retrieving shots and volleying faultlessly.

Australian Mrs. Margaret Smith Court played brilliantly Saturday to win the 70th Pennsylvania Lawn Tennis championship with a 6-4, 6-4 victory over Virginia Wade of England at the Merion Cricket Club.

Astros Trail Only Cincy in Getting Runners on Base

By BUD GOODE

The Houston Astros are one of the most improved teams in the National League. The Astros are getting on base at a .340 clip, second only in the Western Division to Cincinnati.

On base average, defined by Computer Corner as the percentage of batters who reach first base on a hit, walk or hit-batter, is more important than a team's slugging percentage and is a good reason why the Astros are currently in the race for the Western Division title.

Statistics show back-to-back singles win many more games than a double.

To measure this On-Base Average through games of Aug. 12, Computer Corner poured the season statistics into our Univac sports analyzer with these results.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

Rose Favored to Retain Title

World bantamweight champion Lionel Rose of Australia remains a slight — but apparently unshaken — underdog for his 15-round title defense Friday night against the Nov. 1 challenger, Ruben Olivares of Mexico City.

The 21-year-old Olivares, who holds the 188-pound division title of Mexico, opened at odds of 8-5 when the match was first signed, and they haven't shifted much since.

Over-all, it is a record operation for veteran promoter George Parnassus.

Rose, also 21, signed for a guarantee of $100,000, highest ever for a bantamweight.

Parnassus envisions gate receipts of $250,000 and 16,000 onlookers when the match goes on in the Forum in suburban Inglewood.

Olivares has a $30,000 guarantee, plus some psychological advantage in that most of the fans will be Mexicans from below the border and from Los Angeles' immense Latin-American population.

Such partisanship will be no novelty for Rose. He weathered the same support, and a riot that followed, when he won a split decision and retained his title last Dec. 6 against Mexico's Chaco Castillo in the Forum.

The Olivares bout will not be televised in the United States but will be screened live via satellite to Australia.

Both Olivares and Rose have impressive records. This will be the fourth defense of the title since Rose won it in 15 rounds from Fighting Harada Feb. 26, 1966, in Tokyo.

Rose has won 31 fights, eight by knockouts, and lost but two. The latter were early in his career. He has never been stopped but he has been floored several times.

Olivares, a happy-go-lucky son of a well-to-do family, has remarkable statistics. He has never been beaten and 49 of his 50 victories were by knockouts. Two years ago he boxed one draw. But Ruben, too, has hit the deck on two occasions.

"I can't wait to jump up and see what happened," Olivares says with a wide grin.

Rose and his manager, Jack Rennie, say they are not overawed in the least by Olivares' knockout record. Both scoff at Ruben's prediction that he'll stop Lionel inside nine rounds. "We will try to box Olivares for 10 rounds and I won't be surprised if Lionel knocks him out before the 15th," Rennie declared.

Moon, Pafko Added to Oldtimers Lineups

Wally Moon, the first Dodger to pass his "screen" test at the Coliseum, and Andy Pafko, a hero for the Pacific Coast League Angels and Dodgers, have joined the impressive rosters for Sunday's first Oldtimers Game at Anaheim Stadium.

The preliminary to the Angels-Detroit game will match former Angel and Dodger greats for three innings.

Pafko is eligible to play for both sides, but he'll be in an Angel uniform, sharing a spot in an outfield that includes Jimmy Piersall, Ken Hunt, Albie Pearson, Clarence Maddern, Lou Novikoff and Max West. Pafko played for the PCL Angels in 1943, when he batted .356 with 18 homers and 118 RBI.

Pafko's great year with the Angels earned him advancement to the majors, where he remained for 17 years and 1,852 games, posting a lifetime average of .285. His best major league season was .312 with the Cubs in 1948. He was traded to the Dodgers in 1951, and finished with the Braves from 1953-1959.

Moon, rookie of the year with the Cardinals in 1954, became a Dodger in 1959 and led the pennant drive for a club which finished seventh the previous season.

Although he batted left-handed, Moon wasn't discouraged by the Coliseum measurements of 390 feet to right-center. He immediately adopted an inside-out swing and took aim on the famed left field screen, 42 feet high but only 251 feet away.

Roy Campanella will manage the Dodgers, whose roster includes such other 1959 pennant and World Series stars as starting pitcher Sandy Koufax, Norm Larker, Don Zimmer, Chuck Essegian, Johnny Podres and Clem Labine.

Choice seats still are available at the Anaheim Stadium box office, open daily, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., at United California Banks in Orange County, Buftons Department Stores, Mutual Agencies and Wallachs Music City.

LOOKING for tag ends of info about the great dinner for the astronauts, I came on something that could give us a little extra fact to worry.

Seems that on the trip out, it was discovered that the joint chiefs, the secretaries of Army, Navy and Air Force, plus other senior defense officials, had all somehow made it on the same plane.

With all the defense eggs in one basket, one mishap could have left us leaderless, defensively. Realizing this, wiser heads arranged to have the defense vip's go back in separate planes after the dinner.

I thought this sort of imprudence was abolished years ago after a plane went down in Oregon carrying the governor and the next two ranking state officials to their deaths. Maybe there oughta be a law.

LONG Beach, incidentally, landed only five on the dinner invitation list, so don't feel too humiliated if you didn't get a bid.

The LBigwigs who made the list were: Larry Kavanan, head of Systems Associates and one of the group that first decided on the moon space objective; Jack Brown, magazine distributor and great personal friend of Pres. Nixon; Dan Ridder, co-publisher of the Independent Press-Telegram; Dr. John C. Longren, Nixon's personal physician, and Jack Magowan, head of McDonnell-Douglas aircraft division here.

The biggest beef over the invitation selection seems to be about the alleged slight to U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston. There was also some grumbling because Mayor Sam Yorty of L.A. wasn't on the program. I sort of go along with the complaint on Cranston. As for Yorty, it could have gone either way but the program was long enough, wasn't it? The real speaking was by the astronauts themselves, and weren't they terrific?

HORTICULTURAL note: Seems that several Memorial Hospital employees, including Controller Darrell Brown, have had a lesson this summer in lawn grass identification.

They all planted hybrid bermuda (dwarf tiffany green) in their back lawns. Presently they were troubled by what some thought was a weed, others a grass, that sent up wheat-like sheafs that made the lawns look seedy.

In midsummer, when lawns were fully infested by the unwelcome invader, Mrs. Brownell took a sample to a nursery and solved the mystery. The stuff growing in the lawns was hybrid bermuda, exactly what they had all planted! Because it spreads by roots, they thought it didn't have seeds.

LONG dry, Elsinore Lake in nearby Riverside Co. has a lot of water now—a fact which Rev. A. H. Atkins says is not widely known.

Rev. Atkins, longtime operator of a wedding chapel in North LB, has built a home overlooking the lake. He says that when he tells people about it, they always say: "Oh, that's the lake that dry, isn't it?"

Elsinore was re-filled in 1964, but the rainy weather of last winter really watered it up. Spillage from the Railroad Canyon Reservoir, Salt Creek and the San Jacinto River raised the level of the lake 20 feet vertically and doubled its area.

That's straight dope, and it ought to stop those dumb remarks that bother the reverend.

DRIFTWOOD — Questionnaire sent around to employers has this line: "How many people do you employ, broken down by sex?" ... The crime surge has hit the golf courses. YOUTH SEEK RECREATION CENTER SUPPORT
Belinda Wright, Clyde Evans Urge Signatures

By JACK McFARREN
Staff Writer

Westside teen-agers have collected more than 500 signatures on a petition to the City of Long Beach asking for the construction of a westside youth recreation center.

The petition, which asks for a "multi-purpose recreation center . . . similar to the new recreation center on California Avenue," has also received the support of the Westside Neighborhood Center.

THE NEED for the neighborhood center was first discussed at the July 24 meeting of the Westside Neighborhood Center Committee.

Teen-agers Lemuel Bedford, De Kaven James, Michael Sargeant and Butch Waring made the proposal.

The teen-agers spoke of what they saw as the lack of adequate programming at the parks, no dance sites, and the unavailability of Stephens Junior High School or Silverado Park for teenage group sponsored activities.

The committee voted unanimously to endorse the petition. It was also decided to ask for a meeting with 7th District Councilman Wayne Sharp, the Long Beach Recreation Commission and local park directors after 1,000 signatures were obtained.

According to Clyde Evans, youth coordinator for the Westside Neighborhood Center, about 300 teen-agers use the present store front Westside Teen Center facility at 2525 Santa Fe Avenue.

A band of modern-day "river rats," headed by Don Davis, a Long Beach architect, Saturday started a run down the rapids-strewn Colorado River as part of the Powell Expedition Centennial.

The raft trip is part of a month-long celebration of the exploration by Major John Wesley Powell, who explored the Colorado River and Grand Canyon a century ago.

Among the honored guests at the Powell celebration were Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., and Arizona Gov. Jack Williams, who took part in the dedication of a monument to Major Powell's expedition in Grand Canyon National Park.

More than 1,000 spectators turned out to watch the dedication and unveiling of the little-known, one-armed explorer who made the 1,000-mile river trip in 1869 aboard four wooden boats.

Powell, a self-educated geologist, later became father of the U.S. Geodetic Survey.

AMONG THE "river rats" recreating Powell's trip are Davis; Don Skeele, operations coordinator for THUMS, Long Beach, of Los Alamitos; Bob Livingston, Los Alamitos, a student at California State College at Fullerton; Ray

DAVE BROWNELL TAKES WHALE OF A RIDE ABOARD 'ORKY,' THE KILLER WHALE

This was supposed to be one of those funny stories. Dolphin training from a dolphin's eye view. Girl reporter plunges into a dolphin tank, flailing around in her first wet suit and snorkel, flipped by Flipper and nosed by Spray.

But it didn't work out that way. The more Marineland trainers Larry Clark, Cliff Moore and Art Thomas talked, the less humor there seemed to be.

ANIMAL TRAINING is serious business. It's love, patience and understanding.

There's nothing cute or quippish about the relationship that builds up between trainer and his animals. There is much that is rewarding and touching.

"The chief qualities we look for in our trainers are a real love of animals and common sense," said Ray Cribbs, director of training at Marineland. "A little psychology is helpful, too. These animals are sneaky little devils, and you have to be able to outsmart them. It's as hard to train new trainers as it is to train the animals."

One well-seasoned "outsmanter" is Larry Clark, head trainer, who works primarily with pilot whales and striped dolphins.

"Training in the beginning consists mostly of watching the animals and waiting for them to perform a natural behavior you want to elaborate on," Clark said as we stepped onto the trainer's platform of the top level tank. Immediately, assorted whale and dolphin grins greeted us—and our bucket of fish.

We were to wait for Breezy, a junior member of the pilot whale team, to create a stunt deserving of a few squid.

Among the whale's natural behaviors are lobtailing (slapping the water with his tail) and breaching, when he leaps out of the water and lands on his side.

Veteran performer Bubbles was eager to join in and, unprompted, nimbly performed a number of tricks, one eye always on the blue bucket.

"Get out of here, Bubbles," Clark ordered, stamping his foot and motioning to the other side of the tank. Bubbles backed off, and did a beautiful tail walk. The trick requires the animal to lift herself straight up and out of the water, and propel herself across the tank with a waltz-type motion of her tail.

Two seconds later Bubbles was back for a reward. She didn't get it.

In the meantime, Breezy breached. Clark blew his whistle as soon as she hit the water, then rewarded her generously.

The whistle means the animal performed correctly.

"This is really what the training is all about," Clark said.

The animals quickly learn unusual antics bring a

Santa Monica Dorymen Win Festival Race

A Santa Monica dory team won first place Saturday in a race across the San Pedro Channel to Santa Catalina Island highlighting the day's California Sea Festival activity.

College students Randy Allen and Mike Kent made the 26-mile crossing in 5 hours and 28 minutes to beat four other lifeguard surf dories across the finish line.

Long Beach teams comprised of Rick Hoss and Scott Hagee, who crossed the channel in five hours, 43 minutes; and Roger Coulter and Pat Flynn, six hours, four minutes, finished in second and fifth place respectively.

Dr. Herb Barthels and Rick Barthels, of Santa Barbara, finished third with a time of five hours, 49 minutes, and Henry Stuart and Mike Maury, of the Los Angeles County Lifeguard Service, took fourth place with a time of five hours, 59 minutes.

THE NEWPORT CANOE CLUB won a similar race when its outrigger out-distanced a Hawaiian team for a first-place time of four hours, 56 minutes.

The Kauai Canoe Club placed second with a straight five hour time, the Balboa Canoe Club placed third with a time of 5:12, and the Marina del Rey entry finished last with a 5:15 time.

Merv Larson, of Carpinteria, a 1958 U.S. Olympic kayak team member, had the distinction of beating the winning lifeguard dory to Avalon by 30 minutes.

He used a surf ski to make the cross-channel trip, and arrived earlier than anyone had expected, and, therefore, landed on the island before a welcoming committee had time to get to the beach.

The petition, which asks for a "multi-purpose recreation center . . . similar to the new recreation center on California Avenue," has also received the support of the Westside Neighborhood Center Committee.

THE NEED for the neighborhood center was first discussed at the July 24 meeting of the Westside Neighborhood Center Committee.

Teen-agers Lemuel Bedford, De Kaven James, Michael Sargeant and Butch Waring made the proposal.

The teen-agers spoke of what they saw as the lack of adequate programming at the parks, no dance sites, and the unavailability of Stephens Junior High School or Silverado Park for teenage group sponsored activities.

The committee voted unanimously to endorse the petition. It was also decided to ask for a meeting with 7th District Councilman Wayne Sharp, the Long Beach Recreation Commission and local park directors after 1,000 signatures were obtained.

Salvation Army's Camp Meet Starts

More than 600 persons were on hand in the Concert Hall at Municipal Auditorium Saturday night for the opening session of the 12th Annual Long Beach Camp Meeting of the Salvation Army of Southern California.

The speaker was Prof. Lee Fisher of Ashbury College, Wilmore, Ky., psychologist, teacher, lecturer and minister, who spoke on "Where the Action Is."

"Jesus is a manifestation, instead of a reaction," Fisher told the audience, "motivated by His convictions, rather than by His reaction to circumstances and people."

At the opening session were Brigadier and Mrs. Orval A. Taylor, Southern California divisional leaders, and Capt. and Mrs. Bram Tillsley, education officers at the S.A. Officer's Training School, Toronto, Canada.

Friday night Commissioner Gosta Blomberg, territorial commander in Sweden, will deliver the keynote address. He will speak again next Sunday afternoon and evening.

Wednesday will be "Youth Night," featuring two musical groups, "The Saints," and "The Neophonic Army."

Peggy Coburn, noted contralto soloist, will sing this afternoon.

Tonight and next Sunday evening six army bands will lead downtown parades with traditional, rousing S.A. music, converging at Long Beach Boulevard and marching into the auditorium.

Santa Monica Dorymen Win Festival Race

A Santa Monica dory team won first place Saturday in a race across the San Pedro Channel to Santa Catalina Island highlighting the day's California Sea Festival activity.

College students Randy Allen and Mike Kent made the 25-mile crossing in 5 hours and 26 minutes to beat four other lifeguard surf dories across the finish line.

Long Beach teams comprised of Rick Hoss and Scott Hagee, who crossed the channel in five hours, 43 minutes; and Roger Coulter and Pat Flynn, six hours, four minutes, finished in second and fifth place respectively.

Dr. Herb Barthels and Rick Barthels, of Santa Barbara, finished third with a time of five hours, 49 minutes, and Henry Stuart and Mike Maury, of the Los Angeles County Lifeguard Service, took fourth place with a time of five hours, 59 minutes.

THE NEWPORT CANOE CLUB won a similar race when its outrigger out-distanced a Hawaiian team for a first-place time of four hours, 56 minutes.

The Kauai Canoe Club placed second with a straight five hour time, the Balboa Canoe Club placed third with a time of 5:12, and the Marina del Rey entry finished last with a 5:15 time.

Merv Larson, of Carpinteria, a 1968 U.S. Olympic kayak team member, had the distinction of beating the winning lifeguard dory to Avalon by 30 minutes.

He used a surf ski to make the cross-channel trip, and arrived earlier than anyone had expected, and, therefore, landed on the island before a welcoming committee had time to get to the beach.

A band of modern-day "river rats," headed by Don Davis, a Long Beach architect, Saturday started a run down the rapid-strewn Colorado River as part of the Powell Expedition Centennial.

The raft trip is part of a month-long celebration of the exploration by Major John Wesley Powell, who explored the Colorado River and Grand Canyon a century ago.

Among the honored guests at the Powell celebration were Sen. Barry

Goldwater, R-Ariz., and Arizona Gov. Jack Williams, who took part in the dedication of a monument to Major Powell's expedition in Grand Canyon National Park.

More than 1,000 spectators turned out to watch the dedication and unveiling of the new monument to the little-known, one-armed explorer who made the 1,000-mile river trip in 1869 aboard four wooden boats.

Powell, a self-educated geologist, later became father of the U.S. Geodetic Survey.

AMONG THE "river rats" recreating Powell's trip are Davis; Don Skeele, operations coordinator for THUMS, Long Beach, of Los Alamitos; Bob Livingston, Los Alamitos, a student at California State College at Fullerton; Ray

B-2 LONG BEACH, CALIFORNIA, SUNDAY, AUGUST 17, 1969

Unitized oil plan serves as a model

WITHOUT QUESTION, the California Lands Commission made a popular decision when it refused to lift the oil-drilling moratorium on offshore state-owned lands in the Santa Barbara Channel.

In rejecting recommendations of its own staff and federal officials, the commission gave due attention to the fears of the local community. More than six months after the first eruption of oil in channel water, Santa Barbarans are still nervous about the potential ruin to their beach.

THE COMMISSION acted with discretion in continuing to refuse permits for wells in the submerged lands within its jurisdiction. It did not, however, imply that the ban will never be cancelled.

Indications are that the Santa Barbara Channel oil operations were not subjected to the careful supervision and control such as are spelled out in the contract between the city of Long Beach and THUMS Long Beach Co.

One big difference is that in Santa Barbara there is no agreement for unitized production.

This is the most effective way, as Long Beach has demonstrated, to assure uniformity and centralized control for the whole project. In the case of Santa Barbara, it would end the conflict between federal and state jurisdictions.

THE REASONS that impelled federal officials to insist on continued drilling remain mysterious. Financial returns can't be all that important. Possibly the explanation is in Washington precedent. Except for the Navy, federal agencies never have shown much concern for the rights of local communities.

It would be instructive to know exactly what went on at inquiries by a panel of government officials in Santa Barbara, first last February and again in May.

Both of these sessions were held in secret. California's Freedom of Information Committee is demanding to know why. In particular the committee seeks information on operational foul-ups. Further, it questions whether the panel complied with statutes requiring full disclosure.

Herbert G. Klein, federal director of communications (and a former newspaper executive in a coast city, San Diego), said the meetings were closed "in line with a longstanding policy for such technical groups." This seems to us a nonanswer, worse than none at all.

In Bob Geivet's story on the Orange County budget, the following sentence appears: "The county public library outlay will be almost $3.5 million and will be financed by a tax rate of 17 cents, which applies to rural areas only."

Your readers should know that the Orange County Public Library serves far more than the rural areas of the county. Taxation is applied, and service is provided to 15 of the county's Recently in Bangkok on his around the world tour, President Nixon assured the innocent, fearful and good people of that threatened country that this country, the United States of America would stand behind them from Communist aggression and internal subversion. For the President of a country whose dollar has gone to pot, hopelessly in debt, with Communist Front organizations operating in the open from coast to coast, with a Supreme Court that permits Communists to work in our Defense plants and Communist newspapers sold on our street corners, such transparent oratory must sound most gratifying to the American people.

How can our President assure them safety from external & internal Communist subversion when he can't or won't do it at home?

RAY LARSON

Long Beach

They blow in both of his ears

WASHINGTON — Hints have appeared in print that Attorney General John Mitchell, the professional pragmatist, has displaced Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare Robert Finch, the professional politician, as President Nixon's closest adviser.

Actually, both are close to the President, Mitchell at his right ear, Finch at his left ear. Both men are advisers extraordinary who see the President frequently and hear from him even more frequently. Nixon is on the phone at all hours of the day and night to both Mitchell and Finch.

Both are strong-willed men, Cabinet stalwarts who have become power centers inside the Nixon administration. Inevitably, a rivalry has grown up between them. Mitchell has been heard to refer to Finch scornfully as "Secretary Pink."

Mitchell favors what the political pros call "the Southern strategy." He seeks to woo the South without offending the North, moving boldly to maintain law and order but following a cautious civil rights policy acceptable on both sides of the Mason-Dixon line.

In this way, he hopes to combine the strength of Richard Nixon and George Wallace into a national Republican majority. Mitchell is supported by South Carolina Sen. Strom Thurmond, whose mission will be to lure the Wallace crowd away from Wallace, and by Thurmond's man in the White House, Harry Dent.

THE TWO MEN from Maryland, Vice President Spiro Agnew and Republican National Chairman Rogers C. B. Morton, also favor the Southern strategy. So does the President's legislative chief, Bryce Harlow, who must placate the powerful Southern committee chairmen on Capitol Hill.

Finch believes the Republicans must appeal to the nation's moderate majority, the silent Americans, who have always swayed elections in the past. He is wary of trying to please both Southern conservatives and Northern moderates at the same time. He recalls, perhaps, the marriage proposal George Bernard Shaw received from Isadora Duncan.

"With your brains and my beauty," she wrote, "think what wonderful children we would have."

"But what if they should have your brains and my beauty?" replied Shaw.

Finch is a little afraid that attempts to please the South instead will displease the North, and vice versa, thus producing results opposite to what Mitchell seeks.

BOTH MEN HAVE had their victories and defeats in the backroom maneuvering over policy. Most recently, Finch wanted to issue a statement opposing the anti-school desegregation provisions which Mississippi Rep. Jamie Whitten inserted into the HEW appropriation bill.

Mitchell not only blocked the statement but paid a personal call upon House Republican leaders to make sure they didn't oppose Whitten. Result: The anti-integration features were approved by the House, a victory for the Southern strategy.

Not long afterward, however, Finch sold the President on a sweeping overhaul of the federal welfare system. Mitchell was appalled at the possibility that the program would double the number of people collecting welfare payments.

At a four-hour Cabinet meeting held at Camp David, the presidential retreat in the Catoctin Mountains, Mitchell led an assault on the welfare reforms. He contended that the nation is in a "conservative era"; that the voters would rebel over a $4 billion welfare program; that it would be a mistake for a Republican President to increase welfare.

Vice President Agnew took up the cry, and almost everyone in the Cabinet agreed. Only Secretary of Labor George Shultz and anti-poverty boss Donald Rumsfeld sided with Finch. Yet Finch won the day.

Meanwhile, the President continues to listen, alternately, with his right ear, then his left ear.

MINNESOTA's Eugene McCarthy denied our report that his marriage was on the rocks and that he had spoken to his wife Abigail about a divorce.

"You must be kidding!" he told the first reporter who reached him for comment.

We weren't kidding.

To avoid a disagreeable affair, however, the McCarthys have decided upon a private separation rather than a public divorce. They are now living quietly apart.

ON THE SUBJECT of denials, ex-Congressman Perkins Bass has taken exception to our report that Sen. Ted Kennedy had accompanied his late brother, John F. Kennedy, to Chapquidick Island to use a secluded beach owned by the Bass family.

Bass seemed particularly eager to deny that he had ever met Ted Kennedy or that his father, the late Gov. Robert Bass of New Hampshire, was "close to the Kennedys."

Sometimes it pays to look behind a denial. Bass happens to be lobbying for an appointment to the Interstate Commerce Commission, and it wouldn't help his prospect to become identified inside the White House as a friend of the Kennedys.

What Others Say

A river becomes not a thing of mystery but a carrier of sewage. Woodlands must give way to freeways. Granite cliffs contain energy so why not grind them up and increase our G.N.P.?

—Associate U.S. Justice William O. Douglas, criticizing exploitation of resources.

This strategy could almost be called a sneak attack on the Constitution if it did not more closely resemble an assault by the Marx Brothers on Fort Knox.

—Sen. Joseph Tydings, D-Md., on the state legislative apportionment petitions received by Congress.

Where the 'forgotten citizen' at Apollo?

PRESS SLOBS searching for peer group identity at the Apollo 11 astronauts state dinner Wednesday found themselves, inevitably, looking at each other. There were no other rent-a-suit types in view.

But, as all the world knows now, the gala was otherwise tainted beyond redemption as a true state dinner with the admission of some 70 faded movie personalities.

Armstrong, Aldrin and Collins, of course, made the Century Plaza fête stellar — far above the power of those yesteryear luminaries to add or detract. Here were silver screen anachronisms in a space age tribute.

And so it was a Nixon dinner more than a state dinner. There's no quarrel with that. The President, like generals, can design his own uniform, cut his own swath, set his own style, make his own bed. But the Nixon instinct for good politics comes in question.

WE'RE TOLD Gov. Reagan had 25 dinner tickets at his disposal, Sen.

George Murphy 10 and HEW Secretary Robert H. Finch 10. Many of the movie types, who made their scores in a strikingly remote part of this moon century, carried right wing banners in Reagan's 1966 campaign and modified-conservative ones for Nixon.

BOB HOUSER

And so the suspicion arises that their bids helped close a political accounting.

But one wonders why the President did not people his extravaganza rather or with proxies for the American citizen. Send as my representative, if you please, a module electrician and his wife, but not Buddy Rogers, Cesar Romero or Les Brown (of the band of renown).

Honor, for me, perhaps a teen age boy and girl if only for the symbolic obeisance to the generation to whom the planets now belong. Spare me a live rerun of Andy Devine, Don DeFore or Tony Martin.

IT HARDLY seems conceivable that President Nixon meant Randolph Scott and Gene Autry as the "forgotten Americans" of his 1968 campaign speeches, hazy though their celluloid images may be. Why not, instead, some real forgotten Americans on his guest list?

No 1,500-person roster at such an affair could ever be snipe proof but some rosters could be easier to live with. Maybe it would have been better to have more blacks in the group — black Americans, that is, not the blacks in the foreign diplomatic corps.

The impossibility and the imperfection of the guest roster was apparent in the mystery of who was responsible for its less-inspired parts. Nobody wanted the credit.

Logistics were imperfect too. We couldn't have landed the Eagle with this kind of operation. Of course they didn't spend 10 years planning it either.

AND SO, HOW did it all come out? Beautiful. Irresistible heroes, music and food. A crisp program, moving speeches and an inspirational revelation of the nature of our land.

There were even a couple of good guy movie people — Bob Hope, whose work for American servicemen predates the moon, and Jimmy Stewart, who flew combat bombers and is an Air Force Reserve brigadier general.

The imperfect logistics hit me with too much bounty. I dutifully gorged on the stroganoff dinner at the buffet provided for the press who were scheduled to watch the state dinner proceedings only by television. No sooner had I finished than I was informed I had been put on a special list to dine with the precious 1,500 a couple of floors away. But indigestion was no part of these considered observations.

Is this any way to run a railroad

ON MY RECENT TRIP to the Soviet Union, I took a ride on the Moscow subway. It's without a doubt one of the best systems in the world.

Up to seven and eight million people a day ride it. The stations are very clean and well-lighted. The air is cool and clear, and I was told the temperature doesn't vary more than five degrees, summer or winter.

The trains run every 90 seconds. A ride costs only five kopeks, the equivalent of five cents. The system operates with a minimum of personnel — a rider just puts his money in a turnstile and goes on through. He can then ride as long or as far as he wants — there are no transfers.

The system is very well-used. The ride is smooth and fast. I couldn't help but wonder why we can't do as well. The nation of the Apollo moon program ought to do better.

The truth is that we have spent a lot of money on transportation, but overall we've built a very unbalanced system.

In 1955, Congress set up a trust fund to pay for the interstate highway system. The money comes from gasoline and tire taxes. It is given to state and local governments on a 90-10 basis — the federal government paying the 90 per cent.

The program has worked very well. The federal government spends $5 billion a year for interstate highways, and when the system is completed in about 1975, we will have spent about $70 billion on it.

BUT IN THIS same period, we have spent almost nothing on public mass transportation. In fact, we are the only major developed country in the world that has let its public transportation system decay.

The number of people riding our failing transit systems has dropped year after year. Hundreds of transit companies have gone out of business, despite the fact that fares have tripled since 1945.

The public suffers from intolerable traffic congestion and the waste is appalling.

The average American spends an hour in traffic for every eight hours on the job. And it's worse in the big cities. In Manhattan, where a horse and buggy once could travel along at about 11 miles an hour, an automobile now can average about seven miles an hour.

The lack of public transportation hurts the old, the young, and the poor. It prevents many people from getting to jobs, and from getting old welfare. It robs all of us of our time and money.

Our public transportation systems, simply are not going to be revived unless the federal government puts money into them on a least a two-thirds federal, one-third local basis.

PRESIDENT NIXON recently announced an urban transit program, pointing out that unless we make public transportation an attractive alternative to private car use, we will never be able to build highways fast enough to avoid congestion. He reiterated the present sad situation, and agreed that local government does not have the money to do it alone.

But he then proposed a transit program compromise resulting from months of battling by his advisers — it is sure to fail. I say so, and I think almost every mayor and governor in the country familiar with the problem will agree.

President Nixon wants to spend $200 million this year, followed by annual increases to $300 million next year, $400 million the next year, $500 million the next year, $600 million the next year, and $1 billion in 1974-75.

His plan calls for the spending of $10 billion over the next 12 years. He says it will "give state and local governments the assurance of federal commitment necessary both to carry out long-range planning and to raise their share of the costs."

But it won't. His plan calls for the money to come from congressional appropriations of general tax revenues. President Nixon doesn't have a transit program, only hopes and promises. Even the housing program passed by Congress has been funded at only one-third the level authorized.

What I favor, and Secretary of Transportation John Volpe favors, and most mayors think is necessary is a solidly-based program financed by a trust fund. The money would come from continuing part of the excise tax on new cars, and possibly also from gasoline and tire taxes as the interstate highway program is completed.

This would give local and state governments the assurance they need to plan and put up their own money for transit systems.

We weren't kidding. To avoid a disgraceful affair, however, the McCarthys have decided upon a private separation rather than a public divorce. They are now living quietly apart.

ON THE SUBJECT of denials, ex-Congressman Perkins Bass has taken exception to our report that Sen. Ted Kennedy had accompanied his late brother, John F. Kennedy, to Chapquidick Island to use a secluded beach owned by the Bass family.

Bass seemed particularly eager to deny that he had ever met Ted Kennedy or that his father, the late Gov. Robert Bass of New Hampshire, was "close to the Kennedys."

Sometimes it pays to look behind a denial. Bass happens to be lobbying for an appointment to the Interstate Commerce Commission, and it wouldn't help his prospect to become identified inside the White House as a friend of the Kennedys.

Not long afterward, however, Finch sold the President on a sweeping overhaul of the federal welfare system. Mitchell was appalled at the possibility that the program would double the number of people collecting welfare payments.

This strategy could almost be called a sneak attack on the Constitution if it did not more closely resemble an assault by the Marx Brothers on Fort Knox.

AND SO, HOW did it all come out? Beautiful. Irresistible heroes, music and food. A crisp program, moving speeches and an inspirational revelation of the nature of our land.

There were even a couple of good guy movie people — Bob Hope, whose work for American servicemen predates the moon, and Jimmy Stewart, who flew combat bombers and is an Air Force Reserve brigadier general.

The imperfect logistics hit me with too much bounty. I dutifully gorged on the stroganoff dinner at the buffet provided for the press who were scheduled to watch the state dinner proceedings only by television. No sooner had I finished than I was informed I had been put on a special list to dine with the precious 1,500 a couple of floors away. But indigestion was no part of these considered observations.

Is this any way to run a railroad

ON MY RECENT TRIP to the Soviet Union, I took a ride on the Moscow subway. It's without a doubt one of the best systems in the world.

Up to seven and eight million people a day ride it. The stations are very clean and well-lighted. The air is cool and clear, and I was told the temperature doesn't vary more than five degrees, summer or winter.

The trains run every 90 seconds. A ride costs only five kopeks, the equivalent of five cents. The system operates with a minimum of personnel — a rider just puts his money in a turnstile and goes on through. He can then ride as long or as far as he wants — there are no transfers.

The system is very well-used. The ride is smooth and fast. I couldn't help but wonder why we can't do as well. The nation of the Apollo moon program ought to do better.

The truth is that we have spent a lot of money on transportation, but overall we've built a very unbalanced system.

In 1955, Congress set up a trust fund to pay for the interstate highway system. The money comes from gasoline and tire taxes. It's given to state and local governments on a 90-10 basis — the federal government paying the 90 per cent.

The program has worked very well. The federal government spends $5 billion a year for interstate highways, and when the system is completed in about 1975, we will have spent about $70 billion on it.

BUT IN THIS same period, we have spent almost nothing on public mass transportation. In fact, we are the only major developed country in the world that has let its public transportation system decay.

The number of people riding our failing transit systems has dropped year after year. Hundreds of transit companies have gone out of business, despite the fact that fares have tripled since 1945.

The public suffers from intolerable traffic congestion and the waste is appalling.

The average American spends an hour in traffic for every eight hours on the job. And it's worse in the big cities. In Manhattan, where a horse and buggy once could travel along at about 11 miles an hour, an automobile now can average about seven miles an hour.

The lack of public transportation hurts the old, the young, and the poor. It prevents many people from getting to jobs, and from getting off welfare. It robs all of us of our time and money.

Our public transportation systems simply are not going to be revived unless the federal government puts money into them on a least a two-thirds federal, one-third local basis.

PRESIDENT NIXON recently announced an urban transit program, pointing out that unless we make public transportation an attractive alternative to private car use, we will never be able to build highways fast enough to avoid congestion. He reiterated the present sad situation, and agreed that local government does not have the money to do it alone.

But he then proposed a transit program compromise resulting from months of battling by his advisers — it is sure to fail. I say so, and I think almost every mayor and governor in the country familiar with the problem will agree.

President Nixon wants to spend $200 million this year, followed by annual increases to $300 million next year, $400 million the next year, $600 million the next year, $800 million the next year, and $1 billion in 1974-75.

His plan calls for the spending of $10 billion over the next 12 years. He says it will give state and local governments the assurance of federal commitment necessary both to carry out long-range planning and to raise their share of the costs.

But it won't. His plan calls for the money to come from congressional appropriations of general tax revenues. President Nixon doesn't have a transit program, only hopes and promises. Even the housing program passed by Congress has been funded at only one-third the level authorized.

What I favor, and Secretary of Transportation John Volpe favors, and most mayors think is necessary is a solidly-based program financed by a trust fund. The money would come from continuing part of the excise tax on new cars, and possibly also from gasoline and tire taxes as the interstate highway program is completed.

This would give local and state governments the assurance they need to plan and put up their own money for transit systems.

L.A.C. SAYS What does a man cost his family?

By L.A. COLLINS, SR.

It is doubtful if one in 50 families has ever tried to estimate what it would cost the family to live without the father. Just what does it cost to keep a man clothed, fed and housed? It would be easy to estimate the cost for a single man. But the percentage of total family expenses is something else. Actually the man's cost is a small percentage of the average family expense. But few families have any idea of how their expenses would be paid if the man's paycheck were eliminated.

The average man and wife seem to feel it is indelicate or morbid to discuss such an eventuality. The natural tendency is for people to avoid unpleasant subjects. There is a natural tendency to feel, "It can't happen to us" — or — "There is plenty of time." People who are careful to keep social appointments and to keep their credit good seem to have a blank spot when it comes to keeping the family's future safe if the family producer is suddenly taken in death.

TAKE FOR example an average family of four. If the father is taken away, did he expect the wife and mother to go to work? If so, what provision is there for looking after the two young children? Just how much less money will the family need when there are only three instead of four? It is not a pleasant subject for family discussion. But it is the most important discussion a man and wife can have.

Actually the man's presence in the family is a minor part of the family expense. The average family food bill is about 20 per cent of its income, so on that basis one-fourth, or 5 per cent, would be saved if the man were not fed. The average man's clothing bill is a small part of the family budget. The wife and children make up most of it. There would be no saving on rent if the wife and children were to continue living on the same standard.

When you put down all the family expenses for four and figure out how much would be saved if the man's cost were eliminated you find his cost is very small. The only way a large saving would be accomplished would be by greatly reducing the standard of living for the wife and children surviving. And that is exactly what happens in the great majority of cases.

IT IS TRAGIC that so few men are realistic enough to plan for their loved ones should the husbands be taken away. Most men are completely selfish in that they look ahead to the good things they will do with their families — but ignore what the survivors will do if the fathers are not with them. We say it is completely selfish, because there are things each father can do to protect the family from drastic curtailments should his income be cut off.

An example of this selfishness is the carelessness men show in neglecting to make a will so they may know who will be guardians of their children should both father and mother be taken. Another example is the way men delay taking out adequate insurance policies with annual monthly payments to the family provided. Very few men know how insurance policies they now have would be paid in event of their death. The husband and wife rarely sit down and try to plan what would be done if one of them were taken away. Result is when tragedy strikes it is more tragic because the surviving one must plan alone.

Planning for the future is something most people put off until tomorrow. For many of them when tomorrow comes it is too late. The plan of saving a little each month and establishing an insurance estate is put off because seemingly today's necessities are more important. But the people of today who have economic security are the people who planned long ago to provide it.

There is no more important factor in a family's life than analyzing and planning for what would happen should the father's income be taken away. It would be illuminating to most families to realize how little it takes to keep a man in the family and how much it would take to keep the family if he were taken away.

Don't expect a concert from violin spiders if they hitch-hike to city

From Our L.A. Bureau

VIOLIN SPIDERS have not turned up in Long Beach, but it could happen. For if their musical gifts have yet to be demonstrated and their reputation for homicide is exaggerated, their talent for getting around is well proved.

One plausible theory of how they materialized last spring in Sierra Madre is that two or three came from their native Brazil or Chile in somebody's luggage. And something like that seems to have happened when two more showed up in Alhambra. They were found in the Pacific Telephone building. Probably they got there in a little green truck.

Dr. Gerald Heidbreder, the county health officer, had hoped to block this nomadic impulse with an extermination order, but obviously he didn't move fast enough. Now entomologists, the scientific specialists in this field, believe violin spiders may turn up anywhere.

TWO OF THEIR characteristics seem to make that probable. They don't need water, so they may go where they please; and though they may be dangerous if they think they're being attacked, they're naturally shy and seclusive.

Like the black widow, the violin spider doesn't like open fields. If humans or animals are around, he will crawl into the shadows and hide. He seems to feel much more secure in an attic, a basement, or any other place offering peace and solitude. So somebody moving wire or lumber or books could unknowingly transport a mama spider, loaded with unborn progeny, to wherever these goods are being delivered.

Can such a timid fellow be dangerous? Mostly, no. Dr. Findlay Russell of the USC School of Medicine, an authority on snakes and spiders, led a one-day assault in Sierra Madre with tweezers, flashlights and vials. All told, they found 170 spiders there. Yet nobody had been bitten.

BUT THE VIOLIN spider can bite, and when he does, he injects a venom that stuns his victims and leaves them weak and pained. Some of the publicly stirred by the spider's arrival suggested he was as dangerous as a small rattlesnake, but this was probably misleading. People die of a rattlesnake's bite. The spider is no killer.

Still, the fellow is not recommended for junior's insect jar. That's why it's wise to be able to identify these guests from south of the border, to recognize the violins — those markings on the back of the head, at the front of the body.

Dr. Heidbreder says if you find something looking like that and want to know, send it to the Health Department. But douse it first in rubbing alcohol.

He would just as soon not open the package and find a live one.

Being queen wasn't enough for Jane so Aunt Anna gave her a distinction

By STERLING BEMIS

THE CRAZE for nudity in the movies has gone too far. It has invaded the privacy of our family.

My late Aunt Anna wouldn't have stood for it a minute. It was she who traced the genealogy of the Gray family (my paternal grandmother was a Gray) and discovered we were descendants of Adam and Eve, a distinction shared with only a few billion distant cousins.

Aunt Anna started with the Garden of Eden, which she pinpointed on the map as a cattle-raising and sheep-herding ranch twixt the Tigris and Euphrates rivers. (The family should never have let it go. Today it could be subdivided into thousands of lots suitable for split-level GI homes in the $20,000-and-up range right off the freeway, fifty miles from downtown Baghdad.)

IT DIDN'T disturb Aunt Anna that Adam and Eve were the first nudists. After all, the Lord didn't care until Eve listened to that stupid snake and gave her husband an apple from the Tree of Knowledge. And they ate of the forbidden fruit and were sore ashamed of their nakedness and put on some fig leaves and THEN the Lord was angry and served the first eviction notice.

(It should not be considered sacrilegious to point out that the Creator would have had his hands full if he tried that today. A good lawyer would get an injunction to stay the eviction and carry the case all the way to the Supreme Court and no doubt get a ruling that the accused should never have been compelled to testify against themselves.)

In her research Aunt Anna combed through the Book of Genesis and never missed a begat. Then she prowled through the castles and keeps of England and frightened more uniformed guards than Robin Hood did.

She emerged with a new claim to fame for Lady Jane Grey. Lady Jane was already a historic prodigy. As a teen-ager she was thoroughly at home in Latin and Greek and had a smattering of Hebrew, Arabic and Chaldee. At age 16 she was queen for nine days, a reign ungraciously terminated with an ax.

AUNT ANNA DISCOVERED we were direct descendants of Lady Jane Grey, whom nobody has any record that there were any children of.

Our complete genealogy covered a period of forty centuries. We young Grays (on our paternal grandmother's side) grew up in an aura of vicarious thrill from the fact our original ancestors were real swingers. But we kept in the family the story about how our great-great-great (160 times) grandmother romped around the bosky doils of Eden in her birthday suit. It didn't seem the sort of thing to mention when strangers were in the parlor of a Sunday evening.

All these years we've had our little secret. But now see what's happened. Almost every movie that emerges from Hollywood, Copenhagen, Stockholm or the sultry suburbs of Rome has at least one Adam and an Eve or two showing their natural born pelts.

IN HOLLYWOOD, they no longer say: "Don't call us, we'll call you." The new lines are: "Don't call us. We'll call you — and come as you are."

Almost daily we read interviews with budding starlets and budding actresses, all opening wide their innocent blue eyes as they relate how they wrestled with their consciences until Art conquered their inhibitions.

A typical case is that of Judy Brown. In a Danish-American film, Judy plays a simple lesbian appearing mother-naked in several scenes, including one in a shower with another girl.

"It's honest, and it's what's happening in the world today," Judy says. "I think this is the first American film to take the cheap element out of the sex theme."

The writer hopes that if Judy should ever decide she needs another shower she'll take it at home. Preferably alone. With the curtain pulled.

It just doesn't seem fair for all the film folk to keep cutting into Great-Great-Great (160 times) Grandma Eve's act. Can't they be honest in private?

Still, the fellow is not recommended for junior's insect jar. That's why it's wise to be able to identify these guests from south of the border, to recognize the violins — those markings on the back of the head, at the front of the body.

Dr. Heidbreder says if you find something looking like that and want to know, send it to the Health Department. But douse it first in rubbing alcohol.

He would just as soon not open the package and find a live one.

Being queen wasn't enough for Jane so Aunt Anna gave her a distinction

By STERLING BENIS

THE CRAZE for nudity in the movies has gone too far. It has invaded the privacy of our family.

My late Aunt Anna wouldn't have stood for it a minute. It was she who traced the genealogy of the Gray family (my paternal grandmother was a Gray) and discovered we were descendants of Adam and Eve, a distinction shared with only a few billion distant cousins.

Aunt Anna started with the Garden of Eden, which she pinpointed on the map as a cattle-raising and sheep-herding ranch twist the Tigris and Euphrates rivers. (The family should never have let it go. Today it could be subdivided into thousands of lots suitable for split-level GI homes in the $29,000-and-up range right off the freeway, fifty miles from downtown Baghdad.)

IT DIDN'T disturb Aunt Anna that Adam and Eve were the first nudists. After all, the Lord didn't care until Eve listened to that stupid snake and gave her husband an apple from the Tree of Knowledge. And they ate of the forbidden fruit and were sore ashamed of their nakedness and put on some fig leaves and THEN the Lord was angry and served the first eviction notice.

(It should not be considered sacrilegious to point out that the Creator would have had his hands full if he tried that today. A good lawyer would get an injunction to stay the eviction and carry the case all the way to the Supreme Court and no doubt get a ruling that the accused should never have been compelled to testify against themselves.)

In her research Aunt Anna combed through the Book of Genesis and never missed a begat. Then she prowled through the castles and keeps of England and frightened more uniformed guards than Robin Hood did.

She emerged with a new claim to fame for Lady Jane Grey. Lady Jane was already a historic prodigy. As a teen-ager she was thoroughly at home in Latin and Greek and had a smattering of Hebrew, Arabic and Chaldee. At age 16 she was queen for nine days, a reign ungraciously terminated with an ax.

AUNT ANNA DISCOVERED we were direct descendants of Lady Jane Grey, whom nobody has any record that there were any children of.

Our complete genealogy covered a period of forty centuries. We young Grays (on our paternal grandmother's side) grew up in an aura of vicarious thrill from the fact our original ancestors were real swingers. But we kept in the family the story about how our great-great-great (160 times) grandmother romped around the bosky dells of Eden in her birthday suit. It didn't seem the sort of thing to mention when strangers were in the parlor of a Sunday evening.

All these years we've had our little secret. But now see what's happened. Almost every movie that emerges from Hollywood, Copenhagen, Stockholm or the sultry suburbs of Rome has at least one Adam and an Eve or two showing their natural born pelts.

IN HOLLYWOOD, they no longer say: "Don't call us, we'll call you." The new lines are: "Don't call us. We'll call you — and come as you are."

Almost daily we read interviews with budding starlets and budding actresses, all opening wide their innocent blue eyes as they relate how they wrestled with their consciences until Art conquered their inhibitions.

A typical case is that of Judy Brown. In a Danish-American film, Judy plays a simple lesbian appearing mother-naked in several scenes, including one in a shower with another girl.

"It's honest, and it's what's happening in the world today," Judy says. "I think this is the first American film to take the cheap element out of the sex theme."

The writer hopes that if Judy should ever decide she needs another shower she'll take it at home. Preferably alone. With the curtain pulled.

It just doesn't seem fair for all the film folk to keep cutting into Great-Great (160 times) Grandma Eve's act. Can't they be honest in private?

Southland Delights Japanese Trio

By MIKE PHILLIS
Staff Writer

"Each day was a succession of highlights," two Japanese high school students and a teacher said of their month-long visit to Long Beach.

Thus Kitaru Kozuka, 38, Koichi Nakamura, 18, and Mieko Ito, 17, from Yokkaichi, Long Beach's Japanese sister city, summed up their stay in the International City.

The trio has collected many souvenirs and keepsakes since their arrival on July 21, but most treasured when they fly home Tuesday will be the memories of the land and people of America.

Miss Ito felt time passed more quickly on this side of the ocean, which can probably be explained by the whirlwind tour of the attractions of Southern California.

As guests of the City of Long Beach, they watched the Long Beach Sea Festival.

The enormity and scope of Disneyland surpassed even what they had heard about it. Marineland, Knott's Berry Farm and a host of other attractions fascinated them.

On a tour of Long Beach Poly High School they found the American students' school life quite different from their own. The various modes of dress contrasted sharply with their own schools' rigid dress regulations, usually uniforms.

Nakamura, student body president of Yokkaichi Senior High School, thought American schools had better educational facilities and equipment than Japanese schools, and teachers had a much greater rapport with their students.

"American students have a much closer relationship with their teachers," he said. "They can discuss subjects with them without trouble."

Kozuka, a teacher at Yokkaichi Commercial High School, agreed. He said Japanese teachers are much more aloof. What little discussion there is lacks the freedom of expression in American classrooms, he said.

Nakamura said Japanese schools are changing, though, and student demonstrations are used there, too, to help speed up those changes.

As student body president, he is leader of student organizations dedicated to changing the schools.

"We have many student organizations in Japan, and they're not all peaceful," he said with a smile. "In Japan the school administrators usually listen to the students and often cooperate. But sometimes the older teachers are against change and we might have to resort to less than peaceful means of attaining our goals."

One recent accomplishment Nakamura gained for students in his school was the right to let their hair grow to about the length of an average American student's hair. Before all students had to have their hair cut in a butch type haircut.

Kozuka, not considered one of the antichange teachers, said schools in Japan have a much greater sphere of influence on students outside of school hours than in America. Students are subject to school authority even while home.

Miss Ito explained, "In Japan a date with a boy is not so free as here. We do not go out alone with a boy, but only in groups. And we must be in by 7 p.m., except during the summer when we can stay out past 8 p.m. with our parents."

The visitors, each of whom were housed by two Long Beach families for two weeks thought American families exhibit a more relaxed, jovial relationship than do the Japanese. "Americans are always joking with each other," they said.

The teacher found many things he liked better in America. He thinks the lawns and gardens are prettier.

"I would really like to change the system of my life when I get back to Japan," he said.

To help make the change, he is taking back to Japan with him some doormats that say "Welcome," plans for a more pleasure oriented life, and ideas for installing a sprinkler system in his garden. Of course, this will be along with the 37 key chains and 15 bracelets he's taking to his teaching colleagues at Yokkaichi Commercial High School.

The oriental trio's date with America will end Monday night at a sayon-ara party given by the sister city committee of Long Beach. Tuesday they will jet back to the land of the rising sun.

Next year two Long Beach high school junior students and a teacher will visit Japan as the guests of Yokkaichi. If they have time on their whirlwind tour, they might look through Yokkaichi for a garden and lawn that looks remarkably like those in Long Beach.

NO CASUAL HOBBY, THIS

Executive Builds Machines That Fly From Plans No Model Maker Draws

A successful businessman with a successful hobby is Dallas Moran of 3502 Gilbert Drive in exclusive Huntington Harbour.

Moran, a World War II Navy veteran who was one of seven men of a crew of 700 who survived the sinking of the Monarch during the invasion of Okinawa, builds model airplanes.

Of course Moran isn't satisfied with building the little plastic or balsa wood models that sit on mantles to be admired.

HE BUILDS real, flying models controlled from the ground by an expensive radio set.

"The radios alone cost about $400 to $600," Moran says, "and it takes about 400 or 500 hours to build one."

"So, it's not a casual hobby."

How does a guy get into such a complex, expensive hobby?

Well, Moran got into it about 10 years ago when his wife, Joanne, and his doctor decided he was working too hard and should relax.

"I WAS working night and day," Moran, president and chairman of the board of a large cosmetics firm, says. "I used to take off for Palm Springs every once in a while and just relax for a couple of days."

"The doctor and Joanne decided it needed more than that. Finally she said, 'Didn't you used to make model airplanes?' I answered 'Yes' and that started it."

With only the experience gathered from putting together balsa wood and glue models, Moran started his new hobby. He soon found that the hobby had changed—or rather, Moran had changed.

"I WASN'T satisfied with that kind of thing," he says. "So I started putting together radio-controlled planes. Then I decided I could design better planes than the model makers could. So I tried."

And, apparently he succeeded. Moran starts with the plans used to build the big airplane. From these he makes his design. Then, in his workshop, he puts the pieces together.

And they fly.

Boy, do they fly.

Moran has several hundred model planes now.

DALLAS MORAN AND AMPHIBIAN MODEL PLANE

ONE OF HIS most treasured is a model of the old Ford Tri-Motor, probably the most versatile airplane ever built. It hangs, along with seven other models, from the rafters in his garage.

"I have to finish 'striping' it," he says, "to make it look like the old corrugated aluminum fuselage and then it will be ready."

When finished it will be displayed on Orange County's Movieland Museum of the Air since Moran had promised it to the famed movie stunt flyer Paul Mantz before he died.

Will it fly? Of course, it will.

"It takes off at 70 miles an hour, flies at 70 miles an hour and lands at 70 miles an hour."

WITH THEIR radio controls, Moran's planes will do anything the big planes will do and, he says, "sometimes they will do things the big ones can't."

He is a charter member of the B.I.R.D. Club, formerly of Long Beach, now meeting in Signal Hill and flying off its own private field in Wilmington near the San Diego Freeway and Avalon Boulevard.

B.I.R.D. stands for Beginners in Radio Drones, although most of the 300 members are not beginners any more. Half of them are airline pilots using their hobby as a postman's holiday.

EARLIER this year Moran modified his hobby to fit in with the water-oriented community he lives in in Huntington Harbour.

Since he had a dock at the rear of his home, his neighbors thought he ought to have a boat. Moran and his wife weren't too sure for several years, but earlier this year they had a "dock party" for their new yacht.

About 50 people gathered at the Moran domicile in January to greet the new boat that was coming "up from Newport."

AT THE RIGHT psychological moment the boat hove into view and pulled up to the dock.

You guessed it. It was a model.

It was a 53-INCHES-long model of the "Dai Jo", a 31-foot cabin cruiser owned by Moran's Huntington Harbour neighbors, Clem and Lillian Sampson.

The tiny replica, powered by two motorcycle batteries, weighs 27 pounds and "will do anything the Sampson's boat will do except carry passengers."

This Moran is a versatile fellow.

mouthful of fish. "It's amazing how inventive they can be," said Clark. "Each time they do something new, they get a reward. Then it's a question of waiting for them to repeat that same behavior."

While the true key to training is the bucket of fish, one can't help noticing a touching relationship between trainer and animal.

"The animals know me, all right, and probably work better for me than for anyone else. Just as a horse can sense an inexperienced rider, these animals know when there's a new trainer, and they start trying to get away with murder."

"But they never will have the blind devotion for their trainers that a dog has for his owner. They work for their fish first, and for us second. But I think they have some fondness for us. And when you think what a short time they have been domesticated, their friendship with humans is really quite remarkable."

Killer whales, said trainer Cliff Moore, learn very quickly.

Watching Moore ride round the tank astride Orky's 3,000 pound back shatters the stereotype idea of the vicious killer whale ruthlessly mangling anyone who crosses his path. Apparently docile and happy, Orky veers left when slapped on the right side and turns right when slapped on the left. It took him just three months to learn this, as well as to give Moore a kiss, talk into a microphone, lobtail and breach on command and perform an impressive tail walk.

But even after months of preparing Orky, Moore knows he's working with a "tame wild animal." Every ride is a risk.

ALTHOUGH SEA LIONS are less unusual, and therefore appear less spectacular, trainer Art Thomas said they are no less difficult to prepare.

"These animals can be 'broken' in a year, and will do their tricks," Thomas said, "but they're not reliable in a show for two years. They're spooky until they're well trained."

What Thomas teaches his little comies to do in no way resembles their natural behavior. Everything they do must be taught step by step.

"People all think seals balance naturally," Thomas added. "They don't. They have a certain facility for it because of the flexibility of their necks, but it takes lots of painstaking training."

As with the whales and dolphins, Thomas' sea lions know only love and approval—and fish.

"Sea lions are very independent," said Thomas. "I like to think my animals are fond of me, but basically they don't become attached to people."

But people certainly become attached to them, as evidenced by the thousands of enthusiastic spectators who oooh and aaah daily over the well-polished Marineland shows.

RIVER TRIP

Ferguson, State Water Commissioner, Ontario; and Bob Quist, river pilot, of Ft. Lee, Ariz., operator of the raft trip program.

The band will ride 35-foot, outriggered rafts through almost 100 miles of rapids and yellow, boiling water before they emerge Friday at Temple Bar, near Lake Mead.

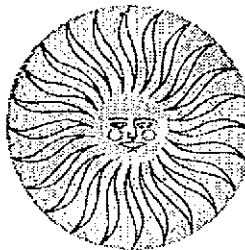

The river trip will be a far cry from the one taken by Powell, who lost two of his wooden boats when they were smashed on the rocks and lost three members of his party to marauding Indians.

Similar river trips in the same location were a favorite pastime of the late President John F. Kennedy and his brothers, the late Senator Robert Kennedy, and Edward Kennedy, Massachusetts Senator.

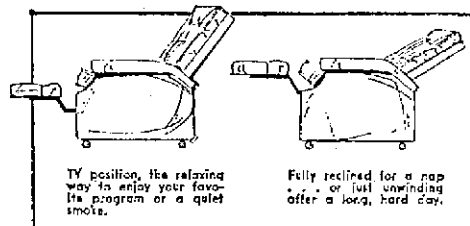

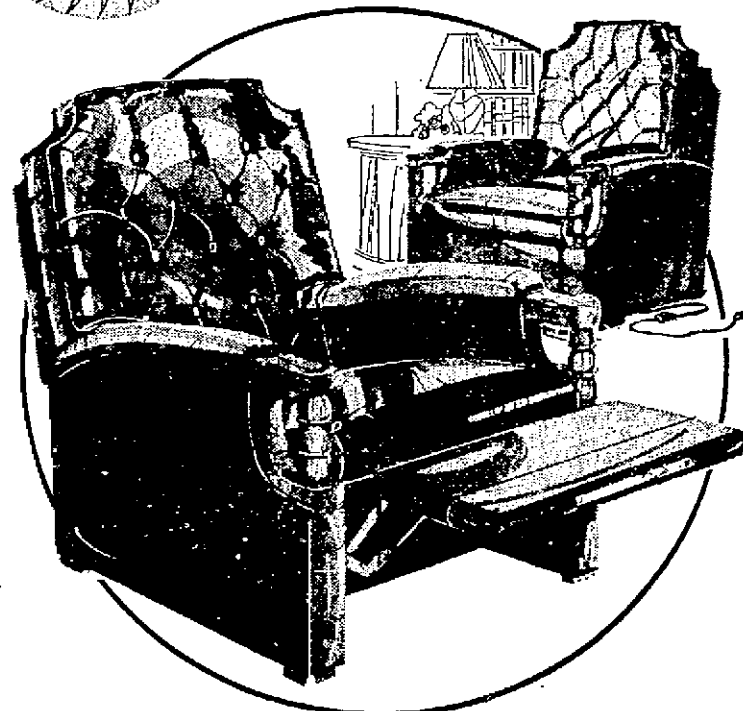

IN FACT, 16 members of the Kennedy clan led by Edward Kennedy celebrated last July by shooting the rapids in this area.

The "river rats," recreating Powell's historic journey, will travel through an area of awesome sights—sandstone pinnacles, white-capped rapids, prehistoric cliff dwellings and multi-colored rock faces—before moving into the Lake Mead Recreational area near Las Vegas, Nevada.

The raft trip will attract more than 12,000 float-boaters to the Colorado and Green River rapids during 1960, where they will experience headlong plunges, roller-coaster spins and water fall rides which have become a new attraction in the west.

Compton High Students TEEN DRIVE to Study Nursing Skills

From Our L. A. Bureau

Compton High School students will soon study nursing at Harbor General Hospital.

The arrangement between the school district and the hospital needs only the signature of Chairman Ernest Debs of the Board of Supervisors.

In voting for the program, other supervisors agreed it could be useful to both parties. The hospital gets some services free, and some students, after trying it out, may find that nursing is the right job for them, officials said.

The agreement is for an indefinite time, but either party may scrap it after any school year with a full semester's notice. No money is involved.

Hospital Superintendent William Barr helped work out the details for the county.

It's just not enough," Evans said. "Most adults seem to think the Boys Club and the parks are enough. They just aren't," he added. "We need a place for the older kids."

Evans said many of the west side teenagers had to use the California Avenue recreation center for activities.

Evans said about 25 people were distributing the petition and it was meeting with a good response from all segments of the community.

Judge Davis Is Retiring

Karl Lynn Davis 68, a Superior Court judge for Orange County since September 1957, said Friday that he will retire next month, rounding out 12 years on the bench at Santa Ana.

Hopefully, Judge Davis continued, he will be able to accept temporary assignments to the bench in various California counties

WEEK IN REVIEW

Religious Rioting Sweeps N. Ireland

By DON HASTINGS
Staff Writer

The World

Northern Ireland's simmering Protestant-Catholic antagonism boiled over last week with bloody rioting in Londonderry, Belfast and Armagh. Bullets and fire bombs claimed several lives and hundreds were wounded. Mobs also battled with fists, rocks and sticks. British troops were rushed in to quell the violence.

The crisis stemmed from Catholic demands for equal voting rights and better housing and jobs. Prime Minister James Chichester-Clark called it "the most serious and malevolent threat" in the nation's history.

RUSSIAN AND RED CHINESE troops clashed again in their continuing border confrontation. Each side accused the other of starting the shooting. There were casualties on both sides. The Communists also rattled atomic sabres, hinting at the possible use of nuclear weapons.

ARTILLERY DUELED ACROSS the Suez Canal again last week and Israeli jets pounded Egyptian and Jordanian gun positions in another flareup of the Middle-eastern conflict. Israeli planes also demolished sections of the Ghar Canal, one of Jordan's main irrigation systems. Arab commandos blew up an Israeli oil pipeline in Port Haifa Friday.

PRICES AND PROFITS ON ALL merchandise were frozen by the French government to give the nation's economy a breathing spell to adjust to devaluation of the franc, which went into effect at the beginning of the week. The freeze will continue until Sept. 15.

NORTH AND SOUTH KOREAN troops skirmished along the armistice line last Sunday. Each side charged the other with instigating the attacks.

PRIMARY RESPONSIBILITY for the June 3 collision of the U.S. destroyer Frank E. Evans and the Australian aircraft carrier Melbourne was the smaller ship's, a joint, twonation board of inquiry concluded Friday. The board also said that part of the blame rested on the carrier because of poor signalling procedure. The Australian navy announced that the skipper of the Melbourne, Capt. John P. Stevenson, will be court-martialed. A U.S. Navy board is now determining whether officers of the Evans will be court-martialed. Seventy-four Americans were lost in the collision.

ROMANIAN COMMUNIST PARTY delegates ended their 16th Congress Tuesday by unanimously electing Nicolae Ceausescu to another five-year term as secretary-general.

DEVALUATION OF THE FRANC "is going well," according to French Finance Minister Valery Giscard d'Estaing, who said $40 million worth of currency had returned to the nation in the first week of the value cut. That was on Wednesday. On Thursday, French labor leaders threatened nationwide strikes unless workers receive wage increases to offset the 12.5-per cent devaluation.

The War

Communist forces ended the seven-week lull in fighting by attacking more than 100 Allied installations in South Vietnam. The action was described as the heaviest in six months.

Casualties were high on both sides. American losses were estimated at more than 200 killed and 1,000 wounded. Red losses included an estimated 1,000 killed. (American casualties for the week ended Aug. 9, announced Thursday by the U.S. Command in Saigon, were the lowest in months with 96 reported killed).

ANOTHER 3,500 AMERICAN servicemen, including 2,700 Marines, left Vietnam last week, bringing to more than 17,000 the number pulled out under President Nixon's troop cutback, expected to total 25,000 men by the end of the month.

RENEWED ATTACKS BY North Vietnamese and Viet Cong dimmed hopes for fruitful peace negotiations in Paris. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, chief U.S. negotiator, charged at Thursday's session of the talks that the Communists have "been preparing systematically for a new offensive" while the U.S. is withdrawing troops.

The Nation

America's moonmen, the crew of Apollo 11, were cheered from coast to coast Wednesday. Neil A. Armstrong and Air Force Col. Edwin E. (Buzz) Aldrin Jr. and Michael Collins were given ticker-tape parades in New York and Chicago and hosted at the largest state dinner in history in Los Angeles.

The turnout in New York was estimated at 4 million persons and another million lined the Chicago parade route. More than 1,400 guests, including 44 governors, justices of the Supreme Court, the Cabinet and diplomats from 90 nations, attended the state dinner, during which President Richard Nixon presented the "three brave men" with the Medal of Freedom, the country's highest civilian decoration.

THE CENTER OF GOVERNMENT moved to Southern California last week as President Nixon settled into the Western White House at San Clemente for a weeks-long stay and Congress recessed for three weeks.

POLICE WORKED LAST WEEK to unravel the gruesome slayings of actress Sharon Tate and four other persons in her luxurious, secluded Bel Air home. The other victims, slain with knives and guns, were Abigail Folger, 26, heiress to the Folger's coffee fortune; Jay Sebring, 35, filmland men's hair stylist; Voltyek Prokowsky, 37, actor and writer, and Steve Parent, 18, friend of William F. Garretson, 19, a houseboy at the estate. Garretson was held briefly by Los Angeles police, but was released after taking a lie detector test. Miss Tate, 26, was the wife of film director Roman Polanski. He was in London when the slayings occurred.

THE FATHER OF THE singing Lennon Sisters was slain last week. William (Billy) Lennon was shot to death by a rifleman at the Venice golf range where he worked as an instructor. Police were seeking Chel W. H. Young, a former mental patient.

BODIES OF THE 35 PERSONS aboard a "Gamblers' Special" airliner which crashed high on a slope of Mt. Whitney during a snowstorm on Feb. 18 were removed by helicopter last week. Wreckage of the Long Beach-based plane that crashed on a flight from Hawthorne, Nev., was spotted Aug. 9 on the still snow-covered mountain.

GULF COAST RESIDENTS batten down the hatches as Hurricane Camille roared northward after ripping across Cuba's rich tobacco-producing Pinar del Rio Province.

TWO MEN, ONE ARMED WITH A GUN and the other with a knife, Thursday hijacked a Boston-to-Atlanta Northeast Airlines jet to Cuba. The plane, with 50 persons aboard, was permitted to return to the United States shortly after the hijackers disembarked.

THE ZUNI RAIN DANCERS stole the show at the annual intertribal Indian ceremonial at Gallup, N.M., but they may not be invited for a return engagement next year. The Zunis performed their traditional dance Thursday evening and as they left the stage a thunderstorm struck, drenching the audience of more than 6,000 pale-faces.

ARCHERY GOES OVER BIG WITH KIDS

SWIMMING TOPS ALL CAMP SPORTS

Camp Oakes, a Little Bit of L.B. Nestles in the Mountains

By BOB SANDERS.
Staff Writer.

Nestled high in the San Bernardino Mountain, surrounded on all sides by rolling hills covered with pinyon pine and juniper trees, lies a little bit of Long Beach.

It's not easy to get to, but some 2,000 Long Beach area youngsters are "getting to it" this summer.

This is Camp Oakes, a 270-acre plot of real estate owned and operated by the YMCA of Greater Long Beach for the recreational benefit of its youth.

For the area's flatlanders — better known as "the seashore crowd" — Camp Oakes offers a world of mountain experience.

Here, boys and girls from elementary school age through junior high can sample an entirely new environment.

Leaving the fastpace of the city behind them, they can wander over the hills, among the tall trees, and into the valleys, sampling nature at first hand and learning the wonders of the wilderness.

Without the smog-cover that blots out the night-time sky, they can gaze up at millions of stars they would never see if they stayed "down below".

Every week since early June between 150 and 200 kids have stormed the peaceful Gocke Valley, 15 miles east of Barton Flats and about 8 miles south of Big Bear Lake, to taste its wares.

The turn-off from Route 38 is marked with a small sign reading simply "Camp Oakes" with a hand-drawn arrow pointing up the road.

About three miles of bumpy, dirt road leads to a scattered complex of rustic buildings, interspersed among the tall pines.

Depending on the time of day, small groups of kids can be seen filing along the dirt paths toward various recreational areas.

A string of 22 horses come plodding down the road toward the entrance. Behind the large dining hall the shrill shrieks of young bodies hitting the cool water of the camp's Olympic-size swimming pool rings out among the hills.

Beyond the pool the solid plunk of arrows hitting archery target punctuates the mountain breezes.

From the other side of the camp comes the crack of rifles as another group learns the fine art of handling a gun without hurting anyone.

It all adds up to "fun" for the YMCA campers.

Under the ever-watchful eye of the affable camp director, Dick Ploss, and his expert staff, the youngsters, boys and girls, spend a week of exciting, action-packed activity geared to keep them occupied while teaching them about the mountains and the wilderness.

Campouts and overnight hikes give zest to camp living.

The camping program at Camp Oakes, as well as the myriad other camping programs sponsored by the YMCA of Greater Long Beach, has been expanded this year.

With a $60,000 expansion program, which included the installation of a big manmade lake on the premises, Camp Oakes has taken on a new flavor.

It is used mainly as a sort of training ground for youngsters to prepare them for later experiences in the Y's extensive caravan program.

Here the young ones learn how to get along in a group and how to take care of themselves in the out of doors, while picking up the basic camping skills.

When they "graduate"

into high school they will be ready to go on the Y's "traveling camps" to the scenic and historic areas of the West.

Under Ploss' able guidance as Camping Executive for the Greater Long Beach Y, the Caravan program has been expanded to include bus trips to California's Gold Country, Yellowstone and Sequoia National Parks, Canyon lands and the Big Sur country, in addition to the usual backpacking in the Sierra Nevada and the Grand Tetons.

And Camp Oakes prepares them to all this.

From now until school starts Camp Oakes will be filled with kids from all over the Long Beach area.

And with the recently completed "winterizing" program, the Camp won't have to close down even when school and the big snows start.

The camp's big sormitory, Combs Lodge, as well as several smaller cabins have been made habitable in the winter. The dining hall also will be operating this winter.

So, on weekends throughout the winter, the camp will be showing the "seashore kids" what the mountains look like under a blanket of snow.

It's Time to Shop for GI Christmas

"Think Christmas," says the Long Beach chapter of the American Red Cross.

The area chapter is participating in "Operation Shop Early," a nationwide project of the American Red Cross to provide servicemen in Vietnam with Christmas gifts.

Individuals wishing to participate may fill brightly colored ditty bags with such items as playing cards, stationary, puzzles or games and plastic snapshot holders.

Cost of each bag is $3, underwritten by the sponsoring group or individual. Each bag will contain a gift card indicating the person, group or organization providing the gifts.

The Red Cross asks that volunteers act now to make sure the gift filled bags reach the servicemen by Christmas.

ains look like under a blanket of snow.

Last year, Ploss says, they had 5½ feet of snow in the Gocke Valley. He is proud of the fact that they only "lost" one weekend because of the extra heavy snows of last winter.

Innovation is the Order of the Day at Camp Oakes.

One such a what they call the "quiet meal".

Once a week, at a predetermined time, they eat a meal at which no one talks above a whisper.

I was fortunate enough to be present at this semiered occasion.

It is an experience, for a normal adult, to sit in a room where 165 elementary school boys are eating a meal and not hear any sound except the occasional scraping of a chair or the tinkle of silverware.

It's awe inspiring.

In fact, it was something of a relief for everyone when the meal was over, to see the kids unpent their pent up exuberance with a series of lusty yells and shrieks as they passed through the dining hall door to the great out of doors.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: Advancement is the keyword for this year. Your emotional reactions are direct and sincere. Further responsibility is yours, whether asked or not. The more you take on, the more you will achieve. You are a natural phenomenon; the woman's coming with the best of her mind.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): About time to have a brief fast and do some meditation. Find a share-it's worth it. In yourself that lets the other fellow have a fair reward.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It is time to get back to routine this Monday. Get an early start. A housecleaning is in order now.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make the full circle of all your friends and fellow-workers. What can you do to cheer them up? Speed the evening quickly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can organize a good party this evening. Post the word around in the morning. Near-friends concerning home and property are loved.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Follow a line of earnest study now. Others will react to your seriousness and other around. Appearance counts with many people.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You have built many connections over the past and have given many of them up. Now use the newly formed ties to open another move up for yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Muster all your rebellious tendencies and talk freely. Your answer has already been given by an older relative, but you may not recall it until evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): New stars are not favored today, but fulfillment of early obligations comes naturally and without undue stress. Matters in progress may well.

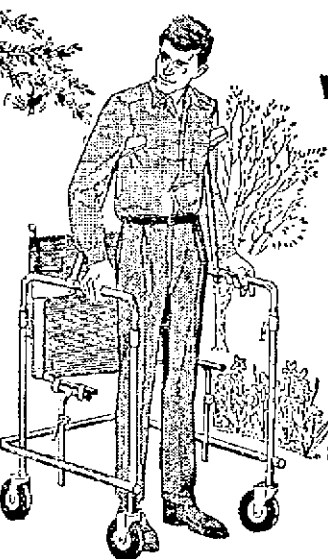

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The time comes to keep up with the Joneses — if you have been too far behind for too long. It could be a good idea for a change.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Now is the time to develop your social life. To further your interests is usually reasonable effort, but do not skip on your job any more than you have to.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Today, not good for starting business ventures but excellent for well-tested practices. Associates are pleasing, but your task is still to carry on the main effort.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You must trust that your friends with all their personal differences, will turn about now and do their fair share.

Nestled high in the San Bernardino Mountain, surrounded on all sides by rolling hills covered with pinyon pine and juniper trees, lies a little bit of Long Beach.

It's not easy to get to, but some 2,000 Long Beach area youngsters are "getting to it" this summer.

This is Camp Oakes, a 270-acre plot of real estate owned and operated by the YMCA of Greater Long Beach for the recreational benefit of its youth.

For the area's flatlanders — better known as "the seashore crowd" — Camp Oakes offers a world of mountain experience.

Here, boys and girls from elementary school age through junior high can sample an entirely new environment.

Leaving the fastpace of the city behind them, they can wander over the hills, among the tall trees, and into the valleys, sampling nature at first hand and learning the wonders of the wilderness.

Without the smog-cover that blots out the nighttime sky, they can gaze up at millions of stars they would never see if they stayed "down below".

Every week since early June between 150 and 200 kids have stormed the peaceful Goeke Valley, 15 miles east of Barton Flats and about 8 miles south of Big Bear Lake, to taste its wares.

The turn-off from Route 38 is marked with a small sign reading simply "Camp Oakes" with a hand-drawn arrow pointing up the road.

About three miles of bumpy, dirt road leads to a scattered complex of rustic buildings, interspersed among the tall pines.

Depending on the time of day, small groups of kids can be seen filing along the dirt paths toward various recreational areas.

A string of 22 horses come plodding down the road toward the entrance. Behind the large dining hall the shrill shrieks of young bodies hitting the cool water of the camp's Olympic-size swimming pool rings out among the hills.

Beyond the pool the solid plunk of arrows hitting archery targets punctuates the mountain breezes.

From the other side of the camp comes the crack of rifles as another group learns the fine art of handling a gun without hurting anyone.

It all adds up to "fun" for the YMCA campers.

Under the ever-watchful eye of the affable camp director, Dick Ploss, and his expert staff, the youngsters, boys and girls, spend a week of exciting, action-packed activity geared to keep them occupied while teaching them about the mountains and the wilderness.

Campouts and overnight hikes give zest to camp living.

ing.

The camping program at Camp Oakes, as well as the myriad other camping programs sponsored by the YMCA of Greater Long Beach, has been expanded this year.

With a $60,000 expansion program, which included the installation of a big manmade lake on the premises, Camp Oakes has taken on a new flavor.

It is used mainly as a sort of training ground for youngsters to prepare them for later experiences in the Y's extensive caravan program.

Here the young ones learn how to get along in a group and how to take care of themselves in the out of doors, while picking up the basic camping skills.

When they "graduate"

into high school they will be ready to go on the Y's "traveling camps" to the scenic and historic areas of the West.

Under Ploss' able guidance as Camping Executive for the Greater Long Beach Y, the Caravan program has been expanded to include bus trips to California's Gold Country, Yellowstone and Sequoia National Parks, Canyon lands and the Big Sur country, in addition to the usual backpacking in the Sierra Nevada and the Grand Teton.

And Camp Oakes prepares them to all this.

From now until school starts Camp Oakes will be filled with kids from all over the Long Beach area.

And with the recently completed "winterizing" program, the Camp won't have to close down even when school and the big snows start.

The camp's big dormitory, Combs Lodge, as well as several smaller cabins have been made habitable in the winter. The dining hall also will be operating this winter.

So, on weekends throughout the winter, the camp will be showing the "seashore kids" what the mountain

It's Time to Shop for GI Christmas

"Think Christmas," says the Long Beach chapter of the American Red Cross.

The area chapter is participating in "Operation Shop Early," a nationwide project of the American Red Cross to provide servicemen in Vietnam with Christmas gifts.

Individuals wishing to participate may fill brightly colored gift bags with such items as playing cards, stationery, puzzles or games and plastic snapshot holders.

Cost of each bag is $3, underwritten by the sponsoring group or individual. Each bag will contain a gift card indicating the person, group or organization providing the gifts.

The Red Cross asks that volunteers act now to make sure the gift filled bags reach the servicemen by Christmas.

tains look like under a blanket of snow.

Last year, Ploss says, they had 5½ feet of snow in the Goeke Valley. He is proud of the fact that they only "lost" one weekend because of the extra heavy snows of last winter.

Innovation is the Order of the Day at Camp Oakes. One such a what they call the "quiet meal".

Once a week, at a predetermined time, they eat a meal at which no one talks above a whisper.

I was fortunate enough to be present at this semiered occasion.

It is an experience, for a normal adult, to sit in a room where 155 elementary school boys are eating a meal and not hear any sound except the occasional scraping of a chair or the tinkle of silverware.

It's awe inspiring.

In fact, it was something of a relief for everyone when the meal was over, to see the kids unpent their pent up exuberance with a series of lusty yells and shrieks as they passed through the dining hall door to the great out of doors.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today. Advancement is the keyword for this year. Your emotional reactions are deeper and stronger. Further responsibility is yours, whether asked or not. The men born today often have skill and aptitude in political or natural phenomena, the women go along with the best of their mates.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): About time to have a brief fast and do some meditation. Find a shore-the-wealth struck in yourself that lets the other fellow have a fair reward.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): It is time to get back to routine this Monday. Get an early start. A housecleaning is in order now.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21): Make the full circle of all your friends and fellow workers. What can you do to cheer them up? Spend the evening quietly.

CANCER (June 22-July 22): You can organize a good party this evening. Possess the word around in the morning. Negotiations concerning home and property are favored.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 23): Follow a line of career study now. Others will react to your seriousness and gather around. Amusements courts with many people.

VIRGO (Aug. 24-Sept. 23): You have built many connections over the past and have given many of them up. Now use the newly formed ties to open another move up for yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 24-Oct. 23): Muster all your exhibitionist tendencies and take freely. Your answer has already been given by an older relative, but you may not recall it until evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21): New starts are not favored today, but fulfillment of existing obligations comes naturally and without undue stress. Matters in progress move well.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): The urge comes to keep up with the Joneses. If you have been too far behind for too long, it could be a good idea for a change.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Now is the time to develop your social life. To further your interests is worth reasonable effort, but do not skimp on your job any more than you have to.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Today, not good for starting business ventures, but is excellent for well-tested projects. Associates are pleasing, but your task is still to carry on the main effort.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You must trust that your friends, with all their personal differences, will turn about now and do their fair share.

CLOWNS, BALLOONS Gay Parade Helps Fill Bible School

They didn't look like missionaries — not in the old sense, anyway. But with clowns to help, with balloons, streamers and paper pompoms, 200 kids from preschool age to teen-age Saturday marched in Long Beach to fire enthusiasm and win registrants for a vacation Bible school.

The young people were taking part in an annual preschool parade sponsored by the Christian and Missionary Alliance Church, 3331 Palos Verdes Ave. The vacation Bible school begins Monday.

Saturday's parade was fun with a purpose. On Saturday alone, 140 were registered for the five-day program. But that was after the parade. Before that, youngsters in the neighborhood came out to watch other youngsters parade by on brightly-decorated bicycles and floats — including a boat and a dune buggy. Leading the parade was a proud Model T car.

"By the time the parade was finished," said committee member Mrs. Lorraine Stanwood, "we had quite a collection of neighborhood children, too."

While the parade was at the school registration point. The school, for kindergartners through 10th-graders, emphasizes Bible stories and handicrafts during the mornings and schedules field trips and swimming in the afternoons. Expected enrollment is 400.

David B. Short, who had been staying at his stepfather's apartment at 4720 Atherton St., surrendered to police when they arrived minutes after the struggle Friday night.

The victim, Richard J. Besneatte, 48, an apartment manager, died in the emergency ward of Community Hospital after the fight.

Short told officers his stepfather — who, he said, was intoxicated — ordered him to pack his belongings and leave and then provoked a fight.

After an exchange of blows, Short told police, Besneatte fell to the floor unconscious. Then, police said, Short summoned a

FAIR HOUSING UNIT NOTES TWO SUCCESSFUL MONTHS

Outboard Taken

The Fair Housing Foundation of Long Beach has just completed the two most successful months in its five-year history according to Executive Director Curt Moody. According to Moody, the June-July statistical reports of the foundation indicate 28 families or individuals of minority backgrounds have found housing outside the central area of Long Beach through the assistance of the foundation during the two months.

Commenting on these statistics Moody said, "We are still a long way from our goal of a totally desegregated community. However, we cannot help but be optimistic when looking at the foundation's records we discover that in 1965 there were only 30 foundation-assisted desegregated move-ins during the whole year.

A $210 outboard motor was stolen from the garage of Charles Cummings, 6718 Bayshore Walk, Long Beach police said Saturday.

Sanitation Work Flows Smoothly

Story and Photos
By BOB GEIVET

The biggest car you own could fit inside any of the 1,100 sections of pipe which will become a new ocean outfall for the County Sanitation Districts of Orange County.

Each is 24 feet long, 10 feet inside diameter and 12 inches thick. Each one weighs 90 tons.

Together, they will form a massive outfall line finger-ing 20,000 feet — almost five miles — into the ocean at the west levee of the Santa Ana River.

The line will replace a 78-inch outfall 7,000 feet long, laid in 1954 to meet what then was considered the optimum need for sanitation facilities in fast-growing Orange County.

THE OUTFALL IS THE LAST link of the treatment plant No. 2 maintained by the sanitation districts on an isolated wedge of land between Brookhurst Street and the river.

This plant is to further refine the tremendous flow of sewage which first goes through Plant No. 1 at Ellis Avenue and the river, about two miles upstream.

The two plants can handle a maximum flow of 110 million gallons of sewage daily in the present line.

With the new underwater facility, the capacity of the discharge can be stepped up to 480 million gallons daily.

The logistics of the project are staggering.

It took five years to study the sanitation needs of the county and its cities. Studies of offshore-ocean currents required three years — for the districts had to know if wave and current action would dissipate the discharge.

Off the Santa Ana River between Huntington Beach and Newport Beach, the ocean bottom slopes gently; it is sandy, hard-packed.

At 20,000 feet out — the end of the line — the water will be 195 feet deep. At that point, there is a "shelf" along which the line will be dog-legged up coast.

Engineers decided that the first 7,000 feet of the line can be laid on a bed of rock, as was done when the present outfall line was built. Beyond that point, however, the line will be covered with heavy rock. This armor will protect the line from wave action and from possibility of damage by boat anchors.

Engineers calculated that such an armor would protect the line from the tremendous force of any wave — even one up to 35 feet, far greater than any known storm has generated.

SEISMOLOGISTS CALCULATED that, with such protection, the line would be "earthquake proof."

Peter Kiewit Sons, Inc., won the contract on bid of $3,948,000, and began early this year to prepare the construction site on the beach alongside the river.

The firm ordered a work pier 2,500 feet long, from which sheet piling could be driven to lay the pipe through the breakers.

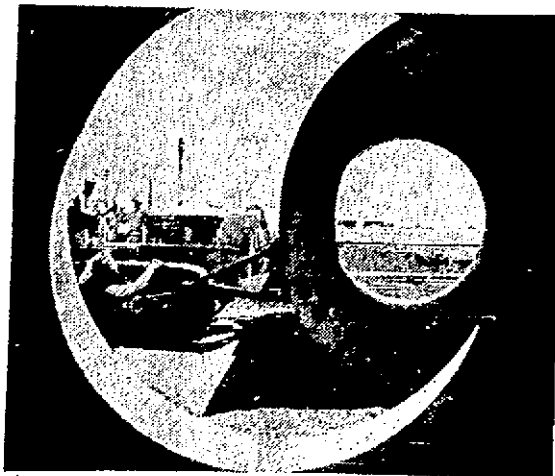

Until the operating engineers went on strike, work on the pier progressed steadily; it will reach 2,500 feet and will be removed when the job is done.

The company bought an old Liberty ship and converted it to a barge — to take the giant sections of pipe to sea.

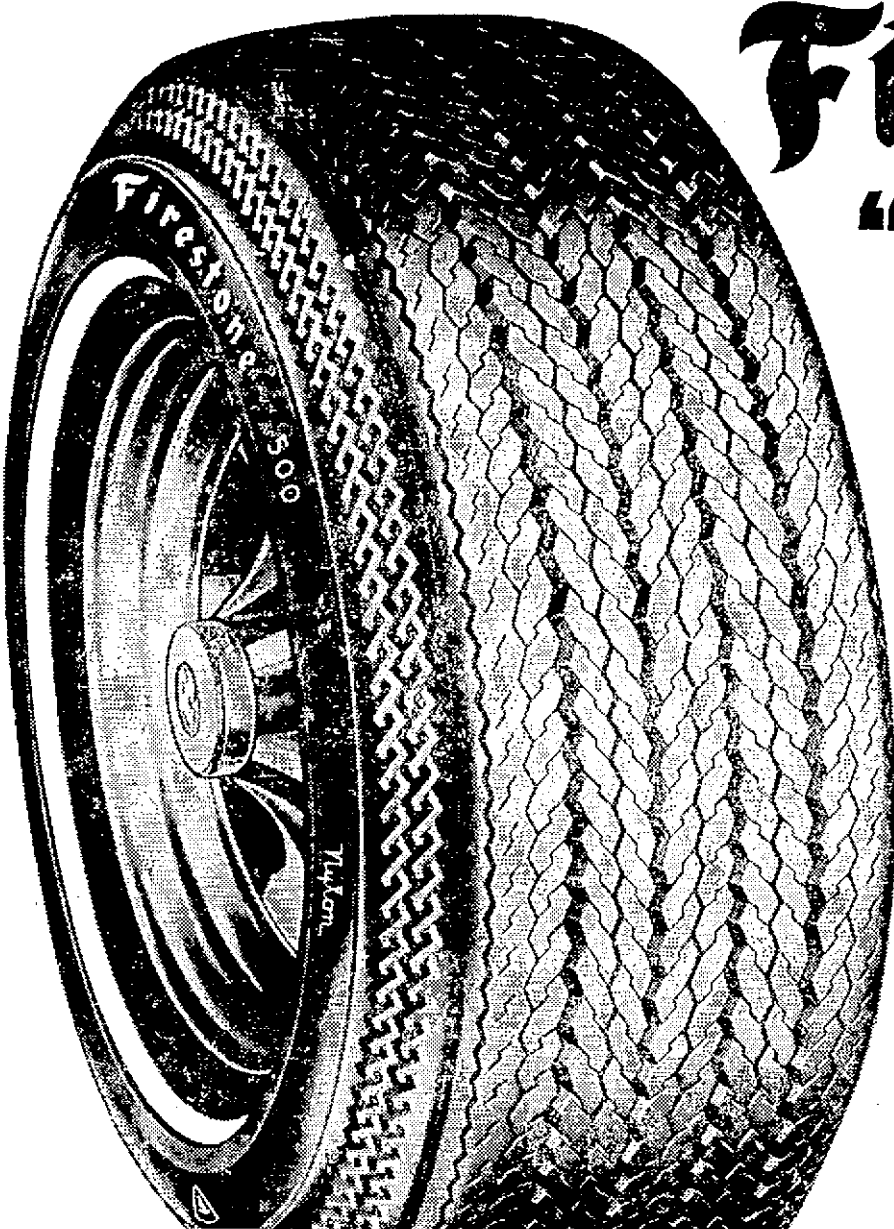

A crane aboard will swing the outfall sections into the water. Divers will maneuver the connections.

Toward the end of the outfall line, a new kind of pipe will be laid. It is a diffuser, perforated with "portholes" ranging from 3/4 to 6 inches in diameter. They are designed to dilute the waste water before it reaches the discharge.

Pipe-laying operations are slated for September, but the strike may delay that timetable. They have until January 1971 to finish the job — but they're aiming for November 1970.

Closed-Circuit TV-Tape Proves Boon to L.B. Business

By BILL SHELTON
Should the rank and file of ISI Sales Corp. get bored with the daily fare of commercial television, all they need do is repair to the firm's fourth floor conference room at 4201 Long Beach Blvd., shoot a program of their own and sit back and see and hear each other perform on instant replay.

Such a program is unlikely, however, for the company owned, closed circuit set up, one of the first in the area, is strictly a business proposition — used for relaying messages to and from the home office, for presenting sales outlines and especially for training personnel.

ISI Corp. Division Manager Gene Bishop this week demonstrated and explained the functioning and business utility of the impressive contrivance.

There are four, simply operated, main parts, the camera with varying lenses, the super sensitive microphone, the tape recorder-player and the visual monitor screen (ISI has a commercial TV receiver that also can be used for regular programs.)

Also, the compact, mobile Panasonic package can be taken to people's homes and the tape plugged in for sales presentations in the living room.

On one tape a headquarters official was seen giving instructions to all branches. On another a conference was filmed. Bishop with Arthur Dunham, vice president and director of training and field management for ISI, at the camera, demonstrated by filming a mock meeting with Ken Holden, assistant ISI division manager and Oliver Speraw president of Sparrow Realty of Long Beach, participating.

"We call this monster 'instant truth'," Bishop said. "It is a speech class and acting class rolled into one. Salesmen can vastly improve their delivery by seeing themselves on the 'tube.' For example, they can catch themselves in gross mannerisms, such as tweaking an ear, habits you never could convince them they are guilty of unless they see it for themselves.

"Then, of course, there is that old truism that seeing is believing. Clients are impressed with a well done visual presentation," says the personable ex-Marine.

"We know there are other advantages with the Panasonic that we haven't explored," says Bishop. "In the few months we have had the $1,600 (approximately) apparatus it certainly has proved worthy."

This electronic filming-taping device will be demonstrated on September 8 before a meeting of the Sales and Marketing Executives Assn. at the International City Club, says Speraw who is vice president of the Executives. Members are some 80 owners and managers of firms in sales, marketing.

Also, the Executives are supporting Distributive Education Clubs of America in high schools and Long Beach City College and sponsors Phi Sigma Epsilon, sales and marketing fraternity at California State College at Long Beach.

Ensenada Strip Homesite-Apartment Project Prices Are Amazingly Low

A great step has been taken in the further development of Ensenada, Baja California as a major tourist resort, it was announced by Alan Cragin, U.S. Information representative for Promotora Playa Estero S.A. of Ensenada.

Promotora Playa Estero S.A. has been granted the permits and licenses to proceed with the development of an exclusive, luxury subdivision providing homesite lots and 2 and 3 bedroom beach and bayfront apartments in the Punta Estero/Punta Banda area south of Ensenada.

The site of the development is a long, thin peninsula protruding from Punta Banda into Todos Santos Bay and forming a tidal lagoon on the land side. The result of this geographic formation is a configuration that is not unlike the Newport/Balboa area. The peninsula is seven miles long, but is only 1/4 mile wide at its widest point, giving easy access to both the beach and the boating lagoon from any part of the peninsula.

It is this very peninsula that was chosen some years ago as the site of the Mexican government's "National Frontier Program" 327 room luxury hotel project. This hotel is about 70 per cent finished and plans are underway to complete the hotel in the very near future, using private capital.

The new recreational development is to be known as Playa Estero and the first part of the total development will occupy an area of approximately 52 acres of beach and bay front property, immediately to the north of the huge hotel complex.

Area development plans call for the construction of a marina to accommodate more than 400 private boats and the eventual construction of an 18 hole golf course. The first stages of the development will see the subdivision of beach and bay front property into home-site lots, many with beach and bay frontage of approximately 50 feet, and an overall area of approximately 5,000 square feet. In addition, the first apartment cluster is planned to be started within the next 90 days.

Cragin's office in La Jolla, known as "The Playa Estero Development Company", announced that the cost of each lot in the subdivision will include all utilities such as paved streets, sidewalks, sewage, electricity and water. The prime market for these homesites and apartments is in the Southern California area of the U.S. "Between Los Angeles and San Diego," he said, "there are almost 9 million people, all within easy driving distance of Playa Estero. With the new 4 lane super highway between Tijuana and Ensenada, the development is only a 1 1/2 hour drive from San Diego and only 3 1/2 hours from the heart of Los Angeles."

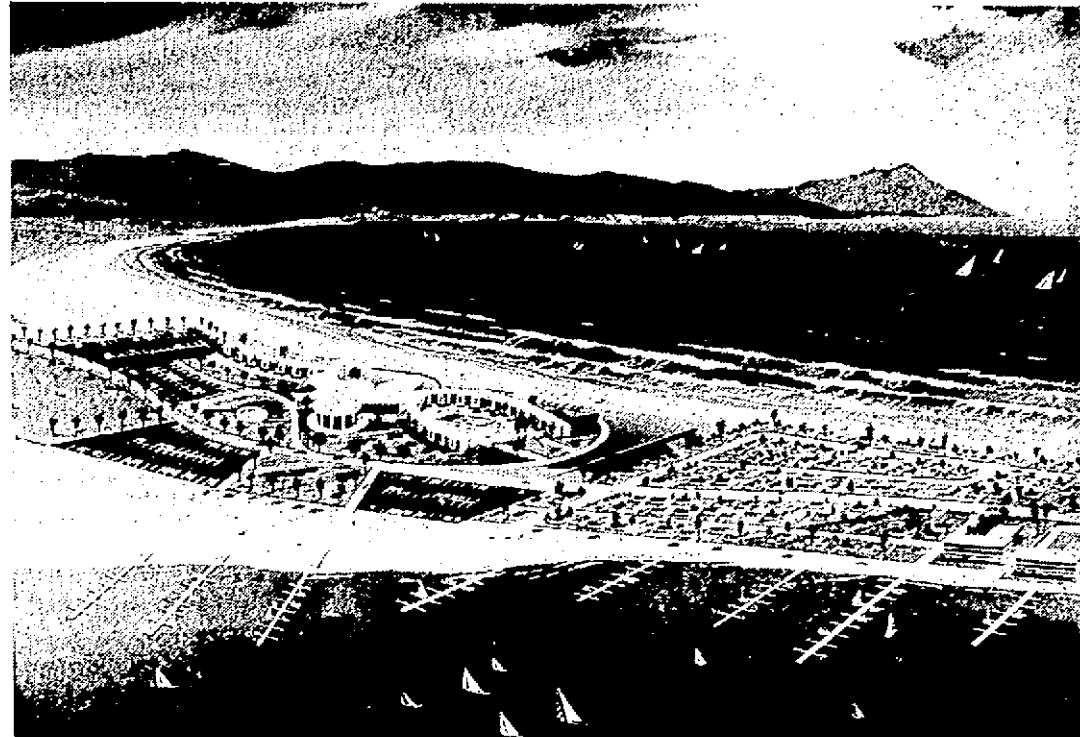

Plans call for the complete development of Playa Estero as a fully controlled and zoned resort community. The first stages of construction have already begun and the first lots will be available for construction within 60 days.

This development will provide the discrim-

Production in California Mounts to $101.35 Billion

By ROBERT BECKMAN
Business Editor

Production of goods and services (Gross State Product) in California continued to advance in July — reaching $101.35 billion — although business for fixed investment had slowed, according to a report issued today by the Bank of California. The bank's forecast calls for a continuing rise in all major classifications of production.

The Bank of California Economic Series measures economic activity in its tri-state service area, and encompasses production of both goods and services in determining Gross State Product. Income from nine separate industrial classifications also measures, in balance, spending by persons, government, and business for fixed investment. The bank's estimates are seasonally adjusted at an annual rate.

THE COMMODITY producing industries, which include manufacturing, construction, agriculture, and mining, and account for 33 per cent of gross production, climbed 11.7 per cent over July 1968 to $33.43 billion. Production in the distributing industries (trade and utilities) totaled $25.25 billion, while the service type industries rose 7.1 per cent in a year to $27.54 billion. Production of services by local, state, and federal governments advanced 8.6 per cent to $15.13 billion.

Californians enjoyed a personal income of $81.26 billion in July. Of this total, wages and salaries were 68.8 per cent or $55.94 billion. Personal tax payments, savings, and consumer interest payments subtracted $13.98 billion from income, leaving $62.28 billion for personal spending. Retail sales, up 7.4 per cent in 12 months' time, totaled $39.05 billion, while services rose to $23.23 billion.

Business spending for fixed investment was $13.51 billion in July, with purchases of durable equipment accounting for $7.49 billion of this total. Construction, advancing 2.3 per cent in a year, reached $6.02 billion. Of this total, residential construction accounted for $3.14 billion and nonresidential $2.88 billion.

GOVERNMENT spending, advancing 8.4 per cent in a year, totaled $25.56 billion in July. Of this total, payrolls accounted for $13.19 billion, while construction, declining slightly, was $2.71 billion. Government purchases of supplies and equipment increased 11.1 per cent in a year to $3.66 billion, with $5.58 billion of this going for Defense Department prime contract deliveries.

Total manufactures in California rose 7.2 per cent in 12 months to $25.37 billion, while agriculture, making a substantial gain, totaled $2.61 billion. Trade, in July, reached $16.35 billion, while the finance-insurance-real estate classification, advancing 10.1 per cent in the same period was $14.82 billion. July totals for other producing industries were: mining $1.06 billion, construction $4.39 billion, utilities $8.90 billion, services $12.72 billion, and government services $15.13 billion.

The Bank of California forecasts that California's Gross State Product will advance to $101.77 billion in August. Personal spending is expected to rise to $62.65 billion, and government spending to $25.70 billion. Business spending for fixed investment will decline slightly to $13.42 billion.

THE REGIONAL ADMINISTRATOR of National Banks for the Fourteenth National Bank Region, A. E. Larsen, announced in San Francisco total assets of all nationally chartered banks in California increased $5,913,299M to $47,110,865M, an increase of 14.4 per cent, while total deposits for California decreased $29,421M from a record level of $36,211,011 set on December 31, 1968.

THE LEADER OF THE home building industry has called for credit controls in order to provide money for the housing America desperately needs.

Eugene A. Guldge, president of the National Association of Home Builders, called on the administration and the Congress to set up credit controls in order to distribute scarce credit more fairly and spread more evenly the burden of fighting inflation.

Writing in the NAHB Journal of Homebuilding, Guldge said the nation is currently experiencing its fourth credit crunch in the past 15 years. Each time, he said, the controls used have been selective and the housing industry has been the first and major casualty. In 1966, he pointed out, home building, which is only 3.5 per cent of all economic activity, bore almost 90 per cent of the total cut-back in the entire economy. To create a housing shortage is itself inflationary, he said.

THE THERMO ELECTRON CORP., of Waltham, Mass., has been awarded a federal contract to design a practical steam engine for use in automobiles, says the Automotive Industries Marketing Newsletter.

Purpose of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare contract is the design of a power plant with emissions low enough to meet future air pollution standards as well as give autos a performance capacity equivalent to that of current internal combustion engines.

The design study will be based on a unique reciprocating engine developed by Thermo Electron which uses an organic compound as a working fluid in place of water. The conceptual design of the steam engine system will include components such as the combustor, vapor generator, condenser, engine, feed pump and controls.

THERE HAS been some talk recently about allowing a variable interest rate on home mortgages. The idea is that the rate would be adjusted according to the condition of the economy, writes Newton Minks, president, Rancho Los Cerritos Board of Realtors.

Under this concept, if the cost of money to the lender goes up, the interest rate on the mortgage goes up. If the cost goes down, the interest rate goes down. This would mean that if you enter into such a contract with a lender for a 6 per cent loan on your house, he could later increase the rate to 6½ per cent, for instance, under certain conditions. Under other conditions, it could also go down to 5½ per cent.

A few other states already allow such contracts. The reason for discussing the possibility in California is that lenders would have less reason to charge a high rate of interest if they knew it could be changed later, with cause. This would give the lender a more certain guarantee of a profitable margin on his loans should his cost rise later.

ON THE OTHER HAND when interest rates are high, say 7½ per cent, the homeowner would know that should money become more plentiful and rates drop to 6 per cent, the rate on his mortgage will also drop.

The variable interest rate arrangement could make it possible for savings and loan associations, for instance, to offer a lower rate of interest as an incentive to the homeowner to agree to that kind of mortgage.

The board of directors of the California Real Estate Association voted in March, 1969, to endorse allowing variable interest rate contracts in California, providing the concept:

1. Be implemented by statute.
2. Incorporate provision for variation both upward and downward.
3. Provide that variation be directly related to a recognized index of control or influence by the lender of the industry of which he is a part.
4. Include required 90-day notification to the borrower of any change in rate and permit full or partial repayment of the loan on such occasion with waiver of any prepayment penalty.
5. Embody a requirement that the terms of the variable interest rate be prominently disclosed in the loan contract.
6. Provide generally that monthly loan payments not be adjusted as a result of such action without consent of both parties.

LONG BEACH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TRADE TIPS ON THE WORLD MARKET

By REYAN KOMAROFF

Because of its importance and impact to exporters, importers and traders, the annual meeting held last week in Tokyo of the Japan-U.S. Joint Committee on Trade and Economic Affairs, it was brought forth Japan was compelled to shoulder solution of a number of crucial economic issues with the U.S. in the future. Summed up briefly, the three-day parity reached agreement on the following points:

Firstly, Japan would send a team of experts to the U.S. to undertake a survey of existing conditions relative to the U.S. emphasis demand that Japan observe voluntary restrictions in exporting textiles to the U.S. Secondly, the two countries would exchange comments on their non-tariff barrier lists within a period of 60 days and then hold a conference for swiftly removing such barriers. Thirdly, the two countries would take up the problem of Japan's quantitative residual import restrictions, centering on farm products, at an appropriate time in the fall.

A Japanese concession on voluntarily restricting its textile exports to the U.S. had implications of becoming a dangerous first step. And in this connection, it may be said that the strategy used by the U.S. at these talks was superior to that of Japan. By the time the meeting ended, both countries could not be said to have mutually secured a clear grasp of the "balance" of their positions in the 1970s in relation to the growth of Japan's international economic position and the relative lowering of the U.S. status in the Free World.

To impartial observers, it would seem that the U.S. strategy was to demand voluntary restrictions on export of textiles to the U.S. by dangling the promise of the return of Okinawa to Japan. In all fairness to Japan, the U.S. textile industry has enjoyed a hearty prosperity and therefore this industry could hardly be said to have been injured by the inroads of Japan's exports of textiles.

But politics being what it is, no doubt the Nixon administration is being pressured to the point that it has changed its policy from conclusion of a multi-lateral textile agreement at GATT to a bilateral agreement with Japan. And the Japanese feel that all the issues should be aired at GATT for free and frank discussions of all the countries who are signatories to GATT. Looking at it from a selfish viewpoint, many concerns in the U.S. are dependent on their livelihood on the importance of textiles from Japan, particularly in the sportswear and swimwear trades, and with the advent of the recent Japan-U.S. talks in Tokyo, it's a brand new ball game, with woes for some and weals for others.

Zodys Marks Record July

It has been announced that net owned department sales for Hartfield-Zodys, Inc., and subsidiaries for the five-week period ended August 2, reached a record July high of $8,665,500, an increase of 35.2 per cent over the total of $6,400,600 for the same period last year.

The cumulative sales for the 26 weeks ended the same date amounted to a record high of $40,555,600, an increase of 33.0 per cent over last year's total of $30,496,800.

The reported sales figures do not include sales of leased departments.

Steel Losses, Auto Output Drop Felt

Losses in steel and auto output pulled this week's index 0.2 per cent below a week ago.

Steel production dropped 0.4 per cent reaching the lowest production level since January. After seasonal adjustment, however, production is 18.2 per cent above the year-ago level.

Auto production went down in the latest week. In the midst of model-changeover, only one of the "Big Four" assembly plants scheduled Saturday overtime. While many auto makers have scheduled 1970 production for next week, some plants are not slated for 1970 output until September.

The energy components registered losses in the current week. Crude oil refinery runs slipped 0.5 per cent; while electric power output lost 4.3 per cent.

Miscellaneous carloadings rose 1.0 per cent, reflecting a rise in metallic ores transport; all other carloadings rose 3.3 per cent, while intercity truck tonnage fell 1.3 per cent.

Paperboard production gained 1.0 per cent.

Aluminum Sales Gain by Harvey

An increase in sales for the nine month period ending June 30, compared to a similar period a year ago was reported by Harvey Aluminum (Incorporated), Torrance.

Net Sales for the nine month period were $136,641,637 as compared to $126,281,679 for the similar nine month period a year ago. Net Income for the nine month period was $12,786,828 (including investment tax credit in the amount of $300,000 and a net gain on investment in the amount of $5,689,724) compared to $10,729,662 (including investment tax credit in the amount of $303,051) earned in the same period for last year.

Production in California Mounts to $101.35 Billion

By ROBERT BECKMAN
Business Editor

Production of goods and services (Gross State Product) in California continued to advance in July — reaching $101.35 billion — although business for fixed investment had slowed, according to a report issued today by the Bank of California. The bank's forecast calls for a continuing rise in all major classifications of production.

The Bank of California Economic Series measures economic activity in its tri-state service area, and encompasses production of both goods and services in determining Gross State Product. Income from nine separate industrial classifications also measures, in balance, spending by persons, government, and business for fixed investment. The bank's estimates are seasonally adjusted at an annual rate.

THE COMMODITY producing industries, which include manufacturing, construction, agriculture, and mining, and account for 33 per cent of gross production, climbed 11.7 per cent over July 1968 to $33.43 billion. Production in the distributing industries (trade and utilities) totaled $25.25 billion, while the service type industries rose 7.1 per cent in a year to $27.54 billion. Production of services by local, state, and federal governments advanced 8.6 per cent to $15.13 billion.

Californians enjoyed a personal income of $81.26 billion in July. Of this total, wages and salaries were 68.8 per cent or $55.94 billion. Personal tax payments, savings, and consumer interest payments subtracted $18.98 billion from income, leaving $62.28 billion for personal spending. Retail sales, up 7.4 per cent in 12 months' time, totaled $39.05 billion, while services rose to $23.23 billion.

Business spending for fixed investment was $13.51 billion in July, with purchases of durable equipment accounting for $7.49 billion of this total. Construction, advancing 2.3 per cent in a year, reached $6.02 billion. Of this total, residential construction accounted for $3.14 billion and nonresidential $2.88 billion.

GOVERNMENT spending, advancing 8.4 per cent in a year, totaled $25.56 billion in July. Of this total, payrolls accounted for $13.19 billion, while construction, declining slightly, was $2.71 billion. Government purchases of supplies and equipment increased 11.1 per cent in a year to $9.86 billion, with $5.58 billion of this going for Defense Department prime contract deliveries.

Total manufactures in California rose 7.2 per cent in 12 months to $25.37 billion, while agriculture, making a substantial gain, totaled $2.61 billion. Trade, in July, reached $15.35 billion, while the finance-insurance-real estate classification, advancing 10.1 per cent in the same period was $14.82 billion. July totals for other producing industries were: mining $1.06 billion, construction $4.39 billion, utilities $8.90 billion, services $12.72 billion, and government services $15.13 billion.

The Bank of California forecasts that California's Gross State Product will advance to $101.77 billion in August. Personal spending is expected to rise to $62.65 billion, and government spending to $25.70 billion. Business spending for fixed investment will decline slightly to $13.42 billion.

THE REGIONAL ADMINISTRATOR of National Banks for the Fourteenth National Bank Region, A. E. Larsen, announced in San Francisco total assets of all nationally chartered banks in California increased $5,913,299M to $47,110,865M, an increase of 14.4 per cent, while total deposits for California decreased $829,421M from a record level of $36,211,011 set on December 31, 1968.

THE LEADER OF THE home building industry has called for credit controls in order to provide money for the housing America desperately needs.

Eugene A. Guldage, president of the National Association of Home Builders, called on the administration and the Congress to set up credit controls in order to distribute scarce credit more fairly and spread more evenly the burden of fighting inflation.

Writing in the NAHB Journal of Homebuilding, Guldage said the nation is currently experiencing its fourth credit crunch in the past 15 years. Each time, he said, the controls used have been selective and the housing industry has been the first and major casualty. In 1966, he pointed out, home building, which is only 3.5 per cent of all economic activity, bore almost 90 per cent of the total cut-back in the entire economy. To create a housing shortage is itself inflationary, he said.

THE THERMO ELECTRON CORP., of Waltham, Mass., has been awarded a federal contract to design a practical steam engine for use in automobiles, says the Automotive Industries Marketing Newsletter.

Purpose of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare contract is the design of a power plant with emissions low enough to meet future air pollution standards as well as give autos a performance capacity equivalent to that of current internal combustion engines.

The design study will be based on a unique reciprocating engine developed by Thermo Electron which uses an organic compound as a working fluid in place of water. The conceptual design of the steam engine system will include components such as the combustor, vapor generator, condenser, engine, feed pump and controls.

THERE HAS been some talk recently about allowing a variable interest rate on home mortgages. The idea is that the rate would be adjusted according to the condition of the economy, writes Newton Mincks, president, Rancho Los Cerritos Board of Realtors.

Under this concept, if the cost of money to the lender goes up, the interest rate on the mortgage goes up. If the cost goes down, the interest rate goes down. This would mean that if you enter into such a contract with a lender for a 6 per cent loan on your house, he could later increase the rate to 6½ per cent, for instance, under certain conditions. Under other conditions, it could also go down to 5½ per cent.

A few other states already allow such contracts.

The reason for discussing the possibility in California is that lenders would have less reason to charge a high rate of interest if they knew it could be changed later, with cause. This would give the lender a more certain guarantee of a profitable margin on his loans should his cost rise later.

ON THE OTHER HAND when interest rates are high, say 7½ per cent, the homeowner would know that should money become more plentiful and rates drop to 6 per cent, the rate on his mortgage will also drop.

The variable interest rate arrangement could make it possible for savings and loan associations, for instance, to offer a lower rate of interest as an incentive to the homeowner to agree to that kind of mortgage.

The board of directors of the California Real Estate Association voted in March, 1969, to endorse allowing variable interest rate contracts in California, providing the concept:

1. Be implemented by statute.
2. Incorporate provision for variation both upward and downward.
3. Provide that variation be directly related to a recognized index of control or influence by the lender of the industry of which he is a part.
4. Include required 90-day notification to the borrower of any change in rate and permit full or partial repayment of the loan on such occasion with waiver of any prepayment penalty.
5. Embody a requirement that the terms of the variable interest rate be prominently disclosed in the loan contract.
6. Provide generally that monthly loan payments not be adjusted as a result of such action without consent of both parties.

The pace of business shows fatigue. Purchasing Executives' July report reveals a stabilization or contraction reminiscent of the start of the 1967 quasi recession.

Since it is normal for the bottom of the summer slowdown to occur in July, some improvement could be expected in August. The current shift from growth to decline in both new orders and production is, however, not normal.

Before forming conclusions as to the outlook, one must reflect on the remarkable resiliency of business over the past eight years. Certainly the summer months are particularly difficult ones in which to detect trends. Still, the effect of economic restraints may be accumulating, and the hint or early warning in our June report is reinforced by July data.

Tight money and the cost of money, brought on by continued severe inflation, dominate the comments of our members. The money crunch receives most of the blame for inventory pressures, curtailment of capital investment, a slower new order rate and a growing curb on both industrial and residential building.

LONG BEACH CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TRADE TIPS ON THE WORLD MARKET

By REVAN KOMAROFF

Because of its importance and impact to exporters, importers and traders, the annual meeting held last week in Tokyo of the Japan-U.S. Joint Committee on Trade and Economic Affairs, it was brought forth Japan was compelled to shoulder solution of a number of crucial economic issues with the U.S. in the future. Summed up briefly, the three-day party reached agreement on the following points:

Firstly, Japan would send a team of experts to the U.S. to undertake a survey of existing conditions relative to the U.S. emphasis on demand that Japan observe voluntary restrictions in exporting textiles to the U.S. Secondly, the two countries would exchange comments on their non-tariff barrier lists within a period of 60 days and then hold a conference for swiftly removing such barriers. Thirdly, the two countries would take up the problem of Japan's quantitative residual import restrictions, centering on farm products, at an appropriate time in the fall.

A Japanese concession on voluntarily restricting its textile exports to the U.S. had implications of becoming a dangerous first step. And in this connection, it may be said that the strategy used by the U.S. at these talks was superior to that of Japan. By the time the meeting ended, both countries could not be said to have mutually secured a clear grasp of the "balance" of their positions in the 1970s in relation to the growth of Japan's international economic position and the relative lowering of the U.S. status in the Free World.

To impartial observers, it would seem that the U.S. strategy was to demand voluntary restrictions on export of textiles to the U.S. by dangling the promise of the return of Okinawa to Japan. In all fairness to Japan, the U.S. textile industry has enjoyed a hearty prosperity and therefore this industry could hardly be said to have been injured by the inroads of Japan's exports of textiles.

But politics being what it is, no doubt the Nixon administration is being pressured to the point that it has changed its policy from conclusion of a multi-lateral textile agreement at GATT to a bilateral agreement with Japan. And the Japanese feel that all the issues should be aired at GATT for free and frank discussions of all the countries who are signatories to GATT. Looking at it from a selfish viewpoint, many concerns in the U.S. are dependent on their livelihood on the importance of textiles from Japan, particularly in the sportswear and swimwear trades, and with the advent of the recent Japan-U.S. talks in Tokyo, it's a brand new ball game, with woe for some and weals for others.

Zodys Marks Record July

It has been announced that net owned department sales for Hartfield-Zodys, Inc., and subsidiaries for the five-week period ended August 2, reached a record July high of $8,665,500, an increase of 35.2 per cent over the total of $6,409,800 for the same period last year.

The cumulative sales for the 26 weeks ended the same date amounted to a record high of $40,555,600, an increase of 33.0 per cent over last year's total of $30,496,800.

The reported sales figures do not include sales of leased departments.

Steel Losses, Auto Output Drop Felt

Losses in steel and auto output pulled this week's index 0.2 per cent below a week ago.

Steel production dropped 0.4 per cent reaching the lowest production level since January. After seasonal adjustment, however, production is 18.2 per cent above the year-ago level.

Auto production went down in the latest week. In the midst of model-changeover, only one of the "Big Four" assembly plants scheduled Saturday overtime. While many auto makers have scheduled 1970 production for next week, some plants are not slated for 1970 output until September.

The energy components registered losses in the current week. Crude oil refinery runs slipped 0.5 per cent; while electric power output lost 4.3 per cent.

Miscellaneous carloadings rose 1.0 per cent, reflecting a rise in metallic ores transport; all other carloadings rose 3.3 per cent, while intercity truck tonnage fell 1.3 per cent.

Paperboard production gained 1.0 per cent.

Aluminum Sales Gain by Harvey

An increase in sales for the nine month period ending June 30, compared to a similar period a year ago was reported by Harvey Aluminum (Incorporated), Torrance.

Net Sales for the nine month period were $136,641,637 as compared to $126,281,679 for the similar nine month period a year ago. Net Income for the nine month period was $12,788,828 (including investment tax credit in the amount of $300,000 and a net gain on investment in the amount of $5,639,724) compared to $10,729,652 (including investment tax credit in the amount of $303,051) earned in the same period for last year.

New Technique Protects Planes From Fuel Fires

Parker Hannifin Corp. engineers, with the help of a small computer, have developed a new technique to protect airplanes from fuel tank explosion and fire.

The process uses nitrogen, an inert, non-combustible gas, to reduce the level of oxygen normally present in a fuel tank's vapor space.

Parker Hannifin engineers conducted the first "flight tests" inside a desk-size IBM 1130 system before the prototype was ever built or a test plane ever left the runway.

"The computer told us exactly what we needed to know without our having to build any experimental hardware," said Tolman Geffs, program marketing manager for the new system. "As a result, when we built a prototype it worked perfectly the first time it was tested."

The new technique, based on cryogenics (the use of very low temperatures), is now being flight-tested by the Air Force and is being studied by the Federal Aviation Agency.

"Oxygen in the tank's vapor space is only part of the problem, because any liquid tends to absorb oxygen from the air, then release it when the pressure lowers," Geffs explained.

"It's something like the carbon dioxide gas in a bottle of soda pop. When the cap is on, the pressure is retained and the gas stays dissolved. But once you open the bottle, the pressure is released and the gas wants to come out. Shake the bottle, and it all wants to spew out at once."

The same thing happens in an airplane fuel tank, he said. At sea level the pressure is comparatively high.

so the oxygen dissolves into the fuel. However, it evaporates when the plane reaches higher altitudes, creating a combustion hazard in the vapor space above the fuel.

Parker Hannifin's inerting system prevents this by saturating the fuel with tiny nitrogen bubbles that displace the oxygen in solution. The exact size of the bubbles, the rate at which they are injected, and the rate at which nitrogen displaces free oxygen in the tank at all altitudes, were critical factors in the design.

nating investor, who is a lover of Mexico and the Mexican culture, with an opportunity for beach and bay front recreational facilities at realistic, uninfated prices. The prices for a long term, renewable leasehold on these lots start at $7,000. The completely finished apartments are less than $18,000, Cragin said.

Building costs in the Ensenada area are amazingly low, Cargin said. "It is possible to build a first-class home in Playa Estero for from $4 to 17 per square foot. This is about 1/3 the cost of construction in the United States." The construction of homes in Playa Estero will be limited to single family residences with a minimum of 1,200 square feet of living space.

The Playa Estero apartments will be arranged in clusters of 3 buildings, each containing 15 apartments. Each cluster will be individually walled for privacy and will have its own private swimming pool and parking area. Each cluster will also include an individual management office. When residents are not occupying their apartments, the office will rent it and accumulate the income to the resident's account.

Two floor plans are available, either two-story town house style or single floor arrangement. Each apartment has approximately 1,100 square feet of living space plus over 450 square feet of balconies. The developers offer a complete finishing package for those who do not want the inconvenience of decorating their apartments themselves. All furnishings and decorating items are purchased locally and are of the finest quality. A considerable saving can be realized in purchasing Mexican made furnishings.

PORTS O'PROGRESS

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Marine Editor

Much has been said about the United States dropping to sixth place among the world's leading fishing nations. However the Department of the Interior's Bureau of Commercial Fisheries says this applies only to volume of catch. In value, the United States is second only to Japan. Peru, world leader in volume, is about 15th in value of catch.

The Port of Los Angeles continues as the nation's leading fishery port in both value and volume.

During 1968, 261.8 million pounds of fish valued at $29.1 million were landed by the San Pedro-Terminal Island fishing fleet.

Trailing the local fleet in volume landed were the fleets from Cameron, La.; Reedville, Va.; Pascagoula-Moss Point, Miss.; and Dulac-Chauvin, La.

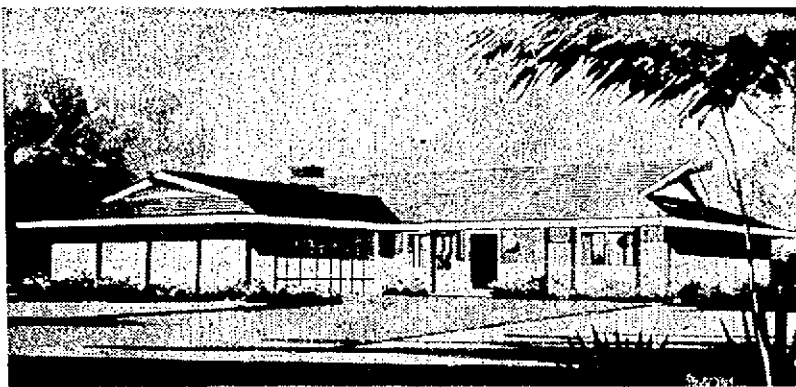

Im-PORT-ant People: Scott W. McCausland, assistant to William Agee, vice president in charge of Boise Cascade Corporation's shelter and recreation group, has been appointed general manager of Princess Cruises, operators of the luxury cruise ships, Princess Carla and Princess Italia.

TOP CIVILIAN scientists and armament experts for the United States Navy concluded a two-day "closed door" conference in Long Beach this week.

The U.S. Navy Ordnance and Hydroballistics Advisory Committee, chaired by Dr. Albert May of the U.S. Naval Ordnance Laboratory, Silver Spring, Md., met at the Naval Station.

ORDHAC is comprised of civilian scientists and directors of Navy ordnance labs, undersea and weapons research centers and systems commands throughout the nation.

While the meetings and discussions were classified, the scientists toured the Port of Long Beach and the city shoreline on Monday.

HEATHER HOMES... GI Opportunity

Scholz Homes, Inc. 'Enters' Southland

Scholz Homes, Inc., a major home builder in the nation, is now in California "to participate in the exciting and demanding home market of the west," according to Donald J. Scholz, president. Scholz Homes is one of the few publicly-held builders, and its stock is sold over the counter.

This often-cited firm, widely known in the industry and among consumers in areas other than the west, Scholz Homes is located at 1814 Monrovia St., Costa Mesa, with Chet Stare, vice president, in charge.

Right now there are six luxury apartment projects underway. They are conventionally built, using all of the time-honored design and technical know-how that Scholz Homes has developed and utilizes in their highly successful prefabrication program. These projects are in Mill Valley and San Mateo in Northern California, and Newport Beach, Tustin and Orange in the south.

Based in Toledo, Ohio, Scholz Homes is already a major successful pioneer in the prefabricated home and apartment field and has added a still greater dimension in its market penetration potential, with the acquisition of Schult Mobile Homes, a mainstay in that industry.

Scholz Homes has a well-earned and unique domination in the medium to high priced prefabricated packaged quality home market. Founded in 1946, as a conventional builder of homes, the firm incorporated in 1958 and started building prefabricated homes. Imaginative design and creative building and marketing concepts made prefabrication a practical reality at a savings to buyers.

Admittedly aiming at becoming the General Motors of the housing industry, the Scholz line of homes covers the entire spectrum of the growing housing market from mobile homes starting at $4,000 to sectional homes from $13,000 to $25,000, to luxury single family homes up to $100,000 plus, and blankets all rental ranges of the apartment market.

Heather Homes Prove Attractive to Ex-GIs Because of Loan Help

Veterans have the opportunity to buy these new contemporary 3 bedroom, 2 bath homes presented by Heather Homes for the total down of only $1. — the builder will pay all costs and escrow fees. The total price for the last two homes available are only $25,500 and $25,750. Non-vets and vets who have previously used their GI benefits can purchase these homes on attractive FHA terms.

PORTS O' PROGRESS

By JACK O. BALDWIN
Marine Editor

Much has been said about the United States dropping to sixth place among the world's leading fishing nations. However the Department of the Interior's Bureau of Commercial Fisheries says this applies only to volume of catch. In value, the United States is second only to Japan. Peru, world leader in volume, is about 15th in value of catch.

The Port of Los Angeles continues as the nation's leading fishery port in both value and volume.

During 1968, 261.8 million pounds of fish valued at $29.1 million were landed by the San Pedro-Terminal Island fishing fleet.

Trailing the local fleet in volume landed were the fleets from Cameron, La.; Reedville, Va.; Pascagoula-Moss Point, Miss.; and Dulac-Chauvin, La.

Im-PORT-ant People: Scott W. McCausland, assistant to William Agee, vice president in charge of Boise Cascade Corporation's shelter and recreation group, has been appointed general manager of Princess Cruises, operators of the luxury cruise ships, Princess Carla and Princess Italia.

TOP CIVILIAN scientists and armament experts for the United States Navy concluded a two-day "closed door" conference in Long Beach this week.

The U.S. Navy Ordnance and Hydroballistics Advisory Committee, chaired by Dr. Albert May of the U.S. Naval Ordnance Laboratory, Silver Spring, Md., met at the Naval Station.

ORDHAC is comprised of civilian scientists and directors of Navy ordnance labs, undersea and weapons research centers and systems commands throughout the nation.

While the meetings and discussions were classified, the scientists toured the Port of Long Beach and the city shoreline on Monday.

HEATHER HOMES... GI Opportunity

Scholz Homes, Inc. 'Enters' Southland

Scholz Homes, Inc., a major home builder in the nation, is now in California "to participate in the exciting and demanding home market of the west," according to Donald J. Scholz, president. Scholz Homes is one of the few publicly-held builders, and its stock is sold over the counter.

This often-cited firm, widely known in the industry and among consumers in areas other than the west, Scholz Homes is located at 1014 Monrovia St., Costa Mesa, with Chet Stare, vice president, in charge.

Right now there are six luxury apartment projects underway. They are conventionally built, using all of the time-honored design and technical know-how that Scholz Homes has developed and utilizes in their highly successful prefabrication program. These projects are in Mill Valley and San Mateo in Northern California, and Newport Beach, Tustin and Orange in the south.

Based in Toledo, Ohio, Scholz Homes is already a major successful pioneer in the prefabricated home and apartment field and has added a still greater dimension in its market penetration potential, with the acquisition of Scholz Mobile Homes, a mainstay in that industry.

Scholz Homes has a well-earned and unique domination in the medium to high priced prefabricated packaged quality home market. Founded in 1946, as a conventional builder of homes, the firm incorporated in 1958 and started building prefabricated homes. Imaginative design and creative building and marketing concepts made prefabrication a practical reality at a savings to buyers.

Admittedly aiming at becoming the General Motors of the housing industry, the Scholz line of homes covers the entire spectrum of the growing housing market from mobile homes starting at $4,000 to sectional homes from $13,000 to $25,000, to luxury single family homes up to $100,000 plus, and blankets all rental ranges of the apartment market.

Morningside Home Sales Soaring

Sales continue to soar at Morningside, and Irv Freivogel, sales manager for the Boise Cascade Building Co.'s development in Cerritos, said one of the major factors for the recent sales increase is the construction of a new regional shopping center just a few blocks away.

"Location has been one of our best selling points,"

Freivogel pointed out. "And the new shopping center now being built rounds out all of the urban services, such as schools, churches, entertainment, specialty shops and so on, that are practically within walking distance of the homes."

The spacious homes at Morningside are priced from $22,995 and may be purchased on conventional financing terms. Floor plans provide three or four bedrooms, two or three baths, large family rooms, completely built-in kitchen, and a spacious master bedroom suite with its own private bath, dressing room and lounge area that make it a private "retreat" for parents.

Model homes are open daily for inspection and may be reached from the San Gabriel River Freeway (605) by taking the South St. off-ramp and continuing west on South St. to Studebaker Rd., then left on Studebaker to the models, opposite 195th St. Sales and information telephone number is (213) 865-0285.

BENBOW DEBUTS

Benbow Valley, neighboring a stronghold of giant redwood trees, has made a public debut as one of the last major land holding in California to be subdivided and sold.

Situated on the Eel River, two miles south of Garberville on U.S. Highway 101, the opening of the subdivision coincides with the multi-million-dollar freeway extension which includes one of the largest "piano-wire" suspension bridges in the state.

Benbow Valley, totaling 15,000 acres, is between the Avenue of the Giants and Richardson Grove, where redwood trees, towering 300 ft., sprung up in the days of antiquity.

Richard Sterling & Associates, headed by Sterling Allen, with offices at 6922 Hollywood Blvd. in Hollywood and at 3320 Grand Ave., Oakland, is the sales agency.

The valley acreage has been assigned to the Allen group for sales. Several different types of terrain will be sold to appeal to a wide range of buyers and bring new residents, permanent or summer, to the Benbow Valley.

Lots with trees will sell from $2,950 to $10,950; lots along the golf course, from $7,450, and river lots, $12,550 to $13,550. The lowest priced lot, he said, is $2,550. A grant deed will be given with 5 per cent down payment.

'Total Lot' Concept at Mesa Woods

The "total lot" concept at Mesa Woods brings a twofold benefit to home-owners, according to Seymour R. Berman, partner in George J. Heltzer & Associates, Southern California's oldest exclusively residential builders, privately owned for over 44 years.

The first benefit is increased privacy for all family members; the second, full use of the yard, with no wasted square feet.

There benefits vie with innovative home designs, high quality at low price, and location in attracting buyers to the Costa Mesa development during the current preview period. Not quite ready for a formal opening, the builders yielded to buyer pressure to open for sales even though model homes were not completely furnished.

A much talked about feature in one of the model homes is a "conversation pit" whose double-hearth fireplace also warms the family room.

Four floor plans and 20 exteriors are available. Prices start at $27,950 and purchase may be made on VA, FHA or conventional terms.

To inspect the model homes, take San Diego Freeway to Fairview Road off-ramp, go one block north to Sunflower Avenue and right to model home complex. Via surface streets, take Harbor Boulevard or Bristol Street to 1101 Sunflower Avenue.

Trust Trade Program Spurs Sales at New Bellehurst in Buena Park

Sales at New Bellehurst have shown a marked increase since the introduction of the Trust Trade program at the fashionable country club community being developed by the Boise Cascade Building Co. in Buena Park.

Sales agent Joseph Thorman, of Trust Realty, said the program allows buyers to use the equity in their present home when purchasing a home in New Bellehurst.

"The Trust Trade program has enabled many families to move up to New Bellehurst," Thorman said. "It is fast becoming one of the most decisive factors in the sale of homes here in New Bellehurst."

The 900-acre prestige community was the first in the Southland to be built around a swank country club and a good deal of the community's activities center around the club, with its championship 27-hole golf course; Olympic-size swimming pool, complete with diving towers, and other recreational facilities. The clubhouse is fully equipped, with spacious lounge, restaurant, cocktail lounge, banquet and meeting rooms.

Another reason for the increased sales pace at this time, Thorman added, is the many diversified activities offered to the younger members of the family, from small children to teen-agers. Swimming and diving competitions and junior golf tournaments are held steadily throughout the summer, and many of the community's youngsters—members of the various teams—have won honors in regular competition. There is a teen-age recreation center, and the community has its own Girl Scout and Boy Scout troops and a number of other youthful organizations.

The homes in New Bellehurst are priced from $30,500 and are available in a variety of attractive, one and two-story stylings, based on many floor plans, providing up to 3,000 square feet of space. The equally large lots range in size up to one acre.

New Bellehurst may be reached from the Santa Ana Freeway via the Artesia-Beach Blvd. offramp, continuing east on Artesia to Beach, left on Beach to Malvern, and then right on Malvern to Burlingame and the model homes, which are open daily from 9 a.m. until dusk.

Alfonso Arribas is a master craftsman and practitioner of a lost art.

He has spent many years perfecting his trade. In the same number of years he could have studied to become a doctor.

He and his brothers are carrying on a family tradition started by their great-grandfather, specializing in glass-cutting.

Using imagination, a steady hand and good eyes, the Arribas brothers take a plain glass ornament and turn it into a work of art. Their talents are evident in letter monogramming on glassware, ashtrays or in animal, ship, flower or other designs cut into vases or candy dishes.

Most of the designs are created within a matter of minutes, but one elaborately crystal-cut vase took three days to make, while one rounded ashtray started out square before being subjected to the cutting edge of his diamond wheels.

He uses different size wheels to achieve varying designs, often changing wheels several times to cut one piece of glass.

IS IT EASIER to work with a thick or delicate glass? "You can tell how deep to cut by the noise," explained the Spanish-born craftsman. "The limits are learned after breaking quite a few," he laughed.

Alfonso and his brothers learned glass-cutting from their father, who is now retired. "He is still the old master," proclaimed a proud son. "There is an art which dates back to the Egyptians in 1500 B.C. and was introduced to Europe by the Romans."

His parents live in La Coruna, Spain, where the Arribas brothers grew up. An older brother, Tomas, runs the glass-cutting shop at the Seattle World's Fair Center and a younger brother, Manuel, helps Alfonso at the Old World Glass Shop at Disneyland.

When Alfonso and Tomas first came to the United States in 1962, they could stay only 20 days with visitors' visas, but they fell in love with the country and vowed to return.

Return they did in 1964 on invitation from the New York World's Fair. The fair committee wanted them to do an exhibition of glass-cutting on the Spanish pavilion.

While there, they received an offer from the city of Seattle to open a shop. It was the Seattle World's Fair which first brought the brothers to the United States.

"We were in Argentina on a world-wide exhibition and demonstration tour and read about the fair in a Spanish-language edition of Life magazine," Alfonso explained in his accent. "We decided to come see it."

It was in Seattle, too, where Alfonso met his wife, Cindy, who is from Hawaii. They now live in Anaheim and she occasionally helps out in the Disneyland shop.

ALFONSO began learning his trade when he was about 11, by playing around the cutting wheel. His family has won six first-place awards in glass-cutting competition in Europe. He recalled when the electricity was on for only a few hours a day, the brothers operated a bicycle wheel with one pumping, while the other cut glass.

Since opening his shop in Disneyland two years ago, Alfonso has done special design glassware with family crests for former President Lyndon Johnson, the presidents of the Philippines and Venezuela and former French President Charles de Gaulle.

He called his association with Disneyland fantastic, one which offers great opportunity for exposure. He believes the American people appreciate this kind of art. "I've never heard so many compliments."

Currently, the glass used for cutting is imported from all over the world but he hopes one day to have the facilities to blow his own glass.

He has another goal, also — to become an American citizen.

If he had it to do over again, would he become a glass cutter? "Yes, definitely," he replied after a pause.

Alfonso and his brothers have a dream, too. They hope to open a school to train glass-cutters.

"We won't allow glass-cutting to die," he said.

HIS WORLD becomes transparent when seen through the glass Alfonso Arribas carves in practicing the lost and ancient art of glass-cutting.

Southwestern festival: magnet for musicians

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

From San Francisco to San Diego, young musicians are tuning up for five days of competition and concerts for the Southwestern Youth Music Festival in Long Beach.

The 2,000 participants, ranging in age from 5 to 30 years, will perform Wednesday through next Sunday at Long Beach City College Auditorium, displaying their talents in vocal, instrumental and dance forms.

To make the festival truly festive, the opening event is a performance of Mozart's "Così fan tutte" by Pacific Opera Theater Wednesday at 8:30 p.m. Alberto Bolet, conductor of Long Beach Symphony Orchestra, will direct the orchestral accompaniment.

Caroline Ognibene and Pamela Gates will sing the roles of the two sisters; their sweethearts will be sung by Barney Spencer and Peter Roberts. The old philosopher will be played by Paul Johnson; Marlene Silvers will sing the part of Despina.

FOUNDED in 1967, Pacific Opera Theater is a professional opera training center which can boast more than 85 performances of standard operatic repertoire. All operas are sung in the original language except when a standard English translation is the preferred version — as in the Mozart operas.

Co-founders Edward Schick, musical director and vocal coach, and Josephine Lott, who serves as production coordinator, have seen their enterprise grow from an idea — launched with dedication, confidence and determination, but with little financial backing — to an organization which has guided young singers to promising professional careers.

The quality of their performances has attracted to the advisory board such distinguished members as conductor Bolet; Nadine Connor, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera; Marilyn Horne, opera star; Henrietta Pelta of Euterpe Opera; and William Vennard, chairman of the voice department of the University of Southern California.

PURPOSE of Pacific Opera Theater is to provide young singers with the training which is essential if they are to make the giant leap from college workshop to professional theater.

In keeping with this goal, the theater will offer to male contestants in the festival, scholarships for operatic training. Each scholarship has a value of $100 for training for lead-

Salad-swap taste-in may be by-(all means)-law

No judges, all jury was the rule at Las Hermanas Tuesday-salad-swap at home of Mary (Mrs. E. Walter) Gray.

Test-tasting the wide variety of tossed, molded, mixed, blended and chilled goodies were Merretta (Mrs. Court) Prowell, Virginia (Mrs. David) Eagleson (outgoing and incoming presidents of Assistance League), Nancy (Mrs. Lyman) Lough, Hester (Mrs. Brewster) Gray, Ruth (Mrs. Arthur) Evelev and Esther (Mrs. Glen) Gilmore.

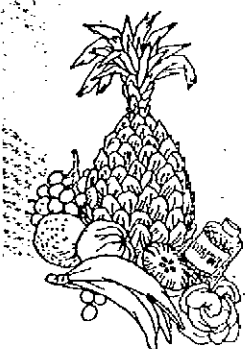

The sort-of meeting was originally conceived as a "taste and judge" effort to assist in the I.P.T. annual cookbook section and became such a favorite it may become a by-(all means)-law!

A sneaky little surprise was the bon voyage for Helen (Mrs. William) Price who is on the brink of a Tahitian vacation.

Merretta admitted the presidency of the League took its toll of vacation days so with only a week free the family made a dash to San Diego and then waterskied off Catalina.

Eleanor (Judge Charles) Smith brought a chicken (caloric nightmare) salad which she shared and it included:

- 3 cups diced chicken
- 2 cups seedless grapes
- 1 cup toasted almonds
- 1/2 cup mayonnaise
- 1 cup whipped cream

ACCEPTING safe-journey wishes from Nancy Lough is Tahiti-bound Helen Price. Esther Gilmore needs little urging.

PUNCH BOWL was a great place to gather for Merretta Prowell, Lillian Mills, Ruth Evelev and Thelma Denny.

Hester Gray with a nod toward the dieters made her chicken salad from similar ingredients but added mandarin oranges and substituted sour cream and Miracle Whip with a bit of chopped onion, parsley, lemon juice and herb salad dressing mix.

Grate 1 pound medium sharp cheese.

Mix with 2 small cans chopped ripe olives, 1/2 cup olive oil, 2 cloves garlic, minced and 1 medium can tomato sauce.

Spread on hamburger buns and heat at 300 degrees until bubbly.

With Ruby McCook's meringue cookies to top off the superior salads the verdict of the jury was "guilty" . . . of overindulgence.

From the recipe file of Jane Roberson came the molded cider salad.

- 1 1/2 cups cider
- 2 T brown sugar
- dash of cloves and cinnamon

Simmer all together then pour over 1 package lemon or orange Jello.

Add 1/4 cup lemon or orange juice

- 1 T grated orange rind
- 1/2 cup white grapes
- 1/2 cup chopped celery
- 1/2 cup red unpeeled apple cubes
- 1/2 cup white raisins (soaked overnight in sherry)

Mix, mold and chill.

Marge Sprague proved to be a non-conformist with her olive-cheese buns.

Hmmmm and howling from the jury produced this recipe:

ELEGANCE OF tea times past can be enjoyed in restored suites of the Queen Mary. The grand manner of design was favored to produce the intimate conversational area wrapped in tapestry walls and underscored with lush carpeting and Oriental area rugs.

Beauty treatment for a lady in waiting

TRUE REFLECTION of the glorious 30s is the generous use of wood in cornered writing desk. Representative art includes fluidity of line in the sculptured wood figure highlighting the desk top. Authentic-to-the-last-detail rooms include function, but never at the expense of design.

PERFECTLY matched veneer panels rim walls curving and turning to create storage niches and framing tapestry panels. Beautifully grained woods take precedence over design in fixed furniture while luxurious fabrics were utilized to give vigor to the rococo period.

By ELLEN KREC

Two years ago Long Beach gave berth to the Queen Mary. The Queen anchored to become a "fotel" in the most luxurious sense.

Less than a year remains of the total face lifting operation before the dowager Queen makes her debut.

A sneak preview of the to-date restoration promises the best of the 30s will combine with the function and excitement of the 70s.

Hubert Singer Associates is the interior design firm the Diner's Club selected to complete the total effort.

To make a ship function as a hotel requires an unrelenting professional approach and mammoth imagination.

The movies and the art nouveau period were the basis for the neo-classic decor.

According to Singer: "Our ultimate goal is to bring authenticity to the eye rather than a total return to a bad design period. For instance the opulent fabrics of that time can be greatly improved by using highly functional synthetics in harmonizing designs.

THE FINE WOOD paneling (all 54 varieties) and the rich tapestry panels will be retained along with some props such as wall clocks (stopped at the moment the ship docked never to run again) wall fans and mantle-filled heating units.

The eight finished suites are prime examples of the "eye authenticity" and one could well visualize the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, Winston Churchill or indeed Gertrude Lawrence, Noel Coward or Bea Lillie wafting about the rooms.

Eventually, in keeping with plans for the 30s theme the suites will bear such well-known travelers names.

Soft lush carpeting covers each suite from wall to wall with the conversational areas defined by Oriental rugs.

Settees or sofas are used depending on the suite size and are lushly covered with velvet or tapestry in coordinating colors.

Headboards are frequently padded with fabric to match a chair or even the wall panel but finally capped with a print notable for that period.

AT THE PORTHOLES MOIRE, velvet or brocade was the choice to contain the inner luxury without the jarring "too utilitarian" openings.

Marvelous slithery sculptured-wood figures accent some of the rooms but all are chastely draped according to the tastes of that era!

Colors always are muted with blendings of blue, green and gold or pumpkin and wine red.

The baths are a delight and still will boast the four-fancet tub although the salt water will not be in use!

The baths, though small, appear generous by lightening the walls with off-white paper. Tie-back shower drapes in gold complement the towel selection.

In the continental manner bidets are a part of most bathrooms.

The nearly 400 rooms will be contained on the upper three decks of the ship which will also boast some excellent around-the-world-type shops and elegant dining and dancing to the in-keeping-with-the-era music.

Shake out your chiffon, dust off your spats, and make reservations for the seasick-prone dream vacation... the ship that never leaves the shore but creates the perfect illusion of travel.

Plans for cutting the ribbon to the gangplank are firmed for July of 1971 but reservations may be impossible since nearly 85 per cent of the rooms will have "Do Not Disturb" signs on for two years.

Official visit

Wide Awake Rebekah Lodge 71 will host Mrs. Alta Teske, district deputy president for District 98, on her first official visit Monday at 728 Elm Ave. Guests from neighboring lodges are invited to the 8 p.m. event.

AT WIT'S END

We'll have to increase our space vocabulary

By ERMA BOMBECK

If we have learned anything from the last moon shot it is that by Nov. 18 when Apollo 12 blasts off, we must invent at least four new words to replace, "Fantastic, beautiful, great and wonderful."

Even Frank Borman noted that one of his fellow astronauts used a record "Four fantasies and three beautifuls within a two-minute span." NASA, of course, isn't publicizing it, but hearsay has it that there is a team of English teachers at work on the problem. They are isolated in a small trailer in a corner of Mission Control. A member of the committee told me it went something like this:

"Okay, fellas," said the chairman Burgess Evans. "Let's hold it down. The crux of the problem is this. We were caught with our Funk and Wagnalls down so to speak. People have been complaining that all they've heard from the astronauts, their wives and families, geologists and the people interviewed on the news programs are the same four tired words, 'fantastic, beautiful, great and wonderful.' All I know is, gentlemen, we can't send those poor devils to the moon again armed only with four adjectives. We've got to come up with some words that have some meaning, yet aren't repetitious."

"WHAT ABOUT 'spooky, weird, big and dusty,'" said one member, half to himself.

"Flash Gordon always used Neato," said another.

"We could resurrect Supercalifragilisticexpialidosis from Mary Poppins," said another.

"Get hold of yourself, man!" snorted Evans. "By the time they got that out they'd orbited it three times. No, it's got to be short, clear and concise."

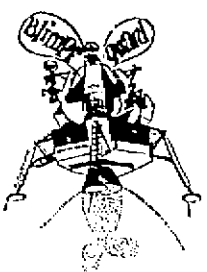

"What about things like unbelievable, remarkable, mexampled, incredible, propostorous, bombastic, inspired or stimulating?"

"We're not describing Raquel Welch, Norman. We're attempting to describe the moon."

"Maybe," said a young English professor, "we could use some right now words. Perhaps if we borrowed some lingo from the youngsters."

"Really, Larkins," sighed Evans, "can you imagine Conrad reporting to Mission Control that the 'Moon is out of sight?'"

"I hadn't thought of that, sir."

AT WIT'S END

We'll have to increase our space vocabulary

By ERMA BOMBECK

If we have learned anything from the last moon shot it is that by Nov. 18 when Apollo 12 blasts off, we must invent at least four new words to replace, "Fantastic, beautiful, great and wonderful."

Even Frank Borman noted that one of his fellow astronauts used a record "Four fantasies and three beautifuls within a two-minute span." NASA, of course, isn't publicizing it, but hearsay has it that there is a team of English teachers at work on the problem. They are isolated in a small trailer in a corner of Mission Control. A member of the committee told me it went something like this:

"Okay, fellas," said the chairman Burgess Evans. "Let's hold it down. The crux of the problem is this. We were caught with our Funk and Wagnalls down so to speak. People have been complaining that all they've heard from the astronauts, their wives and families, geologists and the people interviewed on the news programs are the same four tired words, 'fantastic, beautiful, great and wonderful.' All I know is, gentlemen, we can't send those poor devils to the moon again armed only with four adjectives. We've got to come up with some words that have some meaning, yet aren't repetitious."

"WHAT ABOUT spooky, weird, big and dusty," said one member, half to himself.

"Flash Gordon always used Neato," said another.

"We could resurrect Supercalifragilisticexpialidosis from Mary Poppins," said another.

"Get hold of yourself, man!" snorted Evans. "By the time they got that out they'd orbited it three times. No, it's got to be short, clear and concise."

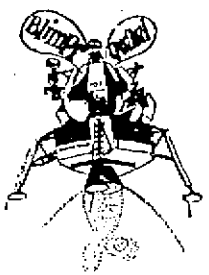

"What about things like unbelievable, remarkable, unexampled, incredible, propostorous, bombastic, inspired or stimulating?"

"We're not describing Raquel Welch, Morman. We're attempting to describe the moon."

"Maybe," said a young English professor, "we could use some right now words. Perhaps if we borrowed some lingo from the youngsters."

"Really, Larkins," sighed Evans, "can you imagine Conrad reporting to Mission Control that the 'Moon is out of sight'?"

"I hadn't thought of that, sir."

Summer hums with harmony of fine arts

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

For 58 students from six Long Beach high schools, a summer of study sparkled with fun will come to a climax today.

At 1:30 p.m. in Petroleum Club, 3636 Linden Ave., Dramatic Allied Arts Guild will present the young artists, actors and musicians in a fourth annual Youth Arts Summer Showcase. A total of more than $1,500 will be awarded to winners in the three categories.

Although this vital program for outstanding, talented high school students was initiated four years ago by members of DAAG, the event is weighted with particular significance summer.

Curtailment of the education budget made it necessary for public schools to eliminate their summer fine arts programs; thus, DAAG's Youth Symposium filled an even greater need than before.

LONG BEACH Unified School District cooperated with DAAG, arranging for teachers to select students qualified for training in the various arts.

Under leadership of DAAG president Mrs. Waller Crawford and symposium general chairman Mrs. Robert McNulty, classes were scheduled at Millikan High School from July 8 through Aug. 17.

Chairmen were Mrs. Grace Hurt and Mrs. John Messerschmitt, art; Mrs. Herman Graven, Mrs. LeMar Bailey and Mrs. Robert Utterback, drama; and Mrs. Oliver Connor and Mrs. Leslie Murphy, music.

The 100 DAAG members worked actively to make the schedule a lively one. They tempered the stultic sleeves-rolled-up working sessions with daily snacks and refreshments, and arranged frequent extra-curricular jaunts such as a bus trip to the Pageant of the Masters at Laguna Beach and a swimming party and dinner at Petroleum Club.

THE DRAMA group chose to polish a performance of "Dragnet," based on the television series. Virgil Labrum directed, with the assistance of Paul Doty. An officer from Long Beach Police Department gave technical assistance. On Aug. 9, the 16 young Thespians performed at the Armed Services YMCA and the following day, Sunday, the art and music groups entertained.

Today, art work will be exhibited at Petroleum Club, a synopsis of the play will be given, and the music students will compete for prizes.

No matter who captures cash awards and trophies, students and members of DAAG enthusiastically agree on one thing—all of them are winners of priceless intangibles in this Summer Symposium.

DEAR ABBY

Look around for a single man

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: When I started to go with this married man I was old enough to know better, so I can't blame anyone but myself. We worked at the same place, which made it easy. He told me he loved me and his was a rotten marriage, so if I would be patient, one day he would divorce his wife and marry me. Abby, maybe I was a fool, but I believed him and loved with all my heart. Meanwhile, in the three years we went together his wife had three babies.

I finally saw no future in it, so I called it quits. I haven't seen him alone for four months, but yesterday he sent me a telegram and called me up twice begging me to see him again as his wife is in the hospital having another baby. He says he still loves me, and to tell you the truth, I still have a soft spot in my heart for him. How can I get him out of my heart before I weaken? 40-YEAR-OLD-FOOL.

DEAR FOOL: There is nothing you can do about a "soft spot in your heart." Just make sure it doesn't spread to your head. Look around for a single man. Nothing kills an old romance quicker than a new one.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 24-year-old college-educated bachelor who works for an investment banking firm.

I was born with a "strawberry" birthmark on nearly half my face. It is not exactly hideous, but it is conspicuous, and I was very self-conscious about it as a child.

About a year ago a skin specialist recommended that I cover the mark with a pancake make-up. It helped a lot, and gave my cheek such a smooth, velvety look that I started using the make-up on my entire face. Then I started using just a hint of rouge. Next I applied a very faint bit of orchid eye shadow, and now I use a touch of mascara to darken my brows and lashes.

Last week I was called into the boss' office and was given an ultimatum. Either I see the company psychiatrist or find another job.

Abby, there is nothing to see a psychiatrist about. I am perfectly all right. If women can improve their appearance with beauty aids, why can't men? What would YOU do? ALL MAN. DEAR MAN: If I were you, I wouldn't protest too much. I would see the company psychiatrist. If you are "perfectly all right" you have nothing to fear.

DEAR ABBY: My wife is a lovely 35-year-old woman whom I love dearly, but here's the problem: She thinks I should run around and open the car door for her any time we go anywhere, even to the neighborhood shopping center.

I feel that any healthy lady should be able to open her own car door unless it's convenient for her husband to do so, except perhaps on more formal occasions.

It seems ridiculous to me for a woman to sit as if she were helpless waiting for car doors to be opened and closed for her.

Also is it not appropriate for a lady to lean over and unlock her escort's car door after he has been polite enough to open her door for her? D. W. (IRVING, TEX.)

DEAR D.W.: I should think that a gentleman should WANT to see that his lady gets into and out of an automobile safely, and the door opening and closing bit insures this. And yes, the considerate woman WILL lean over and unlock her escort's car door. (A man once confided that just that simple little gesture of thoughtfulness caused him to take a second look at a rather plain woman whom he subsequently married.)

CONFIDENTIAL TO "LEE": People who don't know where they're going usually wind up somewhere else.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 68700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Look around for a single man

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: When I started to go with this married man I was old enough to know better, so I can't blame anyone but myself. We worked at the same place, which made it easy. He told me he loved me and his was a rotten marriage, so if I would be patient, one day he would divorce his wife and marry me. Abby, maybe I was a fool, but I believed him and loved with all my heart. Meanwhile, in the three years we went together his wife had three babies.

I finally saw no future in it, so I called it quits. I haven't seen him alone for four months, but yesterday he sent me a telegram and called me up twice begging me to see him again as his wife is in the hospital having another baby. He says he still loves me, and to tell you the truth, I still have a soft spot in my heart for him. How can I get him out of my heart before I weaken? 40-YEAR-OLD-FOOL

DEAR FOOL: There is nothing you can do about a "soft spot in your heart." Just make sure it doesn't spread to your head. Look around for a single man. Nothing kills an old romance quicker than a new one.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 24-year-old college-educated bachelor who works for an investment banking firm.

I was born with a "strawberry" birthmark on nearly half my face. It is not exactly hideous, but it is conspicuous, and I was very self-conscious about it as a child.

About a year ago a skin specialist recommended that I cover the mark with a pancake make-up. It helped a lot, and gave my cheek such a smooth, velvety look that I started using just a hint of rouge. Next I applied a very faint bit of orchid eye shadow, and now I use a touch of mascara to darken my brows and lashes.

Last week I was called into the boss' office and was given an ultimatum. Either I see the company psychiatrist or find another job.

Abby, there is nothing to see a psychiatrist about. I am perfectly all right. If women can improve their appearance with beauty aids, why can't men! What would YOU do! ALL MAN.

DEAR MAN: If I were you, I wouldn't protest too much, I would see the company psychiatrist. If you are "perfectly all right" you have nothing to fear.

DEAR ABBY: My wife is a lovely 35-year-old woman whom I love dearly, but here's the problem: She thinks I should run around and open the car door for her any time we go anywhere, even to the neighborhood shopping center.

I feel that any healthy lady should be able to open her own car door unless it's convenient for her husband to do so, except perhaps on more formal occasions.

It seems ridiculous to me for a woman to sit as if she were helpless waiting for car doors to be opened and closed for her.

Also is it not appropriate for a lady to lean over and unlock her escort's car door after he has been polite enough to open her door for her? D. W. (IRVING, TEX.)

DEAR D.W.: I should think that a gentleman should WANT to see that his lady gets into and out of an automobile safely, and the door opening and closing bit insure this. And yes, the considerate woman WILL lean over and unlock her escort's car door. (A man once confided that just that simple little gesture of thoughtfulness caused him to take a second look at a rather plain woman whom he subsequently married.)

CONFIDENTIAL TO "LEE": People who don't know where they're going usually wind up somewhere else.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

BETTY JONES, FRITZ LUDEN DANCE 'JOURNEY FOR ANGEL AND CLOWN'

Students dance to school mind and body to respond

For most students at California State College, Long Beach, summer school has meant concentrated study, compressing a semester course into a few weeks.

For a select few summer school has meant an arduous period of disciplining mind and body—training muscles to respond, seemingly without effort, to impossible demands of rhythm and form.

These are the 220 students chosen for the Summer School of Dance. They have come from all parts of the United States to learn from a distinguished faculty of experts concerned with many aspects of dance, whose interest ranges from traditional ballet through modern and jazz techniques and who seek new interpretations of their art.

They are Alfredo Corvino, Gay Delanghe, Lucas Hoving, Carlton Johnson, Betty Jones, Fritz Ludin, Marion Scott, Bernard Skalka, Betty Walberg, Ethel Winter and Martha Wittman.

MUSICIANS who have added their dimension to the comprehensive course are Ruby Abeling, Lisa Fitch, David Freivogel, Richard Russell and Josef Wittman.

With the workshops and dance sessions have been coordinated lecture and film series, open to the public but required of students.

Saturday, the public may attend the second faculty dance concert—the first was given Friday—and on Thursday, Aug. 28, may see the Student Repertory Concert. Both performances will begin at 8:30 p.m. in the Little Theater on campus. Tickets for the faculty concert are $2.50. Admission to the student program is $1.

SATURDAY'S program will include "The Widow" danced by Betty Jones, "Night Conversations" by Ethel Winter, and solos by Carlton Johnson and Don Bondi.

A major work will be "Journey No. 2: For an Angel and a Clown," choreographed by Martha Wittman and danced by Betty Jones and Fritz Ludin.

"Uppercase," choreographed and danced by Gay Delanghe and Lucas Hoving, and "Jump, Jump," choreographed by Marion Scott, will be repeated from Friday night's program.

'Rose' blooms as piano rolls

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

Stephan Von Huene has been called a master of meticulous craftsmanship and fantastic imagery. His newest work is a fantasy using a pneumatic music system, "The Rosebud Announcer."

This work will be seen for the first time in the United States since it was inaugurated at "Electromagica" in Japan, beginning Thursday at Los Angeles County Museum of Art, 5905 Wilshire Blvd.

This is the description which Hal Glicksman of the museum's modern art staff offers:

"Seventy-five valves operate a visible xylophone, drum and cymbals, and a system of reeds hidden inside the machine, providing animation of the petals of the leather flower that dominates the center of the work."

"A single 100-foot roll controls the valves which reverse the roll at the end and make it play backward, suggesting that we are hearing a translation of visual phenomena into sound. The music belongs with the experience of seeing the machine perform and gives the effect of a player piano performing music which it has written itself."

Is that clear?

Three other works to be exhibited are "Kaleidophonic Dog," with five perforated rolls that produce sounds and motions of a dog; "Washboard Band" and "Tap Dancer."

This novelty will continue through Sept. 21.

A CLOTH and stitchery mural, made by sixth-grade girls at Los Cerritos School, will be on display at Dana Branch Library, 3680 Atlantic Ave., during the summer. The girls designed and completed the mural as their contribution to the City Beautification program.

At Brewitt Branch Library, 4336 Anaheim St., Virginia Butler has her first exhibit of oil paintings. Hours are noon to 9 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturdays, closed Fridays and Sundays.

ing roles, $60 for secondary roles and $40 for supporting roles.

Those to whom scholarships will be awarded need not be contest winners, Mrs. Loft said, but should have voices which are mature enough to sing opera repertoire in a workshop situation.

Major competitions in the Southwestern Youth Music Festival this year will be in the Amateur Championships and the Young Artists divisions. The amateur playoffs will take place at a banquet Friday night at the Elks Clubhouse, beginning at 8:30 p.m. The winner will receive $100.

The Furjanick Awards of $400 each in piano, instrumental and voice divisions will go to winners of the Young Artists finals at the closing session next Sunday at 8:30 p.m. at LBCC.

Amateur Championship winners will be presented later in a debut concert with Long Beach Symphony Orchestra; Young Artist winners are eligible for a performance with the symphony during its regular season.

A NEW EVENT this year will be a jazz concert by the Long Beach Neophonic Orchestra next Sunday at 5 p.m. at LBCC. This is a professional group whose purpose is to demonstrate the sound of the big band with music originals and arrangements by Stan Kenton, Count Basie, Buddy Rich and other big bandmen. It, and other festival concerts, are open to the public without charge. Admission to the opening Pacific Opera Theater presentation Wednesday is $3.50 for adults, $1.50 for students.

Among judges for festival events will be Reginald Stewart, Scottish pianist who made his American debut with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, and Bolet.

The hundreds of festival musicians will be greeted by LaVoy Hille, president of Southwestern Youth Music Festival, and Rilla McReynolds Branyon, executive director.

Joffrey Ballet

The Joffrey Ballet will make its first Los Angeles appearance in the Ahmanson Theater of The Music Center under auspices of Los Angeles Civic Light Opera. The two-week engagement will begin Aug. 27.

Opening night program will include "Olympics," "Secret Places," "Clowns" and "Fanfarita."

FRANK POOLER, ROGER ARDREY ANTICIPATE BRIGHT, NEW SEASON

Hear those notes! Can't you hear those notes---

Professor Frank Pooler hopes to hear from 600 alumni — and as many other people who can listen to a pattern of notes and sing it back to him.

For this tall, blond, blue-eyed director is expanding choir activities at California State College, Long Beach.

"With the backing of Dr. Gerald Daniel, chairman of the music department, our choral program is going like crazy and it's high time!" he said.

During his 10 years at CSLB, Pooler has earned such accolades from critics as "Pooler is a genius with a chorus." — "These singers sang with an outpouring of glorious tone." — "chorus singing at its finest." He's recorded and composed and conducted.

NOW, with an augmented staff, Pooler will increase choral groups to six: the A Cappella Choir, the Community College Chorus, the Chamber Choir, the Men's Chorus, the Women's Chorus and the College Choir.

Working with him will be Roger Ardrey from the University of Arizona and a baritone soloist with the Roger Wagner Chorale, and Wesley Reed, Pooler's former graduate assistant and most recently choral director at La Serna High School, Whittier.

The Community College Chorus will rehearse Tuesdays from 7 to 10 p.m.; repertoire will be major works composed during the 20th century.

"We want to do contemporary work because no one is doing it — and there is a great deal of great music to be heard. Why repeat just the old, traditional works?" Pooler explained.

ABOUT THOSE alumni.

"They've sung with me and they know what I want," he said. "But we are looking for new people, too! For the audition, we will play short, rhythmic patterns and the listener will sing them back. Most people can't sight sing, but they must be able to hear and reproduce the notes. We can build the voice but we can't build musicality if a person can't hear the tones. It's a quality of ear we're looking for."

"We want this Community Chorus to be a rewarding experience for its members."

"I've discovered over the years that the most important thing is that first rehearsal. If singers can leave saying, 'Wow! We've had a musical experience!' the chorus is off to a good start."

"Actually," he added, "directing a choral group is easier than directing a band. All you have to do is train the voices. You don't have to show the people where to put their fingers on the instruments."

Hollywood Bowl programs

The second half of Hollywood Bowl's season of summer concerts will begin this week with Andre Previn conducting Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra Tuesday and Thursday, Saturday, Ed Ames will sing songs from his popular repertoire; Hugo Montenegro will conduct.

On Aug. 26, Henry Lewis will conduct the orchestra, with Leonard Rose playing the Cello Concerto by Dvorak. Thursday, Aug. 28, the program will have three conductors: Boris Bott, Francois Huybrechts and Farhad Meekhat.

FINAL WEEK of the 1959 Hollywood Bowl season will open Sept. 2 with Zubin Mehta conducting the Los Angeles Philharmonic in a program of music which will be performed on the orchestra's tour of Japan, starting Sept. 7 in Tokyo.

BETTY JONES, FRITZ LUDEN DANCE 'JOURNEY FOR ANGEL AND CLOWN'

Students dance to school mind and body to respond

For most students at California State College, Long Beach, summer school has meant concentrated study, compressing a semester course into a few weeks.

For a select few summer school has meant an arduous period of disciplining mind and body—training muscles to respond, seemingly without effort, to impossible demands of rhythm and form.

These are the 220 students chosen for the Summer School of Dance. They have come from all parts of the United States to learn from a distinguished faculty of experts concerned with many aspects of dance, whose interest ranges from traditional ballet through modern and jazz techniques and who seek new interpretations of their art.

They are Alfredo Corvino, Gay Delanghe, Lucas Hoving, Carlton Johnson, Betty Jones, Fritz Ludin, Marion Scott, Bernard Skalka, Betty Walberg, Ethel Winter and Martha Wittman.

MUSICIANS who have added their dimension to the comprehensive course are Ruby Abeling, Lisa Fitch, David Freivogel, Richard Russell and Josef Wittman.

With the workshops and dance sessions have been coordinated lecture and film series, open to the public but required of students.

Saturday, the public may attend the second faculty dance concert—the first was given Friday—and on Thursday, Aug. 29, may see the Student Repertory Concert. Both performances will begin at 8:30 p.m. in the Little Theater on campus. Tickets for the faculty concert are $2.50. Admission to the student program is $1.

SATURDAY'S program will include "The Widow" danced by Betty Jones, "Night Conversations" by Ethel Winter, and solos by Carlton Johnson and Don Bondi.

A major work will be "Journey No. 2: For an Angel and a Clown," choreographed by Martha Wittman and danced by Betty Jones and Fritz Ludin.

"Uppercase," choreographed and danced by Gay Delanghe and Lucas Hoving, and "Jump, Jump," choreographed by Marion Scott, will be repeated from Friday night's program.

GENE WILKES, CHARLES COLGAN, MERILEE MAGNUSON IN 'LA FILLE'

BALLET AL FRESCO

'La Fille' debut at Laguna

The West Coast premiere of the ballet, "La Fille Mal Gardée," (The Badly Guarded Daughter), will be featured on the fourth annual Ballet Al Fresco program by Laguna Beach Civic Ballet Company Aug. 30. Curtain time will be 8:30 p.m. in Irvine Bowl.

Appearing as the starry-eyed lovers, Lise and Colas, will be Merilee Magnuson and Hal O'Neal. Lead comedy roles will be danced by Gene Wilkes as Alain and Charles Colgan as Simone, Lise's mother. Also on the evening of dance under the stars will be "Pas de Quatre" to music by Pugnani, and "Dreams," performed to the music of Bartok.

Ballet tickets are on sale at the Festival of Arts box office, 650 Laguna Canyon Road, Laguna Beach. The entire program has been choreographed by the Russian-born founder and artistic director of the company, Lila Zali.

'Rose' blooms as piano rolls

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

Stephan Von Hueene has been called a master of meticulous craftsmanship and fantastic imagery. His newest work is a fantasy using a pneumatic music system, "The Rosebud Announcer."

This work will be seen for the first time in the United States since it was inaugurated at "Electromagica" in Japan, beginning Thursday at Los Angeles County Museum of Art, 5905 Wilshire Blvd.

This is the description which Hal Glicksman of the museum's modern art staff offers:

"Seventy-five valves operate a visible xylophone, drum and cymbals, and a system of reeds hidden inside the machine, providing animation of the petals of the leather flower that dominates the center of the work."

"A single 100-foot roll controls the valves which reverse the roll at the end and make it play backward, suggesting that we are hearing a translation of visual phenomena into sound. The music belongs with the experience of seeing the machine perform and gives the effect of a player piano performing music which it has written itself."

Is that clear?

Three other works to be exhibited are "Kaleidophonie Dog," with five perforated rolls that produce sounds and motions of a dog; "Washboard Band" and "Tap Dancer." This novelty will continue through Sept. 21.

A CLOTH and stitchery mural, made by sixth-grade girls at Los Cerritos School, will be on display at Dana Branch Library, 3680 Atlantic Ave., during the summer. The girls designed and completed the mural as their contribution to the City Beautification program.

At Brewitt Branch Library, 4036 Anaheim St., Virginia Butler has her first exhibit of oil paintings. Hours are noon to 9 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturdays, closed Fridays and Sundays.

ing roles, $60 for secondary roles and $40 for supporting roles.

Those to whom scholarships will be awarded need not be contest winners, Mrs. Lott said, but should have voices which are mature enough to sing opera repertoire in a workshop situation.

Major competitions in the Southwestern Youth Music Festival this year will be in the Amateur Championships and the Young Artists divisions. The amateur playoffs will take place at a banquet Friday night at the Elks Clubhouse, beginning at 8:30 p.m. The winner will receive $100.

The Farjanick Awards of $400 each in piano, instrumental and voice divisions will go to winners of the Young Artists finals at the closing session next Sunday at 8:30 p.m. at LBCC.

Amateur Championship winners will be presented later in a debut concert with Long Beach Symphony Orchestra; Young Artist winners are eligible for a performance with the symphony during its regular season.

A NEW EVENT this year will be a jazz concert by the Long Beach Neophonic Orchestra next Sunday at 5 p.m. at LBCC. This is a professional group whose purpose is to demonstrate the sound of the big band with music originals and arrangements by Stan Kenton, Count Basie, Buddy Rich and other big bandmen. It, and other festival concerts, are open to the public without charge. Admission to the opening Pacific Opera Theater presentation Wednesday is $3.50 for adults, $1.50 for students.

Among judges for festival events will be Reginald Stewart, Scottish pianist who made his American debut with the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, and Bolet.

The hundreds of festival musicians will be greeted by LaVoy Halle, president of Southwestern Youth Music Festival, and Rilla McReynolds Branyon, executive director.

Joffrey Ballet

The Joffrey Ballet will make its first Los Angeles appearance in the Ahmanson Theater of The Music Center under auspices of Los Angeles Civic Light Opera. The two-week engagement will begin Aug. 27.

Opening night program will include "Olympics," "Secret Places," "Clowns" and "Fanfarita."

FRANK POOLER, ROGER ARDREY ANTICIPATE BRIGHT, NEW SEASON

Hear those notes! Can't you hear those notes---

Professor Frank Pooler hopes to hear from 600 alumni — and as many other people who can listen to a pattern of notes and sing it back to him.

For this tall, blond, blue-eyed director is expanding choir activities at California State College, Long Beach.

"With the backing of Dr. Gerald Daniel, chairman of the music department, our choral program is going like crazy and it's high time!" he said.

During his 10 years at CSLB, Pooler has earned such accolades from critics as "Pooler is a genius with a chorus," — "These singers sang with an outpouring of glorious tone," — "chorus singing at its finest." He's recorded and composed and conducted.

NOW, with an augmented staff, Pooler will increase choral groups to six: the A Cappella Choir, the Community College Chorus, the Chamber Choir, the Men's Chorus, the Women's Chorus and the College Choir.

Working with him will be Roger Ardrey from the University of Arizona and a baritone soloist with the Roger Wagner Chorale, and Wesley Reed, Pooler's former graduate assistant and most recently choral director at La Serna High School, Whittier.

The Community College Chorus will rehearse Tuesdays from 7 to 10 p.m.; repertoire will be major works composed during the 20th century.

"We want to do contemporary work because no one is doing it — and there is a great deal of great music to be heard. Why repeat just the old, traditional works?" Pooler explained.

ABOUT THOSE alumni. "They've sung with me and they know what I want," he said. "But we are looking for new people, too! For the audition, we will play short, rhythmical patterns and the listener will sing them back. Most people can't sight sing, but they must be able to hear, and reproduce the notes. We can build the voice but we can't build musicality if a person can't hear the tones. It's a quality of ear we're looking for.

"We want this Community Chorus to be a rewarding experience for its members."

"I've discovered over the years that the most important thing is that first rehearsal. If singers can leave saying, 'Wow! We've had a musical experience!' the chorus is off to a good start."

"Actually," he added, "directing a choral group is easier than directing a band. All you have to do is train the voices. You don't have to show the people where to put their fingers on the instruments."

Hollywood Bowl programs

The second half of Hollywood Bowl's season of summer concerts will begin this week with Andre Previn conducting Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra Tuesday and Thursday. Saturday, Ed Ames will sing songs from his popular repertoire; Hugo Montenegro will conduct.

On Aug. 26, Henry Lewis will conduct the orchestra, with Leonard Rose playing the Cello Concerto by Dvorak. Thursday, Aug. 28, the program will have three conductors: Boris Brott, Francois Huybrechts and Farhad Meckat.

FINAL WEEK of the 1969 Hollywood Bowl season will open Sept. 2 with Zubin Mehta conducting the Los Angeles Philharmonic in a program of music which will be performed on the orchestra's tour of Japan, starting Sept. 7 in Tokyo.

Karpin on bridge

by Fred L. Karpin

The story is told of the two players who, according to eyewitnesses, took between 14 and 15 minutes to bid the North-South cards in the deal presented.

As can be observed, they stopped a three spade contract. In the play, no tricks were made easily.

After play had ended, they began to bemoan their failure to bid the game. The East defender interrupted with the caustic comment: "You could never have bid it tonight. You just didn't have the time."

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

South thought for a long time before deciding what to do on his 12-point hand — and then felt obligated to bid, since a "slow pass" would have indicated a near-opening bid.

"It took North quite a while to make his one diamond response. Evidently he had a problem as to whether to bid his minor suit or his major suit."

South made his one spade rebid without any deliberation, since he had no alternative bid. But now North went into one of the longest huddles on record.

NORTH'S PROBLEM was, of course, whether to bid two spades or three spades. He was afraid to bid just two spades, for fear that it might be passed by South with a hand that would produce a game; and he was unhappy about a three spade rebid, since this bid might push South into an unmakeable game.

He finally decided to take his chances on the three spade bid (for which he had his values).

South's pass to North's three spade bid was normal — but it took him four or five minutes to reach his decision. It was the right decision, despite the result.

Of course, the making of 10 tricks was due to real

AN EMPIRE OF SIGHTS

Take to the air to 'discover' all of Alaska

By FRED TAYLOR KRAFT
Travel Editor

FAIRBANKS, Alaska — Famous for more than 70 years as one of the great gold rush capitals of the world, you'd expect this second largest Alaska city — less than 200 miles south of the Arctic Circle — to spend its long, dark, biting winters innovating visitor pleasures, and its long summer days entertaining the growing tide of tourism sweeping this way.

It does just that, which is to say it is one of the prime tourist destinations in the 49th state.

But Fairbanks, contrary to what many folks think, has no time to bask in any illusory atmosphere. It has become a hustling, bustling, cosmopolitan — and thriving — city which epitomizes the vibrant, forward-moving Alaska of today.

Alaska, now in its tenth year of statehood, not only is being "discovered" by new hordes of tourists but also is luring a new breed of pioneer, the oil producer, the manufacturer and the businessman, who is pouring millions into the state's rocketing economy.

These Johnny-come-latelys have plenty of elbow room, from Eagle west to Nome, from the gateway city of Ketchikan north to tundra's Brudhoe Bay where one of the major oil strikes of the century was made last year. Its 586,400 square miles also includes vast timber resources, expanding fisheries and a flourishing agricultural economy.

BECAUSE its differences in climate, people, geography and economy are almost as great as those, say, between the East and West Coasts of the "Lower 48," Alaska often is divided into six imaginary regions — the Panhandle, the south-central portion, the interior, western Alaska, southwest Alaska, and the Arctic.

Alaskans have been known to tell Texans that if they don't quit bragging about their state they'll whack Alaska in two, making Texas the third largest in the Union.

And well it could. Alaska is so big that it could comfortably contain Texas, California and Arizona combined, and have ample room left over to toss in New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Delaware and New Jersey.

THIS ENORMITY, combined with the diverse terrain, is capturing the imagination of the traveler. Last year's crop of 100,000 visitors is expected to leap 12 to 14 per cent in 1969, about 75 per cent of whom will tour the greater part of Alaska, the Arctic area excepted.

Some come via the Alaskan (Alcan) Highway, a 1,520-mile thoroughfare that stretches from Dawson Creek, B.C. to its terminus at Fairbanks. Others jam the Inside Passage, whose rapturous beauty is but a prelude to the scenic wonders awaiting them beyond Ketchikan: 33,000 miles of coastline, thousands of islands, great plains, strange little settlements inhabited only by Indians and Eskimos, forests whose denizens include bears, deer and moose, mighty glaciers and ice fields teaming with seals, a variety of wilderness resorts, fjords and huge rivers alive with fish; active volcanoes, broad agricultural valleys, the highest peak — Mt. McKinley, 20,300 feet — on the continent, and a half-dozen mountain ranges.

Because distances are so great, and because transportation remains a major problem, those who come overland often wisely arrive in trailers or, at least, equipped with camping gear. This not only permits interludes along an inviting stream or in a mountain meadow, but also eliminates the necessity of making advance hotel reservations. And let's face it, hotels and dining can be expensive, sometimes as much as 30 per cent more than in comparable facilities in the "Lower 48."

EVEN SO the motorist cannot hope to see as much as half of Alaska since its 5,200-mile highway system does not yet extend but a few miles west of Anchorage or Mt. McKinley National Park, or less than 200 miles northwest of Fairbanks as the bush pilot flies.

Important tourist stops like Nome, on the Seward Peninsula overlooking Siberia, and the Eskimo settlements of Kotzebue and Barrow within the Arctic Circle, may be reached only by air by the average tourist, although some steamboats do ply as far north as Nome four months of the year. In between are vast areas, some largely unexplored, others known only to intrepid bush pilots.

No one can see Alaska adequately without going to the air, and 90 per cent of the state's populated areas and scenic marvels are served by 727 jets of Alaska Airlines. It flies from Seattle to such points north as Prince Rupert on the Canadian border, and on to Kotzebue within the Arctic rim.

Both Alaska Airlines and Westours serve such choice tourist destinations as breath-taking Glacier Bay National Monument, Bell Island Hot Springs Fishing Resort, Taku Lodge, Yakutat to hunt the rare Blue Glacier bear, the Robert Service Shrine at Dawson, McCarthy ghost town and the Kenai Peninsula for fishing and moose hunting. The state's mightiest glaciers can be viewed from Alaska's jets. Typical fares range from $89 from Seattle to Anchorage, $60 from Anchorage to Nome.

THOUSANDS of tourists who travel Alaska consider it to be one of the most colorful carriers anywhere. Its "Golden Nugget Jets" are gaily decorated in the Victorian manner with deep pile red carpets and flocked red wallpaper, rich gold and moss-green velvet seat covers, and red velvet flounces with gold braid hanging from the overhead service units.

Karpin on bridge

by Fred L. Karpin

The story is told of the two players who, according to eyewitnesses, took between 14 and 15 minutes to bid the North-South cards in the deal presented.

As can be observed, they stopped a three spade contract. In the play, no tricks were made easily.

After play had ended, they began to bemoan their failure to bid the game. The East defender interrupted with the caustic comment: "You could never have bid it tonight. You just didn't have the time."

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

"South thought for a long time before deciding what to do on his 12-point hand — and then felt obligated to bid, since a "slow pass" would have indicated a near-opening bid.

"It took North quite a while to make his one diamond response. Evidently he had a problem as to whether to bid his minor suit or his major suit.

"South made his one spade rebid without any deliberation, since he had no alternative bid. But now North went into one of the longest huddles on record.

NORTH'S PROBLEM was, of course, whether to bid two spades or three spades. He was afraid to bid just two spades, for fear that it might be passed by South with a hand that would produce a game; and he was unhappy about a three spade rebid, since this bid might push South into an unmakeable game.

He finally decided to take his chances on the three spade bid (for which he had his values).

South's pass to North's three spade bid was normal — but it took him four or five minutes to reach his decision. It was the right decision, despite the result.

Of course, the making of 10 tricks was due to real

AN EMPIRE OF SIGHTS

Take to the air to 'discover' all of Alaska

By FRED TAYLOR KRAFT
Travel Editor

FAIRBANKS, Alaska — Famous for more than 70 years as one of the great gold rush capitals of the world, you'd expect this second-largest Alaska city — less than 200 miles south of the Arctic Circle — to spend its long, dark, biting winters innovating visitor pleasures, and its long summer days entertaining the growing tide of tourism sweeping this way.

It does just that, which is to say it is one of the prime tourist destinations in the 48th state.

But Fairbanks, contrary to what many folks think, has no time to bask in any idyllic atmosphere. It has become a hustling, bustling, cosmopolitan — and thriving — city which epitomizes the vibrant, forward-moving Alaska of today.

Alaska, now in its tenth year of statehood, not only is being "discovered" by new hordes of tourists but also is luring a new breed of pioneer, the oil producer, the manufacturer and the businessman, who is pouring millions into the state's rocketing economy.

These Johnny-come-latelys have plenty of elbow room, from Eagle west to Nome, from the gateway city of Ketchikan north to tundra's Brudhoe Bay where one of the major oil strikes of the century was made last year. Its 586,400 square miles also includes vast timber resources, expanding fisheries and a flourishing agricultural economy.

BECAUSE its differences in climate, people, geography and economy are almost as great as those say, between the East and West Coasts of the "Lower 48," Alaska often is divided into six imaginary regions — the Panhandle, the south-central portion, the interior, western Alaska, southwest Alaska, and the Arctic.

Alaskans have been known to tell Texans that if they don't quit bragging about their state they'll whack Alaska in two, making Texas the third largest in the Union.

And well it could. Alaska is so big that it could comfortably contain Texas, California and Arizona combined, and have ample room left over to toss in New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, Delaware and New Jersey.

THIS ENORMITY, combined with the diverse terrain, is capturing the imagination of the traveler. Last year's crop of 100,000 visitors is expected to leap 12 to 14 per cent in 1969, about 75 per cent of whom will tour the greater part of Alaska, the Arctic area excepted.

Some come via the Alaska (Alcan) Highway, a 1,520-mile thoroughfare that stretches from Dawson Creek, B.C. to its terminus at Fairbanks. Others jam the Inside Passage, whose rapturous beauty is but a prelude to the scenic wonders awaiting them beyond Ketchikan: 33,000 miles of coastline, thousands of islands, great plains, strange little settlements inhabited only by Indians and Eskimos, forests whose denizens include bears, deer and moose, mighty glaciers and ice fields teaming with seals, a variety of wilderness resorts, fjords and huge rivers alive with fish; active volcanos, broad agricultural valleys, the highest peak — Mt. McKinley, 20,300 feet — on the continent, and a half-dozen mountain ranges.

Because distances are so great, and because transportation remains a major problem, those who come overland often wisely arrive in trailers or, at least, equipped with camping gear. This not only permits interludes along an inviting stream or in a mountain meadow, but also eliminates the necessity of making advance hotel reservations. And let's face it, hotels and dining can be expensive, sometimes as much as 30 per cent more than in comparable facilities in the "Lower 48."

EVEN SO the motorist cannot hope to see as much as half of Alaska since its 5,200-mile highway system does not yet extend but a few miles west of Anchorage or Mt. McKinley National Park, or less than 200 miles northwest of Fairbanks as the bush pilot flies.

LOS ANGELES — Continental Airlines will begin Golden Jet Mainland-Hawaii service Sept. 9 and introduce the lowest fares ever offered on scheduled commercial flights to the 50th state, it is announced by President Robert F. Six.

The Civil Aeronautics Board gave the airline authority to directly link seven mainland cities with Honolulu and Hilo in the recently announced July 22 domestic phase of the Transpacific Route Investigation. The cities are Los Angeles - Ontario - Long Beach, Chicago, Kansas City, Denver, Phoenix, Portland and Seattle-Tacoma.

The new low fare structure is based on an off-peak concept under which the carrier will offer fares as much as 19 per cent lower than existing rates in coach and economy Monday through Thursday. In addition, Continental's fares for the peak travel period of Friday through Sunday will be as much as 11 per cent lower than present fares. Southern Californians can fly from Los Angeles to Hawaii for $85, economy class, Monday through Thursday, compared with $100 or more charged by other airlines.

IN ANNOUNCING the Hawaiian flights, Six pointed out that the flights will raise the standard of comfort for travelers substantially on its Mainland-Hawaii route.

"It's a tremendous challenge," said Six, "but we intend to give the traveler to Hawaii a new kind of service. We will feature our unique five-abreast seating in coach and economy, meaning that passengers in both classes will have a seat as wide as first class. This adds greatly to individual comfort and gives our airline a competitive edge over other carriers, all of which have six abreast seating.

All flights to Hawaii will be with 707-320C Intercontinental Golden Jet, one of the largest jets now flying. The 50th State will also be served with "Super Jets" when the company takes delivery of the first four 747s in the spring of 1970.

Six said that initially 14 weekly round trips are planned between Chicago, Los Angeles and Hawaii.

Aeronaves links Mexican resorts

In a realignment of air line routes and schedules, the most popular jet set s p a s, "get-away-from-it-all" resorts and fishing areas of Mexico's golden west coast have been linked together by Aeronaves de Mexico's DC-9 jet service. With stop-over privileges, one may fly from Los Angeles to La Paz, La Paz to Puerto Vallarta, Puerto Vallarta to Acapulco, then on to metropolitan Mexico City, colonial Guadalajara and back to Los Angeles.

The round trip air fare for the entire package is $184.

Residents of Orange County may save by departing from Tijuana. In another realignment of routes, the new Tijuana-Puerto Vallarta non-stop jet service of Aeronaves has already caught on with San Diegans who want to get away from it all. The round-trip fare for this new service is $120.80.

Continental slashes Hawaii fares

LOS ANGELES — Continental Airlines will begin Golden Jet Mainland-Hawaii service Sept. 9 and introduce the lowest fares ever offered on scheduled commercial flights to the 50th state, it is announced by President Robert F. Six.

The Civil Aeronautics Board gave the airline authority to directly link seven mainland cities with Honolulu and Hilo in the recently announced July 22 domestic phase of the Transpacific Route Investigation. The cities are Los Angeles - Ontario - Long Beach, Chicago, Kansas City, Denver, Phoenix, Portland and Seattle-Tacoma.

The new low fare structure is based on an off-peak concept under which the carrier will offer fares as much as 19 per cent lower than existing rates in coach and economy Monday through Thursday. In addition, Continental's fares for the peak travel period of Friday through Sunday will be as much as 11 per cent lower than present fares. Southern Californians can fly from Los Angeles to Hawaii for $85, economy class, Monday through Thursday, compared with $100 or more charged by other airlines.

IN ANNOUNCING the Hawaiian flights, Six pointed out that the flights will raise the standard of comfort for travelers substantially on its Mainland-Hawaii route.

"It's a tremendous challenge," said Six, "but we intend to give the traveler to Hawaii a new kind of service. We will feature our unique five-abreast seating in coach and economy, meaning that passengers in both classes will have a seat as wide as first class. This adds greatly to individual comfort and gives our airline a competitive edge over other carriers, all of which have six abreast seating.

All flights to Hawaii will be with 707-320C Intercontinental Golden Jet, one of the largest jets now flying. The 50th State will also be served with "Super Jets" when the company takes delivery of the first four 747s in the spring of 1970.

Six said that initially 14 weekly round trips are planned between Chicago, Los Angeles and Hawaii.

Aeronaves links Mexican resorts

In a realignment of air line routes and schedules, the most popular jet set spas, "get-away-from-it-all" resorts and fishing areas of Mexico's golden west coast have been linked together by Aeronaves de Mexico's DC-9 jet service. With stop-over privileges, one may fly from Los Angeles to La Paz, La Paz to Puerto Vallarta, Puerto Vallarta to Acapulco, then on to metropolitan Mexico City, colonial Guadalajara and back to Los Angeles.

The round trip air fare for the entire package is $184.

Residents of Orange County may save by departing from Tijuana. In another realignment of routes, the new Tijuana-Puerto Vallarta non-stop jet service of Aeronaves has already caught on with San Diegans who want to get away from it all. The round-trip fare for this new service is $120.80.

The city's pioneer past remains preserved at Alaska, a "Knott's Berry Farm" of old structures, locomotives, sternwheelers and other memorabilia of sounder days. It is the seat of the renowned University of Alaska, has a fine museum and other tourist lures. Stories-high office buildings and apartments are evidence of its

TRAVELING WITH DELAPLANE

Tahitian shudders at 'tourist banane,' or group tour

By STAN DELAPLANE
THE ISLANDS-UNDER-THE-WIND — A tourist agency man in Tahiti said to me: "If we could only have tourist business without the tourist banane — the banana tourist." (The group tour. It's the first time they've seen a growing banana.) In Fiji: "I dread the day when air fares come down and the mob moves in." In a breezy, open-air bar in Papeete, the sun splashing gold over the evening sky and the black peaks of Moorea: "Henri? Oh, he couldn't take it anymore. Jets coming in two or three times a day — do you know how many traffic lights we have between here and the airport?"

"He and his vahine moved up to one of the other islands."

So we caught a thundery old DC-4, and a French pilot with a huge beard and bush jacket flew us to the Islands-Under-The-Wind. You eat well in the French islands. Butter from Normandy. Crusty French bread baked by Chinese — it's a Government subsidy. (On faraway Bora Bora the 2,000 islanders eat 1,700 loaves a day.) The wine comes from France, the rum from sugary Martinique.

Nobody works very hard. The maid puts a sheet on your bed. Borrows a cigarette and smokes it sitting on the floor. "There's so much work," she sighs.

Beach man gets A.N.Z. position

Harold L. Weber has begun his duties as North American agency and interline sales manager for Air New Zealand in Los Angeles, an appointment announced by Alex T. Gilmore, North American manager for the airline.

Want to bring a little Tahiti home? (Put a jasmine flower behind your ear. Right ear, "One is taken." Left ear, "One is looking around.") Now, take three pounds of raw tuna. Juice of three limes. Put the lime juice on the tuna and put in the refrigerator for four hours. This cooks it. Chop a little onion, green pepper and carrot into it. Top it with a spoonful of coconut milk — you get it canned and frozen in gourmet shops. (This is not the water in the coconut. It's the cream squeezed out of grated fresh coconut meat.) "We've seen paintings of Tahiti girls done on black velvet. Do you buy those in Tahiti?" THOSE WERE done by Leoteeg. Great talent, great taste for rum. Poor Leoteeg ran his scooter into a bridge and killed himself, and I doubt there's an original painting in the islands. Some copies in the International Market in Honolulu. (Copyright Chronicle Publishing Co. 1959)

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Keith G. Dunbar, 374 Roycroft Ave. She was attired in a gown of peau de Ange lace with a cage top and chapel train.

Attending the couple were the bride's sister, Mary Elizabeth Dunbar and Andrew Pazaruski.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert H. Sonn, Tacoma, Wash. He is a graduate of Washington State University at Pullman and affiliated with Phi Delta Theta.

Mrs. Sonn is an alumna of Wilson High School, Long Beach City College and California State College, Long Beach.

A reception followed in Allen Center Officer's Club. A first home will be made in San Diego.

A home in Germany awaits Ethel M. Hatch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Preston C. Hatch, 6540 Denmead St., and Stephen R. Scott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Horton Scott of Torrance, who exchanged vows Saturday afternoon in St. Pancratius Catholic Church.

Mrs. Scott wore a gown of imported organza, primess style with short bell sleeves. A waltz train cascaded to chapel length.

Lorraine Daher attended as maid of honor. CeCe Mendoza and Kathy Battaglia were bridesmaids. Tommye Scott was flower girl.

Burton L. Veinot served as best man. Preston C. Hatch Jr., brother of bride, and Richard Lynd seated friends and relatives.

The bride is a graduate of Lakewood High School and Queen of Angels School of Nursing. Her husband was graduated from Cal Poly at San Luis Obispo.

Following a reception at Paramount Elk's Club the Scotts departed for a trip to Lake Tahoe.

Merv Goes Network

By ROBERT MUSKEL
United Press International

Merv Griffin's new late night talk show at 11:30 p.m., Monday, Ch. 2, is the most eagerly awaited premiere of the sparse summer openings since it marks Griffin's elevation to the networks after five years of syndication and pitches him into one of the most hotly competitive time slots on the schedule.

CBS has planned a big welcome for merry Merv and his venerable sidekick, 75-year-old Arthur Treacher. Johnny Carson on NBC-TV has planned an even bigger one — a series of shows from Hollywood drawing on such superstars as Dean Martin, Bob Hope, Rowan and Martin and Lucille Ball.

This is the powerful NBC ratings medicine that has worked before but if anyone is worried at CBS it isn't Griffin. He was discovered the other day in dusty work clothes going over the plans of the new office and restaurant he is building in New York only a few doors from the theater CBS has taken over to house his show.

MERV IS such a sincere and charming fellow that it's hard not to believe him when he says it's only a coinci-

MERV GRIFFIN exhibits the various faces he will have to juggle as host of the late night talk-variety show premiering 11:30 p.m., Monday, Ch. 2.

HOST OF Music Hall, Ch. 4, for four weeks is Don Ho "letting" it on some of his guests (front to back) Bobby Goldsboro, at 9 p.m., Wednesday; Rod McKuen, Aug. 23, and Peter Nero, Sept. 3.

When Athletes Play . . .

United Press International

A Hollywood producer who lost a fortune making a feature film about baseball coined the box office epitaph: "When athletes play, women stay away."

The same holds true for television but that doesn't stop the networks from trying — again and again. Now CBS has announced a plunge into major coverage of the $125,000 U.S. Open Tennis Championships at Forest Hills, N.Y.

This time Bill MacPhail, the able, refreshingly frank vice president of CBS sports may have done better than he expected. For tennis is not only a big time sport in Britain, it stays among the high-rated TV shows for the entire two weeks of the Wimbledon Tennis Championships.

"I'M NOT optimistic that the British experience will apply here," said MacPhail. "The last time we carried Forest Hills we reached 2.5 million homes against 16 million homes for our NFL football games. But the championships have been going beg-

Glad You Asked That!

By Hy Gardner

Danny Thomas shows, in a "before and after" pose, how he'd look with a nose job.

I HEAR that Danny Thomas finally decided to have a nose job. Yes or no? — B. R. D., Baltimore.

A. Maybe. "If I ever underwent nose surgery," Danny explains, "it would be for health, not cosmetic reasons. I recently discussed, with a prominent New York specialist, an operation to remove a bump—a little muscle—from my nose. I have a double deviated septum which has long interfered with my breathing. If I could be guaranteed that such surgery would help me to breathe and sleep better and not change me too much, I might just go for it."

Q. The late John Garfield was my favorite movie star. Will his son also play the tough guy roles that made his father famous? — Jean Barde, Oakland.

A. Young Garfield says he'll play anything—"to get the experience I need, in order to get to know me. I even do a nude scene in a picture called 'That Cold Day in the Park.'"

Q. Is Cary Grant in love again? And with whom? — Sally L., New York City.

Cary Grant . . . a new love.

A. His face lights up, his eyes gleam, his spirits soar when he confirms your suspicion! As expected, the beauty is considerably younger than Cary. He can't see enough of her. He tries to court her at least once a week, flying to her home in Hollywood from wherever in the world he may be. He buys her clothes, she has a blank check on his bank account, he even takes daytime naps with her. And his ex-wife knows and approves of the romance. Her name is Jennifer—his 3-year-4½-month-old daughter.

Q. Does Jackie use the Kennedy name in her bank account now that she's spending Ari's money? — George Curtis, Brooklyn.

A. Whoever's money she's spending, she signs her checks "Jacqueline Bouvier Onassis," no mention of Kennedy.

Q. Whatever happened to Sidney Franklin, the famous "Bullfighter From Brooklyn"? — Larry McKinney, Lubbock, Tex.

A. Sidney now does his bullthrowing in Mexico City from the safe side of the bullring—broadcasting the action via radio.

Q. Is it true "The Flying Nun" is going to have a baby? — Ruth G., Denver.

A. Yes. Sally Field has already been grounded.

OUR COVER

They call it "The Boat That Flies!" It is the H.S. (Hydrofoil Ship) Victoria, the only ocean-going hydrofoil operating in the United States. Whisking along on its underwater wings 14-feet below the surface, the craft provides an amazingly smooth ride for Catalina-bound passengers as it crosses the channel in less than an hour. The 75-passenger hydrofoil makes four round-trips daily—five on weekends. Ira Dowd, chairman of the board of International Hydrolines, Inc., who has been operating hydrofoils in the Caribbean Islands for 11 years, is a staunch believer that hydrofoils operating on our offshore and inland waters will become the rapid transit system vehicles of the future. Outside House Painting Eliminated for 15 Years

LONG BEACH, CALIF. (CT)—Painting is a thing of the past. Let us show you how Fiberglas TEX-COTE insulates, waterproofs and beautifies and is factory guaranteed for a full 15 years.

BEST IN NATION

Homeowners are requested not to spend a single penny on painting their residences until they hear the TEX-COTE story. This remarkable material insulates, waterproofs and beautifies, and every fiberglas TEX-COTE job is factory guaranteed for 15 full years against chipping, flaking or peeling.

Fiberglas, a product of Owens-Corning, brings to TEX-COTE its great strength, its wonderful insulating properties, its resistance to fire, weather and chemical attack.

PROVEN OVER THE YEARS

TEX-COTE is one of the oldest coatings now marketed and has been applied on thousands of homes and commercial buildings since 1946. These buildings have remained in perfect condition after more than 15 years exposure in all types of weather.

SHOT FROM A GUN

TEX-COTE is applied with heavy duty spray equipment and is actually "shot from a gun" without muss, fuss or odor. TEX-COTE fuses itself to the walls and fills holes, cracks and covers building defects. TEX-COTE may be applied over stucco, wood, brick, block or shingles.

THE WELLS REPORT

Occupied Territory

By Bob Wells

ON BALBOA Island last weekend a man was walking his Airedale on the blue pavements of twilight. The Airedale was old and grizzled and very very serious about his walk. He concentrated on it, placing each foot with great attention and nodding his head and shoulders in slow, laborious rhythm.

The man was about 50 and balding. He, too, was preoccupied with his own private thoughts and did not hurry the dog. He had heavy, dark brows and a smooth, round face on which his beard's own twilight was beginning to show. He glanced at the bay and at the peninsula beyond to which the sunset had fled, and back at the frame and brick houses of the island, but he did not let his thoughts show in his face.

The three troopers of the Occupation were female and were still wearing their daytime bikini fatigue uniforms. They were about 15 years old. One was very short and very curvaceous. Her black bikini was the same color as her hair but about one-fourth the material. In another two years, she would begin to get fat and shapeless, but right now she considered herself very sexy indeed.

The second girl was tall and bony with knees that leaned toward each other and two large front teeth to match. The top of her bikini sagged in fold-like short, chintz Dutch curtains.

The third girl was a tiny wraith with a tan the color of her chestnut hair. She moved through the darkening like a wisp of smoke from a defective smog control device.

THE MAN and his Airedale stepped off the sidewalk into a small space between a parked Corvette and a parked Volkswagen and let the girls pass. Beyond them the tires of countless automobiles sighed patiently as they crept in long lines to and from the ferry. In the manner of subject populations everywhere, the man and the dog kept their eyes on the pavement and did not look at the Occupation troopers as they passed.

The three girls looked at the man and the Airedale not directly, but sidelong in the manner that all members of the Occupation use when greeting either friend or foe. Then when they saw that the pair did not stare back, the girls looked more directly, and as they passed, something in the patient resignation of the man and dog caused the teenagers suddenly to go into gales of laughter.

When the girls had passed, the Airedale and his master stepped back on the sidewalk and resumed their slow, dignified walk. The Occupiers were everywhere. They sat in small patios in front of the houses and shouted to each other from second story windows. They were in the dented red Triumphs that gnashed their motors in agonies of frustrated revs, as they waited for the queue to move toward the ferry.

Further down the street, the main force of the Occupation was gathered for evening retreat in front of the Jolly Roger. The boys were seated on the street side of the fenders and hoods of parked automobiles, slurping orange soda from large paper cups and watching the cars slowly drift past like boats becalmed. On the sidewalk the girls formed defensive circles like wagon trains, false eyelashes turned inward and long Lady Godiva waterfalls of hair falling outward.

If the man and his Airedale saw all this, they gave no sign. They looked through the Occupiers and sought the island they knew, the island of sea and sky and the blue hush of early night.

BALBOA ISLAND is Occupied Territory. So, indeed is all of Newport and Laguna and Seal Beach and Belmont Shore and a whole coastal strip of Southern California two miles wide from Malibu to San Diego, broken only by the armed presence of the Marine Corps at Camp Pendleton.

Sometime this year or early next year, the chronological center of U.S. population will shift, and more than half our people will be 25 years of age or younger. In California beach cities, the mean age has dropped drastically beyond that. Statistics are hard to gather — teen-agers in panel trucks or in sleeping bags on the beach do not respond to special censuses — but two-thirds of most beach populations and three-fourths of some must be below the age of 25.

That, incidentally, seems to be the new street number of Generation Gap — 25. Two years ago, you were a trustworthy Younger Generationist until the age of 30, but now if you've passed the quarter-century mark, you've had it.

Let it be recorded with pride that the Older Generation did not relinquish their ancestral lands until overwhelmed by sheer weight of numbers. In some areas guerilla resistance still continues. In Laguna Beach, the city fathers have adopted an ordinance banning sitting on the sidewalk, thus assuring, at least, a stand-up occupation. In Huntington Beach, the elders have the youth command post, a place called the Syndicate, under siege and at least temporarily cut off.

In Long Beach, the resistance is attempted to interdict the Occupiers food supply in Belmont Shore by banning further hamburger and taco stands on Second St.

NEVERTHELESS, for their own health and safety there are certain rules that quarter-centarians should observe if they live or work in Occupied Territory.

1. Always observe curfew: Be in your homes and preferably in bed by 8 p.m. This will insure you getting some sleep before 3 a.m. when you will be awakened for the rest of the night by revved automobile motors, motorcycle backfires, laughing, singing, and the gentle sound of beer cans falling on the pavement.

2. Resign yourself to walking. It is impossible for elders to drive in Occupied Territory because (1) It isn't safe; (2) You can't buy gas after 3 p.m. because the Occupiers have parked their cars in front of all the pumps and are rapping with the youthful attendants, or are in the restrooms smoking pot; (3) Your own son or daughter has your car anyway.

3. Always step off the sidewalk and make way for an Occupier: This not only will improve relations with the Occupation Forces, but it may also prevent infection.

4. If threatened by invasion and occupation, destroy all known stereotypes and lay in a six-month stock of earplugs: Self-explanatory.

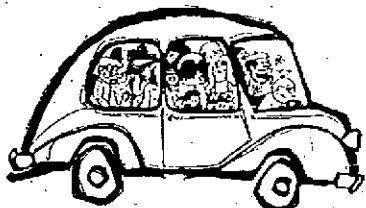

5. Practice passive resistance and non-cooperation. Remember, time is on your side. Someday the Occupiers will have to face their own children.

MY HUSBAND, adult son, and myself are great admirers of Patrick McGeehan of "Secret Agent" and "The Prisoner." In our non-professional opinion he is an outstanding actor! (We also saw him in the movie "Ice Station Zebra"). We find "The Prisoner" stimulating, though we seldom comprehend all the symbolism involved.

Is there any way we can let Mr. McGeehan know of our admiration?

I don't want my men to know, but I surely would love to have a picture of Mr. McGeehan!

Mrs. Margaret Wille,
Long Beach

(Only address CBS has for McGeehan is ATV House, Great Cumberland Place, London, W 1, England. You might try him there).

I HAVE BEEN told that Spade Cooley and Roy Rogers were brothers. Is that true? Also is Maria Cole marrying a white man?

Mrs. D. Smith,
Long Beach

(Cooley and Rogers are not related, according to a available biographical data. Miss Cole is engaged to marry Gary DeVore, a Caucasian).

CAN YOU tell me how I can get a picture of "The Mod Squad" and where most of the episodes are filmed. I really enjoy the series and hope it goes on for a long time.

Debra Khymkh,
Westminster

Elvis Presley's special, aired last December, will be repeated at 9 p.m., Sunday, Ch. 4. The show ranked fourth on the list of highest-rated specials for the 1968-69 season.

It's a Boat! It's a Plane! ... It's a Hydrofoil!

By Jack O. Baldwin

Independent Press-Telegram Marine Editor

AS SEVERAL SCORE business executives, salesmen and lawyers gripping their attache cases strode into the terminal building, the public address system boomed:

"Your attention, please! Flight 715 for Seal Beach, Long Beach, San Pedro, Redondo Beach, El Segundo, International Airport, Marina Del Rey and Santa Monica is now ready for boarding at Gate 3. All aboard, please."

A late-arriving commuter trotted down the ramp and leaped aboard just as the boat was pulling away from the dock.

Boat?

That's right—a boat! But not an ordinary boat.

It was a hydrofoil, the key vehicle in the most logical rapid transit system of the not-so-distant future.

A hydrofoil is a craft that is half-boat, half-plane which can fly above choppy seas, leveling the crests and troughs while speeding along at freeway speeds.

It is these unique capabilities which make the hydrofoil an efficient, economical vehicle for the rapid and mass movement of people.

Russia, with thousands of miles of shoreline and no freeways, has more than 5,000 hydrofoils in service.

There are thousands of others in regular service in Japan, New Zealand, Australia, Italy, Norway, Sweden, Venezuela, Brazil, Peru, Bolivia and many other countries.

There are 90 commercial hydrofoil companies throughout the world which have been in operation for more than 10 years.

Compare this with America's hydrofoil box score:

The first and only ocean-going commercially-operated hydrofoil in the United States went into service on July 4 between San Pedro and Catalina Island.

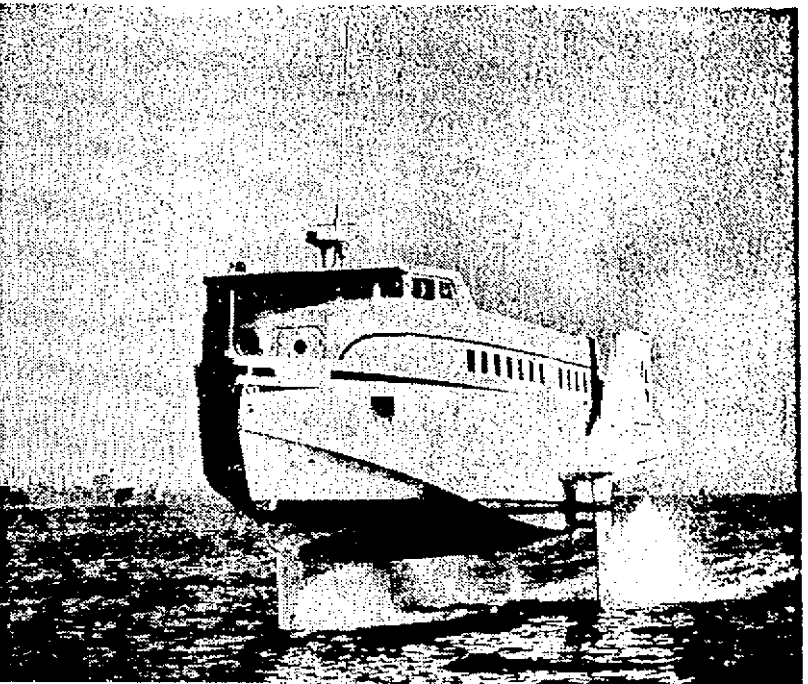

The 75-passenger H. S. (Hydrofoil Ship) Victoria, unhampered by stop signals, freeway traffic jams or bottlenecks caused by road work, whisks across the 27.4 miles of the sometimes rough channel waters in 45 minutes.

Electronic gyros prevent the vessel from rolling, pitching or yawing as it skims along at speeds up to 46 miles an hour two feet above the sea.

Some skeptics, basing their opinions on the observation of other so-called hydrofoils (which are not truly hydrofoils), have predicted the cross-channel hydrofoil will never be able to operate during rough weather.

During a recent 292-mile flight of the H. S. Victoria from Santa Cruz to Los Angeles Harbor the 65-foot craft encountered 20- to 24-foot waves. As the craft sped before a following sea the waves crested and curled, sending white water rolling down the steep forward slope of the towering waves.

This writer viewed the spectacle from the flight deck bridge. The vessel flew over the cresting waves and deep troughs at an average of 29 knots.

H. S. Victoria, "the boat that flies," makes San Pedro-to-Avalon trip in 45 minutes.

The craft could have traveled faster but it was decided to fly at no more than 30 knots to conserve fuel.

Walking up and down the aisle during the five hours the craft was caught in the rough seas was no more of an adventure than trying to walk to the dining car on a train going around a curve.

Despite the swells, currents, and confused sea there was no annoying roll, no violent pitching, and the craft held its course as the automatic pilot responded to the commands of the shipboard computer.

Hydrofoils have still another unique characteristic which gives them a distinct advantage in crowded harbors and marinas over conventional hulled vessels which float on the surface.

They leave no wake!

This characteristic enables hydrofoils to cruise right up to the dock at relatively high speeds. A conventional boat, passing through a congested harbor, would create such a wake wave it possibly would cause other boats to capsize and would damage shoreside installations.

One man who is a staunch believer in the future of hydrofoils as part of a waterborne rapid transit system is Ira Dowd, chairman of the board of International Hydrofoils, Inc.

Dowd's company operates the H. S. Victoria between the Catalina Terminal in the Port of Los Angeles and the Island city of Avalon.

Dowd, recognized as the most knowledgeable authority on hydrofoils in the United States, has been operating "boats that fly" for 11 years among the Caribbean Islands.

"Our waterways, both offshore and inland, are the freeways of the future," Dowd contends.

To convert the waterways into multi-lane, high-speed freeways would cost the taxpayer little—if anything at all!

There would be no condemnation proceedings. No expensive land to purchase. No buildings to be moved or destroyed. And the waterways never need repaving, landscaping or any costly maintenance.

Unlike the motorist trapped in a creeping traffic slow-down, his radiator and patience reaching the boiling point while he inhales the stinky exhaust of the car ahead and hemmed-in by a corrugated crash-rail and a link chain fence, the pilot of a hydrofoil could easily skim around a snarl.

Auto traffic flows into a metropolitan area in an hourglass pattern.

"Hydrofoils can take the pinch out of the hourglass," contends Dowd.

He envisions a hydrofoil commuter service along the coastal waters of Southern California, in the San Francisco Bay area between the International Airport and bayside communities, and from La Guardia Airport on Long Island

'Trade Out'

Game Played at Top of the TV Ladder

By CYNTHIA LOWREY
By Associated Press

A game people play at the top of the TV ladder is called "trade-out."

It goes like this: Johnny guest-stars in a Lucy episode; Lucy appears in a Carson special. Carol frolics in a Nakers hour; Jim is the very special guest on a Burnett show.

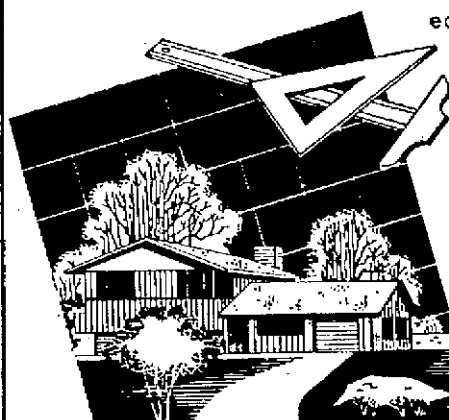

The device is a simple swap deal, no money is involved, and it can only be played by TV VIPs, usually with a stake in their own shows. Thus, it has become something of a status symbol.

But there are dangers. Too much can bore the audience by over-exposing the superstars, and those extra jobs can wear down a star already toiling long hours on his weekly show. Andy Williams, with a new variety

BECOME A BLACKSMITH
ON PALOS VERDES
PENINSULA

A Sure Way to Make Money on Horses

By Mary Neiswender

WHEN THE GAS-BUGGY replaced the horse and buggy, blacksmiths, looking to the future, steered their off-spring away from the anvil and toward the spark plug.

The pendulum is swinging the other way now . . . at least in the horsey communities which dot the Palos Verdes Peninsula.

Horseshoers are steering their off-spring away from mechanical plugs and back to just plain plugs.

Reason: "It's just a good business to be in."

Bob Dierks is one of 20 horseshoers who travel the peninsula, putting new shoes on one of the largest horse populations in the county.

It's an area where, in addition to a car in every garage and a chicken in every pot, there's a horse in every yard, Dierks says.

And it's a business that's rewarding — so he tried to encourage his four sons to join him.

It didn't work.

One boy, he says, didn't like the work because it was too hard.

Another had to give up because he was allergic to horses.

Another "looked up at a flock of pigeons . . . the horse went up too and came down on top of me." (You've got to pay attention to what you're doing, the 49-year-old Dierks says, or you'll get killed.)

To the fourth, after a "pep talk," he said: "Get in the truck if you want to go with me."

"He wasn't there when I got ready to leave."

Three other children — all girls — he didn't encourage.

Dierks, who retired two years ago after 20 years as a motorcycle officer with the Los Angeles Police Department, learned to shoe horses as a boy of 16 in San Pedro.

"I started in a livery stable — there were four or five of them in the harbor area, at the time and about three dairies," he recalls.

"Instead of going to the show, I'd go to the blacksmith's shop and watch. When a job came up, they said I could have it if I could shoe a horse. I, of course, said I could.

"To this day I don't know why that horse didn't go lame."

But he got the job.

He left it several years later to join the police department, but returned to horseshoeing in 1952 on a part-time basis. He took up his hammer and tongs on a full-time basis two years ago when he retired from the force.

It wasn't as much love of the business that kept him at it through the years, he admits, as his seven children. (Horseshoeing takes from 35 minutes to an hour and costs the horse's owner about $14.)

"It was always a way of making money," he admits, "and it was always fun."

But he's had his jolts too, he says.

"You know when a horse is going to move and you either move with it and ride the punch out or you get out. But if you have a horse that really wants to kick you, you're not going to get away."

His last "jolt," he says, was because he got into a "dumb situation — I was in a bad spot and couldn't get out."

But he's had bad jolts before and has ridden them out.

"Tranquilizers help," the sandy-haired smithy claims. "But even at that I've had to tie some down on their sides to shoe them."

The "best cure" for a bad horse, he says, is to "put the key in the ignition and say 'I'll see you later'."

And when he leaves — in his pick-up truck — he takes with him all the tools of a trade that goes back centuries.

Rattling in the bed are horseshoes, a leather apron which he makes himself, an anvil and hammers, horseshoe nails, knives, hoof stands, nippers, nail clinchers, rasps, leg hobbles and a forge — brought to a hurried red-hot readiness by an old newspaper, a match and an electric fan.

The only thing that's passe in the business is the bellows.

Bob Dierks, who served for 20 years as a motorcycle officer with the Los Angeles Police Department, now works full-time as a horseshoer on the Palos Verdes Peninsula. His forge, anvil are portable.

Dierks finds horseshoeing is a good business to be in on the peninsula. He is one of about 20 horseshoers serving the area.

Many Rapid Steps Involved
in Handling Your $2 Bet

Men, Machines Start and Finish Fast to Keep Up With Horses

By Dave Daniel

EVEN IN THIS AGE of inflation, $2 goes a long way — at a race track. You'd probably be surprised at all the steps involved in handling a simple $2 bet.

We looked into the matter at Los Alamitos Race Course in Orange County, where, during the racing season, thousands of people wager hundreds of thousands of dollars six nights a week.

The track, which opened in 1951 with an 11-day season, has grown into one of the finest community race courses in the nation, thanks to its founder, the late Frank Vessels Sr., its president, Frank Vessels Jr. — and the $2 bettor. The track now is open 70 nights a year.

Los Alamitos last year became the first track in Southern California to stage night horse racing, and this year it became the first one to offer the quintela form of betting.

Buying a ticket on a horse race at Los Alamitos is a pretty simple matter. All that's needed is $2 and faith. Buying a ticket on a winning horse takes a little more — a combination of knowledge, skill and luck.

One merely walks up to a mutual clerk ticket seller at a specified window and gives the number of the horse he wishes to bet on and exchanges his cash for a 2x3-inch pasteboard.

With luck, the $2 investment will be returned shortly with a handsome profit. If that's the case, just take the winning ticket to a cashier and collect the payoff.

Simple, right?

To the casual observer, it is, but let's follow your $2 wager from the moment you make the decision on which horse to bet in a race. You'll be surprised to find out just how complex the matter actually is.

Buried beneath the Los Alamitos grandstand, away from the public's prying eyes, is a series of rooms containing a large number of costly machines and a great many employees, comprising the Operations Department, which is directly responsible for your $2.

Your $2 bill gets action even before it leaves your wallet. As soon as you tell the ticket seller the number of the horse you're betting on, he pushes the corresponding number on his totalizer machine and out pops the ticket, seemingly the instant you ask for it.

But the main control room, filled with more than a million dollars worth of computers and hundreds of miles of wires plus a 12-man staff, has already jumped into action.

There are 175 ticket-selling machines at Los Alamitos, all developed by the American Totalizer Company of Baltimore. Each machine is wired into the main control room.

Before a ticket is issued, the machine sends an impulse to the computers in the control room, which records the amount of the wager and the horse it is on and stores that information in a memory bank.

The computers then relay back to the seller's machine that the bet has been recorded, and the ticket is issued in less time than it takes to blink an eye.

With an average of 10 horses in each race and with nearly $100,000 bet on each race, the computers are continually kept humming to keep pace with the 175 selling machines that are not only punching out $2 win tickets, but $2 tickets to

Money from 175 sellers goes to "Money Room" after each race, where it is counted and checked, then sent back to cashiers to pay off winning bettors.

Final stop of $2 wager is "Ticket Room," where all winning tickets are turned in, checked for counterfeiting or forgery and stored for 60-day period.

place and show as well as $5 and $10 wagers and $5 and $15 combinations, where a horse is bet across the board.

HORSE RACING is a profitable business, but the entire mechanical operation, down to the last light bulb on the infield tote board, is leased to each track that uses it. The expense is too great for a track to buy and store the set-up at one track for the limited number of days that it is used throughout the year.

The machines, and even those tote-board light bulbs, are shipped from track to track as the racing season ro-

The Quiet Boy

By Mark Clutter

WHEN MY WIFE said that David was coming to pay us a visit, I wondered what was in store. I hadn't associated with 11-year-olds since my daughters were that age quite a while ago.

I thought of a friend who said recently, "I wish my daughter would take her children and go home. They're wonderful kids and they are driving me crazy."

Nephew David is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Luke of Eugene, Ore. She is my wife's sister.

I expected noise, a word that rhymes with boys. There was no noise at all. I took David fishing from Pierpoint Landing. It was his first time at sea. Most of the time while we were under way he watched ships and shoreline with my binoculars.

As a fisherman he worked hard. He quickly learned to handle the unfamiliar salt water reel and how to hook on the anchovies. It was not a good day for fishing, but finally he caught a bass just big enough to be legal. I caught a fish, so we were not skunked. He said almost nothing all afternoon, but he looked happy.

I gave him the fish for his breakfast, and char-coaled hamburgers for supper. "How do you like your hamburger?" I asked.

"Raw," he said.

"You mean rare?"

"Yeah."

Later I said, "I guess they are done."

"Overdone," he said. (They were red inside).

He ate hamburger. I don't understand how a slim, tanned, blond little boy can eat more than I do. He must have put away three-quarters of a pound. Then he had ice cream.

I tried to interview him, but I failed. He would answer every question directly. He is a Scout. He is a Little Leaguer. He is a sixth grader. His favorite subject, he said with a slight grin, is recess. He likes to go to the mountains.

We went other places. I

David Luke... sees a lot, says little.

bought him a harmonica, and he played small elfin music on it. He saw a coin-and-stamp store and he stared fascinated at the displays.

"Are you a collector?" I asked.

"Yes. I collect only United States stamps."

I gave him some money and he spent 20 minutes selecting the stamps he wanted.

I took him to the high slippery slide in Downey. He went four times. "It was scary the first time," he said. I tried it. It was scary.

I took him arrow shooting. With a little practice he did very well, even hitting the bull's-eye. "It is fun, but I like playing pool better," he said.

Everything we did for him brought forth a simple thank-you. He never asked for anything, but if we gave him a choice of things to do, he always knew exactly what he wanted.

Much of his visit was spent with another uncle, Gregory Luke, of Long Beach. Greg took him to Disneyland, Marineland, Palm Springs, the beach, the movies and other places.

After David returned to Oregon I asked Greg, "Did you get much out of him?"

"No. Dave doesn't say much. But I know him well enough to be sure he had a good time."

I wonder if he is saying much to the Scouts and Little Leaguers about his adventures in and around Long Beach.

Photographer was prepared for the unexpected and shot this candid wedding picture showing billowing sheet canopy, beaming bride, tuxedoed ushers.

Add a Candid Look

EVERY WEDDING day is planned to be perfect. But human nature and Mother Nature being as unpredictable as they are, there is bound to be an element of surprise somewhere in the schedule.

The professional photographer is an expert at capturing perfection, and the bride knows she will get polished, traditional pictures of her wedding day. She feels secure knowing she can count on the professional's consistently good results.

But the unexpected -- the downpours, the high winds, the last-minute crisis -- often create interesting picture subjects that the professional, busy with preplanned shots, does not have time or the opportunity to photograph. That's where the amateur can step in to record the off-beat but memorable moments of the occasion in candid pictures.

One secret of getting natural, unposed photographs is not to be noticed. Keep your equipment simple -- all you really need is your camera, extra film and flashcubes. It's wise to use a camera-film combination that you have used before so that you know its capabilities. And, before you go to the wedding, clean flash battery contacts with a rough cloth or a pencil eraser. This is a good idea even when your batteries are new.

Once your equipment is ready, start thinking about the type of pictures you want. Find out from the bride's family how extensive the professional photographer's coverage will be so you can arrange to take the shots that might otherwise be missed. You might even make a list of picture ideas. For example, the professional photographer will see that he gets pictures of the wedding party and the parents of the bride and groom. But, in addition, there will almost certainly be aunts, uncles, cousins, grandparents and special friends. Make it a point to include them in your pictures, and the newlyweds will be eternally grateful.

It is tempting, of course, to keep your camera aimed at the bridal couple. They are the focal point of the occasion. But this is what the professional photographer is hired to do. Why duplicate his efforts when you can be making memorable shots elsewhere, such as the tiny flower girl asleep in a corner, the friends of the groom conspiring about "Just Married" signs, or the proud-but-sad look of the father of the bride as he watches his radiant daughter?

This is your special function as a candid photographer. Watch for the unplanned moment, the bit of humor, the unusual or the just plain exciting instant that comes with every wedding. It takes patience, imagination and quick reflexes to capture those natural, unposed pictures, but the results are worth it. With a flashcube on your camera, you can take four shots in quick succession and record an action sequence as a small child attacks his piece of wedding cake or the bride flings her bouquet.

If those you want to photograph are very conscious of your camera, borrow a trick from the pros for getting candid shots. Aim and focus your camera at a point roughly the same distance from you as the individual or group you want to picture. Then, just before snapping the shutter, turn the camera toward your subjects and click! They won't have time to pose, and you will have a candid picture.

Every wedding is planned to be perfect. And it can be "picture perfect" when you add your candid insight to the professional's prowess.

What Your Name Means

By LA REINA RULE

Send your name to La Reina Rule, Post Office Box 64151, Los Angeles, Calif. 90064, for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

MISS RULE: May we have the origin of GAY. — W.M., Seal Beach.

GAY, English, began as a trademark inn-sign depicting a "jay-bird" or "Gay-bird," as these birds were originally known.

Adam and Robert Gay were Oxford land owners in the late 1200s. The Gay shield is gold, emblazoned with a blue chevron between three blue seashells.

MISS RULE: Please identify PIEMONTE. — E.M., Long Beach.

PIEMONTE, Italian, was adopted by the forefather from his native province of that name in Italy. Piemonte or Piedimonte, another form, evolved from the ancient Latin "Pedimontium" meaning "at the foot of the mountain," referring to the Alps along Italy's northern frontier.

MISS RULE: Please give data on CRABTREE. — K.C., Long Beach.

CRABTREE, English, originally "Crab-tree," was applied to "residents of a home landmarked by a crab-apple tree." The Crabtree armorial shield is silver, emblazoned with a black, zig-zag armed cross. Edward Crabtree, an American ancestor, settled in Virginia during 1635.

MISS RULE: Please inform us on WILCOX. — D.W., Huntington Beach.

WILCOX, English, was formed from "Wil," shortened from William, meaning "resolute protector," combined with "cocks," later "Cox" meaning "proud one." The Wilcox shield is silver, decorated with a rampant lion. John

MOTHERS & Daughters (2), 10 p.m. — Talking with five young women and their mothers — and, in one case, a future mother-in-law — CBS found two things that college seems to increase the "generation gap," and that the things mothers find hardest to understand about their daughters are their challenge of authority, their easy acceptance of sex, and their equation of marijuana with alcohol. Among the daughters featured is Peggy Short, in conflict with her mother's Catholic religion and conservative values, and the wife of convicted draft resister Francis Short seen in last week's "Fathers and Sons". (The Shorts also are new parents themselves — of a baby daughter.)

Epicure Treat-- Cheese and Fruit

By Mildred K.
Flanary

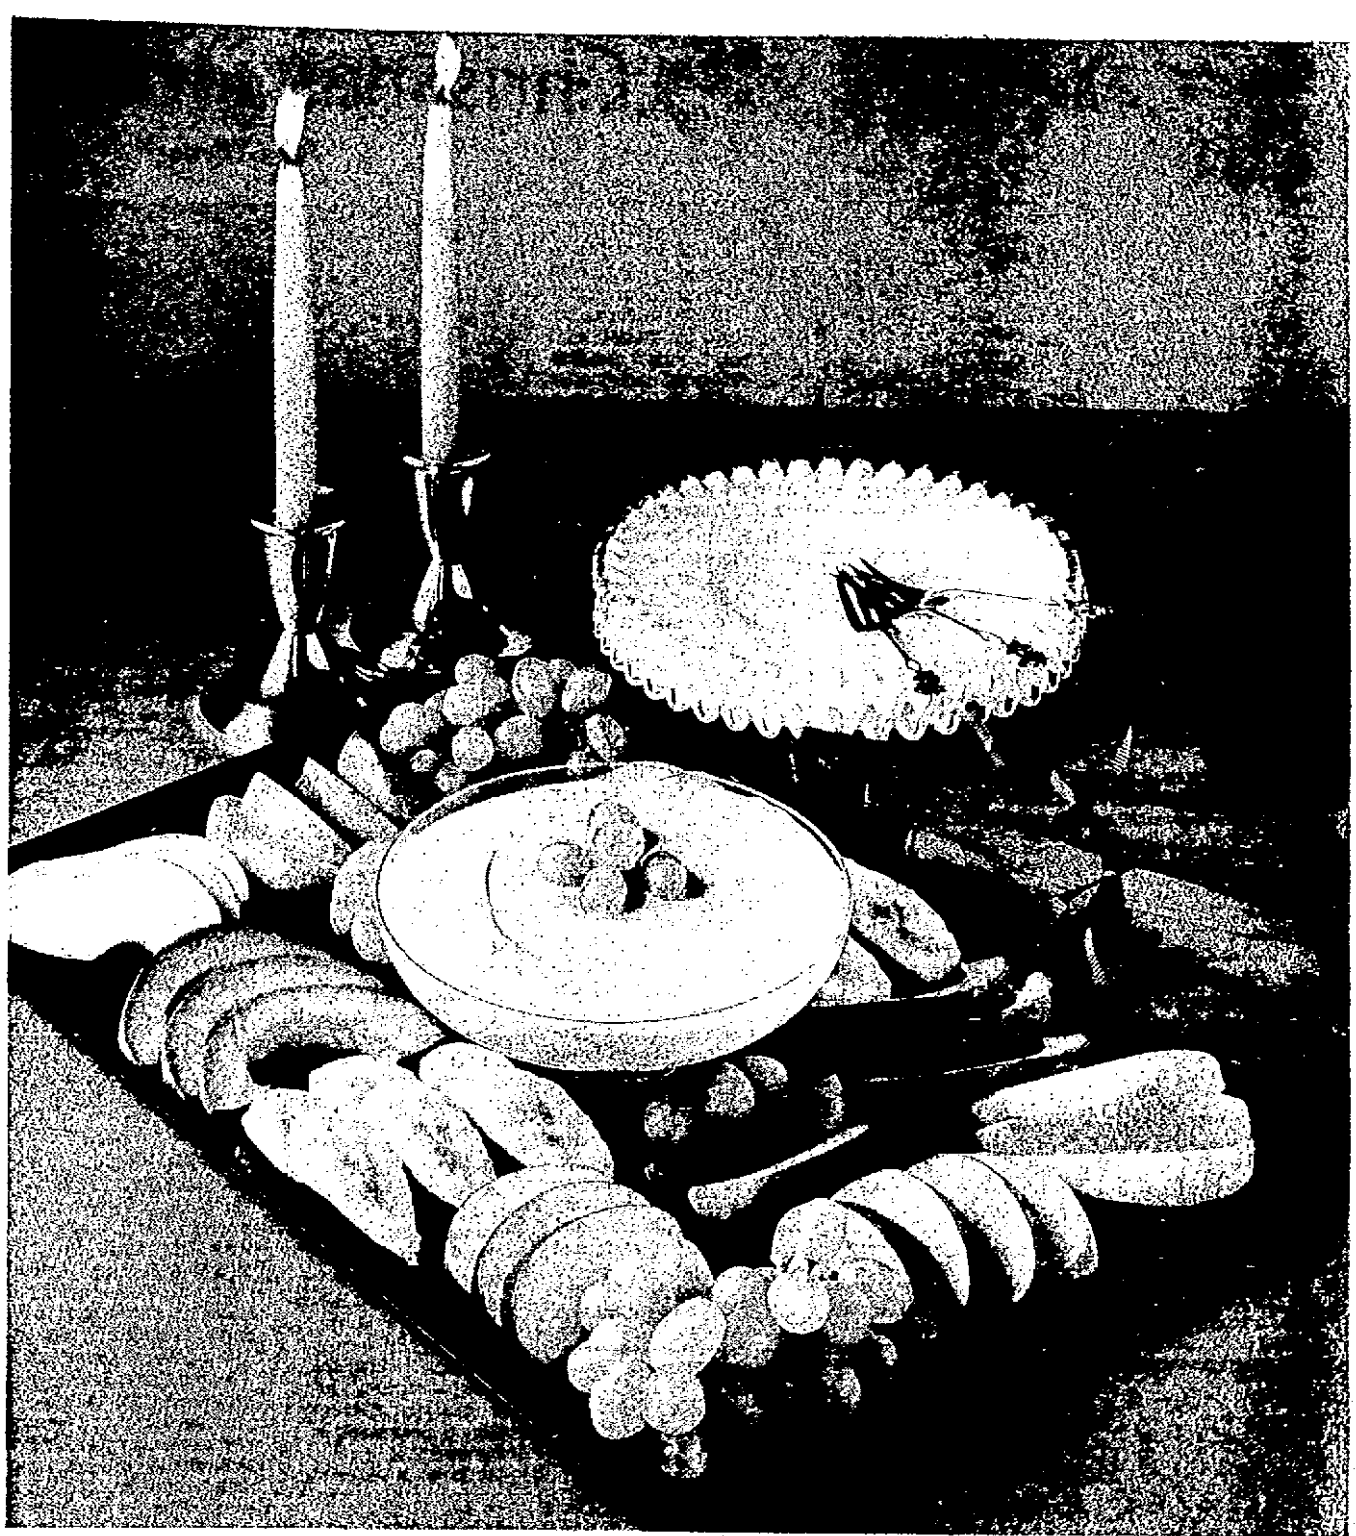

Southland Magazine
Home Economics Editor

CHEESE AND fruit is a universally favored dessert. The secret of this dessert duo is Liederkrantz Fruit Dip... a frosty blend of creamy Neufchatel and robust Liederkrantz cheeses.

Prepare it in advance and refrigerate to let the flavors mingle. Wash, cut and dip the fruit in lemon juice to prevent discoloration. Wreath the dip with the crisp fruits of the season — wedges of pear or apple — green grapes — and let the guests dip or savor their favorites. Speaking of wreaths...

the name Liederkrantz means "wreath of song."

As color and sounds blend harmoniously, so, too, do these flavors. They are classic examples of elegant good taste.

FROSTY LIEDERKRANTZ (Makes about 12 servings)

- 2 (8-oz.) packages pasteurized Neufchatel cheese
 - 1 (4-oz.) package Liederkrantz Brand Soft Ripened Cheese
 - 3/4 cup lemon juice
 - 2 tablespoons homogenized milk
 - 3 large ripe peaches, pitted
 - 2 ripe Bartlett pears, cored
 - 2 large bananas, peeled
 - 1 avocado, apple or melon, peeled and seeded
 - 3/4 lb. seedless grapes
- In a medium-size bowl, soften cheeses at room temperature. Beat together until smooth and fluffy. Gradually stir in 1/4 cup of the lemon juice and milk. Turn into serving bowl. Chill in refrigerator until ready to serve. Cut peaches and pears into 12 wedges each. Cut bananas diagonally, into 2-inch lengths. Dip sliced peaches, pears and bananas in lemon juice. Cut other fruit into wedges about the same size as the peaches and pears. Divide grapes into small clusters. Arrange fruit on a large tray around dip.

Recipe of the Week

MRS. JAMES L. UPTAIN, 6402 Iberle St., Lakewood, wins the $5 recipe prize this week.

BANANA-OATMEAL-RAISIN COOKIES

- 1/2 cup margarine
- 1/2 cup shortening
- 1 cup packed brown sugar
- 1/2 cup granulated sugar
- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- 2 mashed bananas
- 2 small boxes raisins
- 1/4 cup raisin water
- 1 tsp. vanilla
- 1 cup sifted flour
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1/2 tsp. soda
- 3 cups oats, uncooked

Set oven at 350. Put raisins in small pan, cover with water and simmer 5 minutes. Let sit until needed. In a large bowl, cream margarine, shortening and sugars. Add beaten egg. Drain off a fourth cup of the raisin water from the pan and add to batter. Blend. Then add bananas and vanilla. Sift in the flour, salt and soda. Add oats. Stir well. Drain raisins completely and add them to batter. Mix until well blended. Drop by teaspoon onto greased cookie sheets and bake 12-15 minutes. Cool before frosting.

MAPLE BUTTER FROSTING

- 2 tblsp. margarine
- 2 cups powdered sugar
- 1 1/2 tblsp. milk
- 1 tsp. maple flavoring

Blend margarine and half of sugar. Add milk and rest of sugar and flavoring. Beat well. Put just a dollop on each cookie center. Makes about 7 dozen cookies.

CRITICS' CORNER

FATHERS AND SONS, aired Tuesday, Ch. 2.

THE VIDEOTAPED program focused on four sets of fathers and their sons, a small-town policeman and his alienated, drug-taking, college student son; a successful business man and World War II army officer and his son, a married graduate student and convicted draft resister; a working-class negro and his son, who attends Cornell as a psychology major and is captain of the football team, and a wall street administrator and traditional liberal and his suburban-reared college-bound son.

In separate interviews, parents and children raised the familiar issues — the arguments over Vietnam, the business ethic, middle-class values, marijuana versus liquor and the meaning of contemporary patriotism. Particularly poignant was the growing estrangement between the policeman and his alienated son, who rejects most of his father's values and justifies the use of drugs as an escape from dreaded boredom.

MOVING ALSO was the plight of the young draft resister, a graduate student in history and an expectant father, as he awaited court decisions that would determine whether he would spend the next five years in prison. In interviews with CBS. He tried to explain how he felt his resistance to the draft and his refusal to run away to Canada was an expression of a higher kind of patriotism than his father's generation exemplified.

And then there was the Negro student at Cornell, torn between the demands of black militants and guilt-ridden whites, who found his center of sanity in the ideals of his hard-working ghetto parents. Perhaps he exemplified the difference between the affluent generation and those who have had to struggle for their niche on the ladder, but his words must have had a warm ring to older viewers.

"IT'S REALLY weird," he told Charles Kuralt. "Like you have to go away from home to find out that everything you had been taught at home was right, and I really respect that. You know, I'm amazed at how accurate my parents are. Sort of proud of it, too."

The quality of the production whet's one's anticipation for next week's sequel, "Mothers and Daughters."

Christmas in August

By Ellen Krec

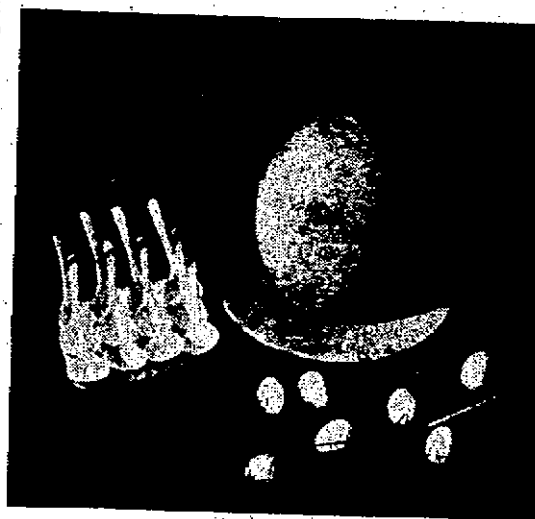

WITH no crystal ball at hand for peering into the future, I decided to do the summer gift show in Los Angeles to see what was in the store for us between now and Christmas. I feel I should mention the quality of accessories in comparison to last year's show... superior! And with that I shall bring you up to Christmas, on what you might find under the tree.

Hippie art is on the wane with the exception of a few posters. I hesitate to mention the surfeit of poster art in the market... I don't think there are enough walls in the world. Some whimsical posters... some colorful and the most interesting of all, Polish imports! I think in retrospect the Polish posters are exciting because they make no attempt to be cute but rather are stylized independent. Holladay International is the representative to be thanked for the refreshing touch.

Much Indian, South American and New Mexican weaving will fill the walls, sofas and beds. Nature's bright colors predominate as opposed to the past season's sombre autumnal tones.

Still rising is Scandinavia in its always superior crystal and enamelware. Italla, a Finnish firm, produces some markedly beautiful stemware and vases from a somewhat new technique.

The character of the glass resembles satin finish

Environmental Ceramics Souper Server may be egg-xactly what your table needs. Ceramic Soup spoons complement the soup course.

crackle and the results are costly since the wood mold lasts such a brief time.

And dishes to delight the diner flow into the United States from all over the world.

Whimsical fruit and dessert plates, just a bit naughty to some eyes, were designed in England and made in Germany especially for the American market by Peter Breck Corp. Air line drawings meld vegetables, fruits, wine bottles and naked ladies in a plate absolutely guaranteed the last drop of food will be eaten.

Peter Breck also includes Finel enamelware in beautiful colors and lively accessories pretty enough for the table. A new touch was the triple bottom which gives the enamel the slow cooking characteristic of heavy iron pots.

But leave it to Architect-lural Pottery of Los Angeles to come up with the ultimate in big, party size stoneware casseroles.

Enormous and beautiful, they range from 22-inch round plates and 25-inch-plus platters to 12-quart casseroles, all fired to go from oven to table... if you have a large enough oven.

Win Ng of Environmental Ceramics, Inc. and the designer of the now classic chicken or fish servers, has continued in the fowl field to bring an egg to market.

Souper Server is the giant egg which also goes from oven to table and comes with server, tray and ladle. Naturally the colors are egg shell white or egg shell brown. The Souper Servers also shrink to individual size. The table could provide a home for either size for soup or nuts.

Vander Imports came up with the clever fruit holder — circles within circles in a pyramid shape. Apples and oranges fit snugly without touching. Good looking enough to be used as a centerpiece!

The plastic bubble chairs have inflated the market with all colors and sizes and come complete with patches and pump... shades of old car days!

The cost of these chairs is so minimal that they can provide a happy accept without painful spending. Even the children have their own size, thanks to the same Vander Imports.

Japan is tapped for the accents at this same house and some snack sets have been cleverly copied from the French. One puzzled me: Le Petit Snack on the cup and La Palate Snack on the plate.

I checked each showroom for local outlets and they assured me all of the mentionables would be purchasable in Long Beach.

Merv Goes Network

dence his restaurant is so close to his theater — it's hard but not impossible.

"I'm calling it Pip's, Treacher's nickname," Griffin said. "He's just had two arterial operations and while he was recovering from them he caught hepatitis."

"That took nine weeks of convalescence but I'm glad to say it hasn't mellowed him a bit. He'll still turn his back on guests he doesn't like — when you've been in show business 50 years you don't have to hide your feelings. I got a letter from him reporting that the surgeons had put metal inserts into him and adding 'So you don't have to do hernia jokes about me any more.'"

Merv said: "I'll introduce him as 'My foreign friend for whom it's getting very hard to find new parts.'"

AS FOR the competition on the opposition channels — Merv thinks his show is just that much different. "We try to have one big star and surround him or her with interesting people," he said. "We've always used more of a blend of authors, personalities and politicians than the others. An awful lot of politicians made their debuts with us — Mayor John Lindsay of New York, Martin Luther King Jr., Averell Harriman, Henry Cabot Lodge. We also like to bring the same people back time and again so the audience knows their likes and dislikes."

"We use them like soap opera characters and deliberately aim for familiarity rather than novelty."

MERV, WHO started his show business career as a band singer (and popularized the song "I've Got a Lovely Bunch of Coconuts"), will stick to the reliable desk-and-sofa setup as the best way to involve his guests in the discussion. "It's proven itself," he said. "The solo face to face

The unscripted nature of talk shows naturally leads from time to time to an unprintable or unmentionable word or phrase but Merv said these would be erased from the tape before it is broadcast.

"However," he said, "there's a lady lip reader

Quaint and Curious

THERE EXISTS on the face of this earth an abundance of strange facts, lore, legend, a vast treasure trove of the unusual. There have been written, particularly in England of the last century, a goodly number of books on these matters.

There is an odd quirk in human beings which makes them thirst for knowledge of the strange and unusual. But too many books that would slake that thirst have been out of print, for these many years. A rare publisher sometimes springs into being, to rescue such works out of the underserved obscurity in which they have languished. Such a publisher is Gale Research Company, Detroit.

Nicknames and sobriquets of the famous; curious surnames; curiosities of civilization; strange lore about the teeth; funeral customs, these and a host of other matters are grist for the mill of Gale Research and for Singing Tree Press, a division of Gale, in their noble pursuit of reprinting long unavailable books. Among their reprints:

Sobriquets and Nicknames, by Albert R. Frey ($14) was first published in Boston in 1887. From it we learn that "the Best of the Cut-throats" was Wellington, so-named by Byron. Confederate troops called Gen. Jubal A. Early "the Bad Old Man." Disraeli was "the Gay Lothario of Politics." And if you want to know who were "the Squint-eyed," "the Prince of Beggars," "The Limping Old Bard," to mention a few, this is the book to tell you.

Ludus Patronymicus, or the Etymology of Curious Surnames ($9.50) by Richard Stephen Charneck, first saw the light of day in London in 1868. There were no less than 14 families named Dull, we are told, in Philadelphia. There is the family name Deuce, a corruption of D'Eves; Deadman, corrupted from Debenham; Human, from the Dutch hoogman, a tall man. There are even Honeybum and Honeybourne.

Curiosities of Civilization, by Andrew Wynter ($9.50) was originally issued in London in 1890, and was the work of a man who loved to dig into the hush-hush and frequently sinister facts of life in Victorian England. He writes of the insane asylums, the adulterators of food, the various rackets of his day, and even about the habits of rats in city, field and on ships.

Our Social Bees: Or Pictures of Town and Country Life, by Andrew Wynter ($8.50). The good Dr. Wynter goes on to deal with the smog of London, the "commercial grief" of the funeral homes; the trade in human hair and other odd facts of life in London of the 1860s.

Folklore of the Teeth, by Leo Kanner ($12.50) was first published in New York, in 1928. Among some people, a toothache was treated by painting blood from the ailing man's mouth on a nail or peg, which was driven into a tree. The book tells of the strange things into which human teeth are made — jewelry, charms, medicines, amulets.

And Try Not to Miss...

LORD MALQUIST AND MR. MOON. By Tom Stoppard. Knopf, $4.95.

A nobleman of the old school and a mild but fanatical man unite to oppose the spirit of the times and get involved in a series of hilarious adventures, but with ominous overtones. The novel raises serious questions, as does Stoppard's play "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are Dead."

WELLS FARGO: An Illustrated History. By Noel M. Loomis. Clarkson N. Potter, Inc., $12.50.

The story, with over 300 illustrations, many of them rare, of the express company that was both mail service and bank to the gold fields and from its foundation in 1852 was a symbol of faith. This is the exciting story of a company that delivered wives to California and soldiers to the Indian wars.

Anti-Hero

PAIRING OFF. By Julian Moynihan. Morrow, $5.95. Reviewed by Prof. David Peck, English Department, California State College at Long Beach.

Myles McCormick, the anti-hero of this delightful black comedy, is another in that long line of intellectual and paralyzed fictional characters stretching back through Portnoy and Herzog to Joyce's Bloom. Unsuccessful at love and librarianship, Myles is successful only in convincing us of the difficulty and bitter-sweet humor of contemporary life.

His story takes us through Boston (where Myles works sporadically in the Rare Book Room of the "Boston Free Library") to Ireland (where Myles escapes failure and finds love) but to little purpose. Myles is the victim of his own tale, for as static anti-hero he is unable to provide the central control and strength needed in this rambling tragic-comedy. Other characters — a dying mistress, the library director, a Greek gangster — constantly threaten to disrupt the shaky order of the novel.

Moynihan's story is nonetheless rich in the musty lore of Boston and its libraries, and engaging in its stylized evocations of life in New England and Ireland.

Terra's Neighbors

WORLDS AROUND THE SUN. By Lee Edson. Smithsonian Library-American Heritage, $4.95.

This sixth volume in the Smithsonian series of science books for the laymen is a handsomely illustrated introduction to elementary astronomy — an approach to understanding man's historic exploration of the solar system.

Findings of the pioneer astronomers, and their primitive but remarkable tools, are brought into perspective with the recent advances in research, brought about by giant telescopes, radio and radar signals, laser beams, spectroscopes and radiometers.

Other chapters summarize new facts about the sun, Venus, Mars, Mercury and the Jovian planets; Pluto, discovered in 1930 by Clyde W. Tombaugh at the Lowell Observatory in Flagstaff, Ariz.; and comets, meteors and asteroids.

Hell's Suburb

CAPTIVE CITY: Chicago in Chains. By Ovid Demaris. Lyle Stuart, p. 6-95.

The most violent gangster movie you ever saw, portraying the most rampant corruption, would be a pale imitation of what has been and is going on in Chicago.

This may sound like an exaggeration, but after reading "Captive City", one gets the feeling that Mr. Demaris took great pains to avoid any hint of muckraking or overstatement.

The mere recital of the Chicago facts covers the entire gamut of story-theme scenarios that would deal with everything illegitimate the human imagination could conjure — murder, every style; "protection" in every business, industry, service, (legal and illegal); crooked elections; blackmail; extortion; fake bankruptcies; labor racketeering; bribery; syndicate gambling; controlled prostitution; organized hit-jacking; narcotics, from importing to pushing; loan sharking; counterfeiting; currency and tax stamps; etc., etc., etc.

In a straight, reportorial, "plain-facts" style—in what amounts to deliberate objective understatement, Mr. Demaris gets the reader to think and say to himself—"How could this possibly be in 1969? And why is government so impotent?"

Samuel Whitman

Cling to Warmth

SCIENCE IS NOT ENOUGH. By Vannevar Bush. Morrow, $1.95 paperback.

In our age of moon-landings, cybernetics, computers, etc., the danger of discounting basic humanistic qualities is a likelihood that must be confronted and dispelled at every turn.

That is the message one of our most renowned scientists bring us in the most "human" terms.

The "progress" that science can bring us is a sterile phenomenon, if we ignore the uniqueness of each individual; forget how wonderfully and fearfully amazing are our minds and bodies; how vital it is for the fulfilling of our humanity to realize we need each other and that we should not let go of those things that warm one human being to another. Smiles, touch, compassion — we can't have too much of these — "science is not enough."—Samuel Whitman

The Fishing Cure

By Steve Ellingson

MOST PEOPLE seem to think that only intellectual or artistic pursuits will cure boredom, but sometimes the exact opposite is true. I once knew a successful accountant who suffered from boredom, and who tried to conquer it by writing. For months he worked on his book every night, but his boredom continued.

Finally a friend persuaded him to go along on a fishing trip. The accountant discovered that he could fish for hours and days with no boredom whatever. Something in his personality was released by these natural activities and natural surroundings.

It seems to us that everyone really should do a little more fishing. And, to make your fishing trips more enjoyable, you should have an adequate tackle box; one that's designed exactly the way all fishermen want it. The tackle box shown here with Nicole Jaffe in MGM's movie "The Trouble With The Girls" has a place for everything. You will notice that there are compartments for all sorts of lures, sinkers, lines and so forth. It also has spaces for your pipe and tobacco, first aid kit, and things of that kind.

There are trays which lift up and out to make all of the items visible and readily accessible. Under the trays there is plenty of space for reels, larger tackle and even a can of worms. Of all times when you want things handy, it's when you're out in a boat — particularly if the water is rough.

The cost of this box, when you build it yourself, is only a fraction of what it would be if you were to purchase it. Scrap plywood is about all you will need. Building the box is easy since you need only trace the full-size pattern parts on plywood, then saw them out, and finally put the parts together. It's something any inexperienced person can undertake with success.

To obtain the full-size tackle box pattern number 421, send $1 (add 25¢ per pattern for airmail delivery) by currency, check or money order to: Steve Ellingson, Southland Living Pattern Dept., P.O. Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 91409.

What Your Name Means

Wilcox of England settled in Virginia in 1622.

MISS RULE: Please give brief genealogy on PFEIFFER. — B.S., Long Beach.

PFEIFFER, German, means "fife or flute player." The Pfeiffer armorial shield from the Austrian Tyrol is silver, emblazoned with a representation of a fife player in red.

MISS RULE: Please give brief genealogy on RANDALL, RANDELL. — E.R., Long Beach; F.R., Anaheim.

RANDALL AND RANDELL, English, are from the ancient hero name Rand-Wolf, translated as "shield-wolf," depicting a warrior with a wolf insignia on his shield. The Randall shield from Wiltshire, England, is red, emblazoned with a silver cross on which are five black stars. For Randell the shield is black, crossed at the top by a silver stripe on which are three red lion heads. The Randall motto "Nil extra numerum" means figuratively, "in union there is strength." William Randall, born in England in 1609, sailed from London for Massachusetts in 1635.

MISS RULE: Kindly inform us on LA FORCE. — E.L., Long Beach.

LA FORCE, French, developed from the Latin "fortis." La Force in medieval centuries denoted "residents at the fortress." The La Force armorial shield is blue, decorated with three gold leopards, accompanied by the motto "Ferme, la force" or "Unshaken strength."

Anticlotting Drugs Fail To Halt Heart Attacks

By Ben Zinser

Southern Magazine Medical Science Editor

LONG-TERM USE of anticlotting drugs in the wake of an acute heart attack does no good, a new study contends.

The study, conducted by doctors at the University of Oregon Medical School and the Portland Veterans Administration Hospital, shows that anticoagulants do not reduce death rate or heart-disease complications.

Subjects in the study lived in metropolitan Portland, Ore. Continuous anticoagulant treatment was begun eight weeks after acute heart attack to see if this approach would prolong life, prevent complications or reduce illness.

It did none of these things, according to a report in the New England Journal of Medicine.

APPLICATION of low-intensity direct electric current is beneficial in the treatment of skin ulcers such as bedsores, researchers have found.

Investigators at the University of Missouri School of Medicine applied the constant electrotherapy technique to 75 skin ulcers. The majority had proved resistant to standard treatment given earlier — but all but one patient "responded well" to the new treatment.

Gratifying results were observed in 34 patients (40 per cent). Here ulcers healed completely. Range of improvement in the remaining 41 treated ulcers varied from 87 per cent to zero.

The mechanism of how the electrotherapy works is not understood. Details are in Southern Medical Journal.

BABIES born by breech delivery have a lower IQ at the age of 5 years, a British survey indicates.

The finding is reported by Dr. J. K. Russell, head of the department of obstetrics and gynecology at Princess Mary Maternity Hospital in Newcastle-on-Tyne, Great Britain.

However, the doctor notes: "Let me say straight away, I am acutely aware of the fact that environment, as the child grows up, has a profound effect on its IQ."

DOCTORS warn once again of the danger of multiple exposure of a patient to the anesthetic halothane.

A new finding has rekindled the debate over the safety of the drug.

One researcher, at Boston City Hospital, has found a possible association between rapid severe liver failure and multiple exposure to halothane.

Even so, another physician, Dr. Joseph F. Artusio Jr., professor of anesthesiology at Cornell Medical College, New York, contends that the advantages of halothane far outweigh what he calls a remote risk of liver damage.

Dr. Artusio says the value of halothane has been established and he advocates its continued administration.

One reason many doctors like halothane is that it doesn't explode and electrical equipment can be safely used in the operating room.

ORAL CANCER resistant to standard treatment — surgery, irradiation and drugs — sometimes will come under effective control if frozen by a cold probe.

The "cold knife" technique is technically known as cryotherapy.

Dr. Jerrie Cherry, formerly of Johns Hopkins Medical School, reports that patients are treated with the cold probe on an outpatient basis twice a week until the tumor sloughs off. No recurrence of cancer has taken place during follow-up periods ranging from six to 14 months.

In each treatment session, a standard cold probe is used to freeze tumor tissue for three minutes. After allowed to thaw, the tissue is then frozen again for three minutes. Tissue temperature at time of the procedure is around one degree Fahrenheit.

The report is in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

A STUDY involving patients in 23 Veterans Administration Hospitals has cast doubt on the value of preoperative irradiation in lung-cancer patients.

Preoperative irradiation produced a poorer survival rate than surgery alone in the study group.

The finding is surprising, for studies by a number of researchers in recent years have indicated that preoperative radiation has increased survival rate by making more tumors treatable by surgery.

The VA study, which involved hundreds of patients, suggests that preoperative radiation may even have an adverse effect.

One question that arises is that radiation delays time of surgery — perhaps to the detriment of the patient.

Men and Machines Start, With the Horses at

tates from community to community. This way, the tracks pay only while the machines are in use, and the upkeep is minimal.

American Totalizator Co. has found that by keeping a few machines in constant use instead of building expensive new ones, maintenance problems, such as lubrication, really aren't problems at all. A machine that sits idle for nine months seems to develop more difficulties than one that is in use all year.

By the time you pick up your ticket, wondering if you purchased the right one, things are well under way. And, for the next 20 minutes or so, until the winner of the race is posted and declared official, activity for the track doesn't stop, even though you have time to relax and enjoy a drink while studying either the horses in the next race or the colorful Damon Runyon characters that always seem to find their way to race tracks — even in Orange County.

The computers have received and recognized your wager, as well as hundreds of others in a short span, and are busy figuring the odds at which the horse will finally be listed.

These odds are changed every 83 seconds and are determined by the bettors, not by the track, as many patrons assume.

Fans bet against each other, not against the track. The track acts only as an agent for holding the wagers and takes the responsibility of paying the winners. For this service, the track is paid a commission, which is deducted before any money is paid winning ticket holders.

The odds are determined by how much money is wagered on each horse. The more money that is plunked down on a horse to win, the lower the odds will be, while a horse with relatively little "action" will pay a higher price — but to fewer persons.

Eighty-five per cent of all money wagered is returned to the public. That means that 15 cents of every dollar (30 cents of your $2 bet) is deducted.

However, the state collects .0747 cents of every dollar or nearly half of the 15 cents that is taken off the top, and the tracks gets the rest, of which less than two cents is profit. The rest goes for overhead, such as salaries, charity, purse money, local taxes and payment of labor and equipment.

The computers take all this into consideration and figure odds by reading the memory banks where the bets are stored and recorded and then totaling all wagers to win, place and show on all 10 horses in the race and calculating the odds.

THE COMPUTERIZED odds are then flashed to the tote board in the infield of the track to give the betting public a fairly accurate idea of what each horse will pay.

Besides the odds, the amount of money wagered on each horse individually to win, place and show is posted, as well as the total amount for all 10 horses in the three separate pools.

The odds are guaranteed to be accurate by American Tote, whose own staff, not that of the track, runs the control room.

American Totalizator Co. is paid for the use of the equipment on a sliding scale basis of the entire mutual handle, beginning at one-fourth of one per cent and decreasing from there as the handle increases.

American Totalizator Co., which has a West Coast office in Arcadia (the home of Santa Anita Race Track), pays the staff to monitor, interpret and maintain equipment. Therefore, the 12 men in the control room have no connection with the track.

While bettors are betting and computers are computing, a step into the next room finds relative quiet — until the race goes off and the ticket machines are electronically locked by the judges.

In this room, six track auditors plus a state auditor are busy figuring the pay-off prices of the first three horses. The computer is doing the same thing and is rarely wrong, but it is double-checked, nonetheless.

An occasional mistake is found and the employees in this pari-mutuel department, the calculating room, managed by Bob Williams, take pride in the fact that they get to double-check a machine, when most jobs are just reversed.

While the winning ticket holders are being paid off with the money from the losing ticket holders, the cycle starts over again, but your $2 still has a long way to go before the night is over.

THE TICKET SELLERS report into a tight security area of the track, known appropriately as the "money room," prior to the first race and receive a $50 bankroll of $1 bills to take to each selling window, where each is stationed for all nine races.

Each totalizator machine has a mechanical counter on it that records how many tickets are sold from the machine on each race. The clerk is responsible for the $50 bankroll and for the amount of money corresponding to the amount of tickets sold. If he comes up short, or miscalculates, the money is deducted from his weekly paycheck.

The money collected on tickets sold is sent to the money room, headed by Dick Brandley, along with a sheet that tells exactly how many tickets on each horse have been sold. This information is recorded by the totalizator machine on prepared slips of paper, assuring no mistakes.

The money is sent to the money room by runners from all 175 sellers after each race, where it is counted by machines and the totalizator slips are double-checked to see if the correct amount of money, recorded by the machine, is turned in.

When all things are checked and double-checked, the money is placed in a locked cage, where it is dispatched back to cashiers by the runners to pay off winning ticket holders.

The cashiers, in turn, are responsible for the amount of money they handle and must account for it in much the same manner as the sellers.

Brandley, as manager of the money room, is in charge of balancing the books each night and despositing the money in the bank as well as withdrawing what is necessary. He handles more than a half million dollars each night.

After the money room, your $2 still hasn't been refired for the night, even though you may have cashed a winning ticket and received it back, plus a profit.

After all the tickets have been cashed, they are sent to another appropriately named place — the ticket room, where another series of checks and double-checks takes place.

Joe Gardner heads the ticket room and his crew sorts every ticket turned in by who sold it and the type of ticket it is — $2 win, etc.

With a carbon copy of the slip that was sent to the money room from the totalizer machine, the ticket room staff knows exactly how many tickets were sold on each horse in the race and the total number that should be cashed in.

WINNING TICKETS can be cashed any time up to 60 days after the meeting closes, and this can complicate matters when patrons leave the track without collecting their money, waiting until the next time they show up to take care of it.

That creates an "outstanding" list, much the same as in your checkbook. The tickets that are cashed, after they have been bundled and dated, are stored for the required 60-day period and then destroyed.

The checking of tickets requires more than just counting to see if everything corresponds. A major part is checking for counterfeit tickets or forged ones that may have been cashed.

"We've been lucky so far," Gardner

says, knocking on wood, "but I've seen some ingenious forgeries."

It's nearly impossible for a counterfeit ticket to slip through, however, as each race has a special code consisting of six letters or figures or symbols or a combination of all of them printed on each ticket.

The totalizer machine that the ticket seller works is coded by a supervisor prior to each race and the code is printed on a special fibrous paper when you ask for the number of the horse.

Each race has a different code and the same code will never come up twice during the entire 78 nights of racing.

Some of the ways of forgers include altering the number of a losing ticket so that it appears as the winning number; printing an entire new ticket with the correct code and number; or taking a losing ticket from the same race with the correct code, lifting the old number off with a razor blade and inserting the winning number after it has been cut off another ticket from a losing race.

The ticket room is the last stop and final check of the seller and the cashier as well as the public, where it all began.

Any mistakes found after the public has collected its money are paid for by either the seller, the cashier or American Totalizer, which has one outstanding debt that it is still in the process of settling.

On a daily double at a northern track several years ago, the wrong price was posted and the cashiers started paying off winning tickets.

A double check revealed that the posted price was too low and the payoffs were immediately halted until the correct price was verified to be higher.

But some 200 winners had already been paid the incorrect lower amount and were asked to file claims which would be settled at the end of the meeting. More than 5,800 claims were filed by persons seeking the difference of the two prices paid to the 200 unfortunates.

The case is still in the courts and each individual is going through a process of elimination that may still take several years before all is settled.

A costly mistake? Certainly, but only one to mar a near-perfect record.

Los Alamitos, being a quarter horse racing facility, is a smaller operation than, say, Hollywood Park, where thoroughbred racing, the most popular form of horse wagering, takes place.

Nonetheless, more than 200 employees and millions of dollars of machinery are involved when you place your $2 bet at the track. The figures can be tripled or quadrupled at one of the thoroughbred tracks.

It's something to keep in mind the next time you find yourself with a couple of spare dollars and a free evening. Two dollars can, and literally does, go a long way at Los Alamitos — and it's all so pleasant if you happen to be a winner.

Teens in Action Young Man's Thoughts

JAY BERK likes his days filled with people, guitar music and weather—not just good weather, but any weather.

His thoughts, like the times, tumble quickly from one stage to another. He doesn't pretend to have answers. When he doesn't know, he says he doesn't know. But he doesn't pretend not to have questions.

The 17-year-old Wilson High School graduate, who lives at 290 Granada Ave., Long Beach, hopes to live with as little pretense as possible, even if honesty makes him the oddball.

His views:

—Right now I'm playing the guitar. I bounce from one thing to another. First, it's solid folk music, then, 12-bar blues. I've been playing for about three years—just getting on kicks, not much work. But now I've decided to get better at it. I might even want to join a group.

—Youth, who hasn't said something about it? But I guess there's always something more to say. In the 1920s, they all got a whoop out of tossing rocks at windows and playing practical jokes. Youth couldn't care less about that kind of thing today. Maybe, we're too self-conscious to have a good time. I don't know.

—Authority just isn't accepted as being right automatically. That's a big difference. We don't say "Yes, sir" just because the guy has gray hair, a bankroll or a gun. I know that I've had a soft life. I've never been hungry, but a lot of people have been. This bugs me. It should bug the guys with guns and money, too.

—Treating people as people. That's what being human is about. Americans have to learn to take the importance out of things and make people — neighbors, even strangers—important and meaningful. Okay, a lot of people scoff at this like it was just soap. To me, their scoffing just shows how far they've come from the human place.

—Militant political action has its place, but I've never seen much good in it, from a personal point of view, that is. It just seems to flip people off. And that's too easy to do. It doesn't mean anything to win an argument of words.

—The people who have power today had to fight for it. Some of them went hungry. They think that what they've got now is heaven. Then I come along and say it's all wrong. Sure they get mad. The men who have power—politicians, businessmen—usually aren't evil. They're trapped and get angry when you show them how trapped they are.

—Opportunity to be what you want to be hasn't increased much in the last 100 years. It's just that the controls have become more subtle. If you cross society's line, you've had it. But two undergrounds are growing. A lot of people are ignoring the system and being themselves. And a lot of other people are hypocrites—acceptable in public, but radical in private. Would the cops ever be surprised if they knew how many "over 30" pot parties there are.

—I really don't consider myself an American in terms of heritage or values. The stress in America is so much on duty—duty to country, duty to your job. There's only one duty I recognize—duty to other humans. And even that's not so much a duty as it is a normal behavior.

—The differences between generations shouldn't always be phrased in terms of age. It isn't his age that makes a man square. It's his mind. A good mind, a human mind of feeling, can be found in a person of any age.

—The so-called "now generation" is a fake-up of the press. Our concern with what's happening in our own lives, on our own front porches, doesn't mean we don't pay attention to history or the future. We've still got a lot to learn about how things work. But so does everyone, because things aren't working too well. — Steve Stowe.

I ENJOYED tremendously the series of "Please Don't Eat the Daisies" and also enjoyed the re-runs of it on Ch. 5 last season. Will the re-runs begin again? I sure hope so.

Mrs. Nancy Adams,

ging and we felt as we did for soccer and hockey that it's worth doing, at least giving the public a chance to see and decide.

"Ten years ago most people wouldn't have known the name of a ranked tennis player. Now they do — just as they've learned the names of star golfers. Almost everyone has played tennis at some time. It's a fast-moving game and really worth watching. We're giving it an hour on Aug. 30 and two hours each of Sept. 6 and 7. That's five hours and I don't think it's ever had that kind of coverage here before.

"We've got knowledgeable commentators in Bud Collins and Jack Kramer, we'll use all the technical aids — slow-motion, stop-action and so on. We've got the tournament for five years and perhaps in that time we can build an audience of both sexes as we are doing — finally — in football."

MACPHAIL said there was no logic to national reactions to sports. Baseball caught on tremendously in Japan yet failed miserably in Italy. In Britain — where it started in the game called "rounders" — it is played only as softball. CBS, it will be remembered, tried and missed with soccer here though this is played around the world by more people than any other sport.

"We were premature," MacPhail said. "We tried to go big league with soccer too soon, and small crowds in big stadiums do not generate the excitement we saw on satellite relays of the great World Cup Matches. But we did accomplish one thing. More schools and colleges now play the game here, more soccer clubs have been established because of our coverage. And perhaps one day our pioneering will payoff in TV acceptance of the sport.

MACPHAIL thinks CBS will make money on its pro football season this season. It may come as a surprise to fanatics but few sports programs top a good situation series in the ratings and fewer sports make money for the networks. ABC paid $12 million for the rights to the 1972 Olympics and industry sources expect it will lose two or three million dollars on the deal. NBC is geared for a loss on its baseball contracts.

Nevertheless all three networks bid for the limited number of prestige sports events as essential to well-rounded programming and because of the possibility sports audiences may actually contain — as their promoters allege — a higher quality per capita viewer than ordinary shows. "They always says the chairman of the board is more apt to be watching golf than the ordinary workingman," MacPhail said.

He is dubious sports will ever make regular prime time material.

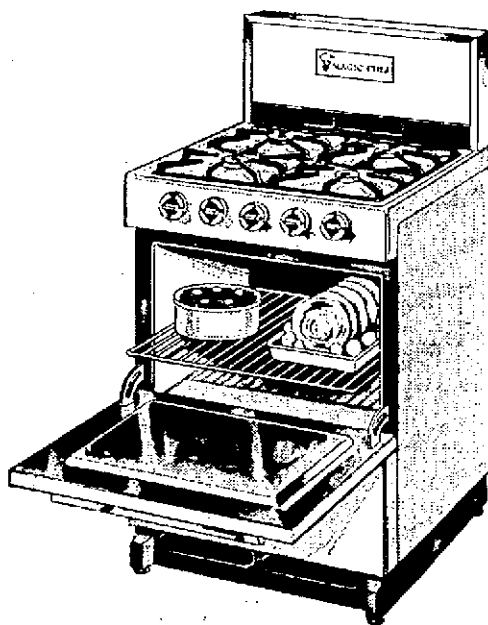

"Maybe they would if you could compress a football or baseball game into half an hour," he said.

Going With the Wind

By Eleanor Avery Price

THE Mustang may have had the wide open range, the colored desert, the canyons, and the cool forest rooms in which to thunder in wild freedom. (Mustang is Spanish for running wild), but he had some forebears who enjoyed none of this. He descended in main part from North African Barbs, Livian horses and Andalusians brought from Spain by settlers of the New World.

There were no horses in America when Cortez first put foot on our shore. In fact, the Indians were frightened of the white conquerors charging them on backs of horses, and undoubtedly some Indians thought that Spaniards were half man and half horse. It didn't take long, however, before their watchful eyes took on a glint of excitement when they saw man and horse walking around separately.

Thus started horse stealing by Indians, and the more horses they could obtain, the richer they were considered. Both Indians and horses love freedom, so together they roamed northward and westward, finally deciding that the West was best of all. Here the horses grew even sturdier as they sped over billowing oceans of grass and climbed steep canyon walls. Some, of course, stayed from the Indians and formed bands each marshaled by a stallion.

The open range horses did not all stay solid in color. They adapted to their environment of cliffs and desert flowers, and appeared as pintos and piebalds.

The exceptionally wild

Rare American Mustang of Medicine Hat coloration and 'glass' eyes is Faric, owned by R. A. Bock, Costa Mesa.

horses were found to amuse cowboys in rodeos. They needed no bucking strap to arch them into contortions until they pitched the cowboys into the dust. So great did the Mustangs love their freedom that few barbed wires could hold them, and some even pitched themselves headlong over cliffs rather than be caught.

Many beautiful things come to an end, and one is the horse going along with the wind. Cowboys, the ugly noise of rifles, corraling airplanes and hungry mountain lions have made the Mustang almost a vanishing American. Most of the wild horses left in our country are known as "broomtails," scrawny animals but still with a desire to remain free.

There are fanciers breeding Mustangs, so the breed itself may never die completely, but they will probably remain stable horses, show horses, and mounts for capable persons. The standard says the ideal Mustang is between 13.2 hands and 15 hands high. Body is short coupled; very muscular, deep barreled, with a neck that crests. Although any color is accepted, I'm told that the rare Medicine Hat coloration with "glass eyes" is one of the best. Pictured is such a stallion named Faric. Owner is R. A. Bock of Costa Mesa.

Address of the American Mustang Assn. Inc. is P.O. Box 9243, Phoenix, Arizona.

- Tattooing done under veterinary supervision by arrangement with Animal Identification Service, Dr. W. A. Young, president.
- Tattoo applied to dog's inside right thigh by electric machine that causes no pain.
- Dog's tattoo number registered for life with the Canine Bureau of Identification, New York, national dog tattoo registry. The TV 'Trade-Out' Game show coming up, recently publicly kicked over the traces and declared that except for real top-drawer talent he was not interested in trading guest-shots.

THE PRACTICE makes economic sense, however, since it helps hold down budgets while big stars help build higher Nielsen ratings. Performers, agents have adopted the device and more than one star of his own special during the coming season wangled it by collecting enough promissory notes to round up a really star-studded cast for a saleable one-shot.

But even if a performer can't play the game, television's financial rewards are considerable. Many, if not most, variety and dramatic shows hold to a top guest-star price of $7,500. "When a variety show is forced to pay $10,000 or more, it's got to be a secret deal," said a producer of variety hours.

"Agents can only negotiate successfully from strength. The price can range from $1,500 for someone who is eager for prime-time exposure. Most Las Vegas comics get $2,500 to $3,000. A class B performer would rate about $5,000."

THE DRAMATIC shows also like to top out at $7,500. Producers are reluctant to talk about pay schedules because every agent would demand tops for his client. It is reliably reported, however, that "The Virginian" has a $5,000 top while "The Name of the Game" sweetens the pot a bit more. Some shows with lower budgets use lesser luminaries for $2,000 to $2,500 per episode.

Stars of some movies-for-TV have been paid $25,000. One producer said that if he could persuade Henry Fonda or Glenn Ford to do a TV movie, he would pay $80,000 for a couple of weeks' work.

MANNO'S Pizza Den and Terrace Room, 5607 E. South St., Lakewood, offers a touch of Italy without the touch of indigestion which sometimes accompanies Italian cooking.

The secret obviously is in the sauce. Joe Manno's kitchen has a mastery over herbs, spices and tomatoes, and the artistry is reflected in the quality of the dishes he sets before his customers.

I dined at Manno's on a Friday night. The hour was latish but the dinner traffic was still heavy. The restaurant has become one of "the" places to dine. Indeed, one of the aficionados at the next table was heard to say that his "only regret is that Manno's is closed on Mondays."

My choice was veal parmigiana. It was delicious, yielding gently to the cutting edge of my fork. The dish was served piping hot and rested on an individual wooden tray.

Manno's had prepared me for the delight of the veal parmigiana by teasing the taste buds with a bowl of minestrone, garlic bread and tossed salad. Even the preliminaries leave one well fed and satisfied. The entree is a bonus.

The atmosphere at Manno's is pleasant and conducive to lingering long over after-dinner coffee. The staff is attentive to the slightest drop in the coffee cup level, and one is made to feel at home among friends.

We left reluctantly — at 11 o'clock. All the way home my wife spoke glowingly of the spaghetti she had selected, and I kept interrupting with praise for the happy combination of veal, parmesan cheese, bread crumbs and delicate tomato sauce.

All that — and ravioli, too — made my cup runneth over with satisfaction. But not my plate. Within the bounds of good table deportment I left very little for the dish washers to do.

You'll like Manno's. So will your digestive tract and taste buds.

TELEVISION LOG OF THE EVENING NEWS AND THE INDEPENDENT-PRESS-TELEGRAM

Merv Goes Network

By ROBERT MUSEL
United Press International

Merv Griffin's new late night talk show at 11:30 p.m., Monday, Ch. 2, is the most eagerly awaited premiere of the sparse summer openings since it marks Griffin's elevation to the networks after five years of syndication and pitches him into one of the most hotly competitive time slots on the schedule.

CBS has planned a big welcome for merry Merv and his venerable sidekick, 75-year-old Arthur Treacher. Johnny Carson on NBC-TV has planned an even bigger one — a series of shows from Hollywood drawing on such superstars as Dean Martin, Bob Hope, Rowan and Martin and Lucille Ball.

This is the powerful NBC ratings medicine that has worked before but if anyone is worried at CBS it isn't Griffin. He was discovered the other day in dusty work clothes going over the plans of the new office and restaurant he is building in New York only a few doors from the theater CBS has taken over to house his show.

MERV IS such a sincere and charming fellow that its hard not to believe him when he says its only a coinci-

HOST OF Music Hall, Ch. 4, for four weeks is Don Ho "letting" it on some of his guests (front to back) Bobby Goldsboro, at 9 p.m., Wednesday; Rod McKuen, Aug. 23, and Peter Nero, Sept. 3.

When Athletes Play . . .

United Press International

A Hollywood producer who lost a fortune making a feature film about baseball coined the box office epitaph: "When athletes play, women stay away."

The same holds true for television but that doesn't stop the networks from trying — again and again. Now CBS has announced a plunge into major coverage of the $125,000 U.S. Open Tennis Championships at Forest Hills, N.Y.

This time Bill MacPhail, the able, refreshingly frank vice president of CBS sports may have done better than he expected. For tennis is not only a big time sport in Britain, it stays among the high-rated TV shows for the entire two weeks of the Wimbledon Tennis Championships.

"I'M NOT optimistic that the British experience will apply here," said MacPhail. "The last time we carried Forest Hills we reached 2.5 million homes against 16 million homes for our NFL football games. But the championships have been going beg-

Glad You Asked That!

By Hy Gardner

Danny Thomas shows, in a "before and after" pose, how he'd look with a nose job.

I HEAR that Danny Thomas finally decided to have a nose job. Yes or no? — B. R. D., Baltimore.

A. Maybe. "If I ever underwent nose surgery," Danny explains, "it would be for health, not cosmetic reasons. I recently discussed, with a prominent New York specialist, an operation to remove a bump—a little muscle—from my nose. I have a double deviated septum which has long interfered with my breathing. If I could be guaranteed that such surgery would help me to breathe and sleep better and not change me too much, I might just go for it."

Q. The late John Garfield was my favorite movie star. Will his son also play the tough guy roles that made his father famous? — Jean Bardie, Oakland.

A. Young Garfield says he'll play anything—"to get the experience I need, in order to get to know me. I even do a nude scene in a picture called 'That Cold Day In the Park.'"

Q. Is Cary Grant in love again? And with whom? — Sally L., New York City.

Cary Grant... a new love.

A. His face lights up, his eyes gleam, his spirits soar when he confirms your suspicion! As expected, the beauty is considerably younger than Cary. He can't see enough of her. He tries to court her at least once a week, flying to her home in Hollywood from wherever in the world he may be. He buys her clothes, she has a blank check on his bank account, he even takes daytime naps with her. And his ex-wife knows and approves of the romance. Her name is Jennifer—his 3-year-4½-month-old daughter.

Q. Does Jackie use the Kennedy name in her bank account now that she's spending Ari's money? — George Curtis, Brooklyn.

A. Whoever's money she's spending, she signs her checks "Jacqueline Bouvier Onassis," no mention of Kennedy.

Q. Whatever happened to Sidney Franklin, the famous "Bullfighter From Brooklyn"? — Larry McKinney, Lubbock, Tex.

A. Sidney now does his bullthrowing in Mexico City from the safe side of the bullring—broadcasting the action via radio.

Q. Is it true "The Flying Nun" is going to have a baby? — Ruth G., Denver.

A. Yes. Sally Field has already been grounded.

OUR COVER

They call it "The Boat That Flies!" It is the H.S. (Hydrofoil Ship) Victoria, the only ocean-going hydrofoil operating in the United States. Whisking along on its underwater wings 14-feet below the surface, the craft provides an amazingly smooth ride for Catalina-bound passengers as it crosses the channel in less than an hour. The 75-passenger hydrofoil makes four round-trips daily—five on weekends. Ira Dowd, chairman of the board of International Hydrolines, Inc., who has been operating hydrofoils in the Caribbean Islands for 11 years, is a staunch believer that hydrofoils operating on our offshore and inland waters will become the rapid transit system vehicles of the future. For more about "The Boat That Flies," turn to Page 5.

PAN AND FAN MAIL

MY HUSBAND, adult son, and myself are great admirers of Patrick McGoochan of "Secret Agent" and "The Prisoner." In our non-professional opinion he is an outstanding actor! (We also saw him in the movie "Ice Station Zebra"). We find "The Prisoner" stimulating, though we seldom comprehend all the symbolism involved.

Is there any way we can let Mr. McGoochan know of our admiration?

I don't want my men to know, but I surely would love to have a picture of Mr. McGoochan!

Mrs. Margaret Wille,
Long Beach

(Only address CBS has for McGoochan is ATV House, Great Cumberland Place, London, W 1, England. You might try him there).

I HAVE BEEN told that Spade Cooley and Roy Rogers were brothers. Is that true? Also is Maria Cole marrying a white man?

Mrs. D. Smith,
Long Beach

(Cooley and Rogers are not related, according to a available biographical data. Miss Cole is engaged to marry Gary DeVore, a Caucasian).

CAN YOU tell me how I can get a picture of "The Mod Squad" and where most of the episodes are filmed. I really enjoy the series and hope it goes on for a long time.

Debra Rhymin,
Westminster

ARE MORE repeats of "Rat Patrol" scheduled for Ch. 9 and is Chris George going to do any guest shots or have his own TV show in the future? How can I get a picture of him?

Nancy Martin,
Downey

Encore for Elvis

Elvis Presley's special, aired last December, will be repeated at 9 p.m., Sunday, Ch. 4. The show ranked fourth on the list of highest-rated specials for the 1968-69 season.

(Ch. 9 does not have series scheduled, and the agency that handles him says the only thing fresh is that George has just finished a film, "The Delta Factor." You can try the William Morris Agency, 151 El Camino Dr., Beverly Hills, about the picture).

WHO PLAYS the character Nicholas Blair on "Dark Shadows."

Joe Wood,
Long Beach
(He's played by Lambert A. Astrado).

OF ALL the serials on TV, I like "Dark Shadows" the best. That really is a thriller. People who like scary movies should depend on "Dark Shadows." I really like the actors too. Especially Jonathan Frid.

THE WELLS REPORT

Occupied Territory

By Bob Wells

ON BALBOA Island last weekend a man was walking his Airedale on the blue pavements of twilight. The Airedale was old and grizzled and very very serious about his walk. He concentrated on it, placing each foot with great attention and nodding his head and shoulders in slow, laborious rhythm.

The man was about 50 and balding. He, too, was preoccupied with his own private thoughts and did not hurry the dog. He had heavy, dark brows and a smooth, round face on which his beard's own twilight was beginning to show. He glanced at the bay and at the peninsula beyond to which the sunset had fled, and back at the frame and brick houses of the island, but he did not let his thoughts show in his face.

The three troopers of the Occupation were female and were still wearing their daytime bikini fatigue uniforms. They were about 15 years old. One was very short and very curvaceous. Her black bikini was the same color as her hair but about one-fourth the material. In another two years, she would begin to get fat and shapeless, but right now she considered herself very sexy indeed.

The second girl was tall and bony with knees that leaned toward each other and two large front teeth to match. The top of her bikini sagged in fold-like short, chintz Dutch curtains.

The third girl was a tiny wraith with a tan the color of her chestnut hair. She moved through the darkening like a wisp of smoke from a defective smog control device.

THE MAN and his Airedale stepped off the sidewalk into a small space between a parked Corvette and a parked Volkswagen and let the girls pass. Beyond them the tires of countless automobiles sighed patiently as they crept in long lines to and from the ferry. In the manner of subject populations everywhere, the man and the dog kept their eyes on the pavement and did not look at the Occupation troopers as they passed.

The three girls looked at the man and the Airedale not directly, but sidelong in the manner that all members of the Occupation use when greeting either friend or foe. Then when they saw that the pair did not stare back, the girls looked more directly, and as they passed, something in the patient resignation of the man and dog caused the teenagers suddenly to go into gales of laughter.

When the girls had passed, the Airedale and his master stepped back on the sidewalk and resumed their slow, dignified walk. The Occupiers were everywhere. They sat in small patios in front of the houses and shouted to each other from second story windows. They were in the dented red Triumphs that gnashed their motors in agonies of frustrated revs, as they waited for the queue to move toward the ferry.

Further down the street, the main force of the Occupation was gathered for evening retreat in front of the Jolly Roger. The boys were seated on the street side of the fenders and hoods of parked automobiles, slurping orange soda from large paper cups and watching the cars slowly drift past like boats becalmed. On the sidewalk the girls formed defensive circles like wagon trains, false eyelashes turned inward and long Lady Godiva waterfalls of hair falling outward.

If the man and his Airedale saw all this, they gave no sign. They looked through the Occupiers and sought the island they knew, the island of sea and sky and the blue hush of early night.

BALBOA ISLAND is Occupied Territory. So indeed is all of Newport and Laguna and Seal Beach and Belmont Shore and a whole coastal strip of Southern California two miles wide from Malibu to San Diego, broken only by the armed presence of the Marine Corps at Camp Pendleton.

Sometime this year or early next year, the chronological center of U.S. population will shift, and more than half our people will be 25 years of age or younger. In California beach cities, the mean age has dropped drastically beyond that. Statistics are hard to gather — teen-agers in panel trucks or in sleeping bags on the beach do not respond to special censuses — but two-thirds of most beach populations and three-fourths of some must be below the age of 25.

That, incidentally, seems to be the new street number of Generation Gap — 25. Two years ago, you were a trustworthy Younger Generationist until the age of 30, but now if you've passed the quarter-century mark, you've had it.

Let it be recorded with pride that the Older Generation did not relinquish their ancestral lands until overwhelmed by sheer weight of numbers. In some areas guerilla resistance still continues. In Laguna Beach, the city fathers have adopted an ordinance banning sitting on the sidewalk, thus assuring, at least, a stand-up occupation. In Huntington Beach, the elders have the youth command post, a place called the Syndicate, under siege and at least temporarily cut off.

In Long Beach, the resistance is attempted to interdict the Occupiers food supply in Belmont Shore by banning further hamburger and taco stands on Second St.

NEVERTHELESS, for their own health and safety there are certain rules that quarter-centarians should observe if they live or work in Occupied Territory.

1. Always observe curfew: Be in your homes and preferably in bed by 8 p.m. This will insure you getting some sleep before 3 a.m. when you will be awakened for the rest of the night by revved automobile motors, motorcycle backfires, laughing, singing, and the gentle sound of beer cans falling on the pavement.

2. Resign yourself to walking. It is impossible for elders to drive in Occupied Territory because (1) It isn't safe; (2) You can't buy gas after 9 p.m. because the Occupiers have parked their cars in front of all the pumps and are rapping with the youthful attendants, or are in the restrooms smoking pot; (3) Your own son or daughter has your car anyway.

3. Always step off the sidewalk and make way for an Occupier: This not only will improve relations with the Occupation Forces, but it may also prevent infection.

4. If threatened by invasion and occupation, destroy all known stereotypes and lay in a six-month stock of earplugs: Self-explanatory.

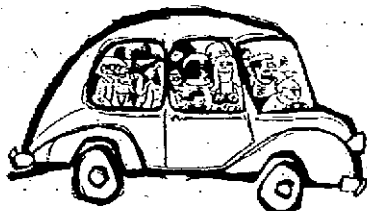

5. Practice passive resistance and non-cooperation. Remember, time is on your side. Someday the Occupiers will have to face their own children.

'Trade Out'

Game Played at Top of the TV Ladder

By CYNTHIA LOWREY
By Associated Press

A game people play at the top of the TV ladder is called "trade-out."

It goes like this: Johnny guest-stars in a Lucy episode; Lucy appears in a Carson special. Carol frolics in a Nabors hour; Jim is the very special guest on a Burnett show.

The device is a simple swap deal, no money is involved, and it can only be played by TV VIPs, usually with a stake in their own shows. Thus, it has become something of a status symbol.

But there are dangers. Too much can bore the audience by over-exposing the superstars, and those extra jolts can wear down a star already toiling long hours on his weekly show. Andy Williams, with a new variety

It's a Boat! It's a Plane! ... It's a Hydrofoil!

By Jack O. Baldwin

Independent Press-Tribune Marine Editor

AS SEVERAL SCORE business executives, salesmen and lawyers gripping their attache cases strode into the terminal building, the public address system boomed:

"Your attention, please! Flight 715 for Seal Beach, Long Beach, San Pedro, Redondo Beach, El Segundo, International Airport, Marina Del Rey and Santa Monica is now ready for boarding at Gate 3. All aboard, please."

A late-arriving commuter trotted down the ramp and leaped aboard just as the boat was pulling away from the dock.

Boat?

That's right—a boat! But not an ordinary boat.

It was a hydrofoil, the key vehicle in the most logical rapid transit system of the not-so-distant future.

A hydrofoil is a craft that is half-boat, half-plane which can fly above choppy seas, leveling the crests and troughs while speeding along at freeway speeds.

It is these unique capabilities which make the hydrofoil an efficient, economical vehicle for the rapid and mass movement of people.

Russia, with thousands of miles of shoreline and no freeways, has more than 5,000 hydrofoils in service.

There are thousands of others in regular service in Japan, New Zealand, Australia, Italy, Norway, Sweden, Venezuela, Brazil, Peru, Bolivia and many other countries.

There are 90 commercial hydrofoil companies throughout the world which have been in operation for more than 10 years.

Compare this with America's hydrofoil box score:

The first and only ocean-going commercially-operated hydrofoil in the United States went into service on July 4 between San Pedro and Catalina Island.

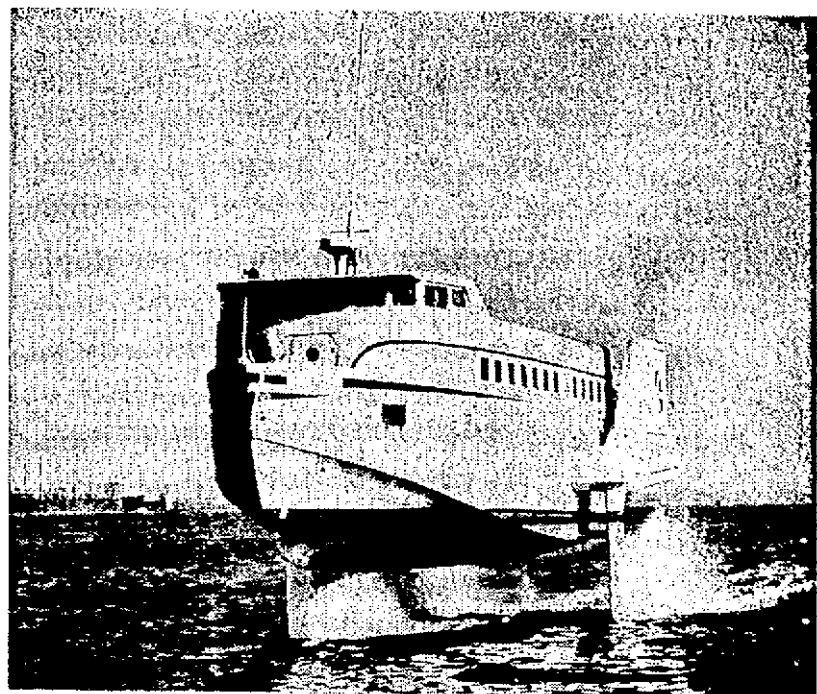

The 75-passenger H. S. (Hydrofoil Ship) Victoria, unhampered by stop signals, freeway traffic jams or bottlenecks caused by road work, whisks across the 27.4 miles of the sometimes rough channel waters in 45 minutes.

Electronic gyros prevent the vessel from rolling, pitching or yawing as it skims along at speeds up to 46 miles an hour two feet above the sea.

Some skeptics, basing their opinions on the observation of other so-called hydrofoils (which are not truly hydrofoils), have predicted the cross-channel hydrofoil will never be able to operate during rough weather.

During a recent 292-mile flight of the H. S. Victoria from Santa Cruz to Los Angeles Harbor the 65-foot craft encountered 20- to 24-foot waves. As the craft sped before a following sea the waves crested and curled, sending white water rolling down the steep forward slope of the towering waves.

This writer viewed the spectacle from the flight deck bridge. The vessel flew over the cresting waves and deep troughs at an average of 28 knots.

H. S. Victoria, "the boat that flies," makes San Pedro-to-Avalon trip in 45 minutes.

The craft could have traveled faster but it was decided to fly at no more than 30 knots to conserve fuel.

Walking up and down the aisle during the five hours the craft was caught in the rough seas was no more of an adventure than trying to walk to the dining car on a train going around a curve.

Despite the swells, currents, and confused sea there was no annoying roll, no violent pitching, and the craft held its course as the automatic pilot responded to the commands of the shipboard computer.

Hydrofoils have still another unique characteristic which gives them a distinct advantage in crowded harbors and marinas over conventional hulled vessels which float on the surface.

They leave no wake!

This characteristic enables hydrofoils to cruise right up to the dock at relatively high speeds. A conventional boat, passing through a congested harbor, would create such a wake wave it possibly would cause other boats to capsize and would damage shoreside installations.

One man who is a staunch believer in the future of hydrofoils as part of a waterborne rapid transit system is Ira Dowd, chairman of the board of International Hydrofoils, Inc.

Dowd's company operates the H. S. Victoria between the Catalina Terminal in the Port of Los Angeles and the island city of Avalon.

Dowd, recognized as the most knowledgeable authority on hydrofoils in the United States, has been operating "boats that fly" for 11 years among the Caribbean Islands.

"Our waterways, both offshore and inland, are the freeways of the future," Dowd contends.

To convert the waterways into multi-lane, high-speed freeways would cost the taxpayer little—if anything at all!

There would be no condemnation proceedings. No expensive land to purchase. No buildings to be moved or destroyed. And the waterways never need repaving, landscaping or any costly maintenance.

Unlike the motorist trapped in a creeping traffic slow-down, his radiator and patience reaching the boiling point while he inhales the stinky exhaust of the car ahead and hemmed-in by a corrugated crash-rail and a link chain fence, the pilot of a hydrofoil could easily skim around a snarl.

Auto traffic flows into a metropolitan area in an hourglass pattern.

"Hydrofoils can take the pinch out of the hourglass," contends Dowd.

He envisions a hydrofoil commuter service along the coastal waters of Southern California, in the San Francisco Bay area between the International Airport and bayside communities, and from La Guardia Airport on Long Island

BECOME A BLACKSMITH
ON PALOS VERDES
PENINSULA

A Sure Way to Make Money on Horses

By Mary Neiswender

WHEN THE GAS BUGGY replaced the horse and buggy, blacksmiths, looking to the future, steered their off-spring away from the anvil and toward the spark plug.

The pendulum is swinging the other way now . . . at least in the horsey communities which dot the Palos Verdes Peninsula.

Horseshoers are steering their off-spring away from mechanical plugs and back to just plain plugs.

Reason: "It's just a good business to be in."

Bob Dierks is one of 20 horseshoers who travel the peninsula, putting new shoes on one of the largest horse populations in the county.

It's an area where, in addition to a car in every garage and a chicken in every pot, there's a horse in every yard, Dierks says.

And it's a business that's rewarding — so he tried to encourage his four sons to join him.

It didn't work.

One boy, he says, didn't like the work because it was too hard.

Another had to give up because he was allergic to horses.

Another "looked up at a flock of pigeons . . . the horse went up too and came down on top of me." (You've got to pay attention to what you're doing, the 49-year-old Dierks says, or you'll get killed.)

To the fourth, after a "pep talk," he said: "Get in the truck if you want to go with me."

"He wasn't there when I got ready to leave."

Three other children — all girls — he didn't encourage.

Dierks, who retired two years ago after 20 years as a motorcycle officer with the Los Angeles Police Department, learned to shoe horses as a boy of 16 in San Pedro.

"I started in a livery stable — there were four or five of them in the harbor area at the time and about three dairies," he recalls.

"Instead of going to the show, I'd go to the blacksmith's shop and watch. When a job came up, they said I could have it if I could shoe a horse. I, of course, said I could.

"To this day I don't know why that horse didn't go lame."

But he got the job.

He left it several years later to join the police department, but returned to horseshoeing in 1952 on a part-time basis. He took up his hammer and tongs on a full-time basis two years ago when he retired from the force.

It wasn't as much love of the business that kept him at it through the years, he admits, as his seven children. (Horseshoeing takes from 35 minutes to an hour and costs the horse's owner about $14.)

"It was always a way of making money," he admits, "and it was always fun."

But he's had his jolts too, he says.

"You know when a horse is going to move and you either move with it and ride the punch out or you get out. But if you have a horse that really wants to kick you, you're not going to get away."

His last "jolt," he says, was because he got into a "dumb situation — I was in a bad spot and couldn't get out."

But he's had bad jolts before and has ridden them out.

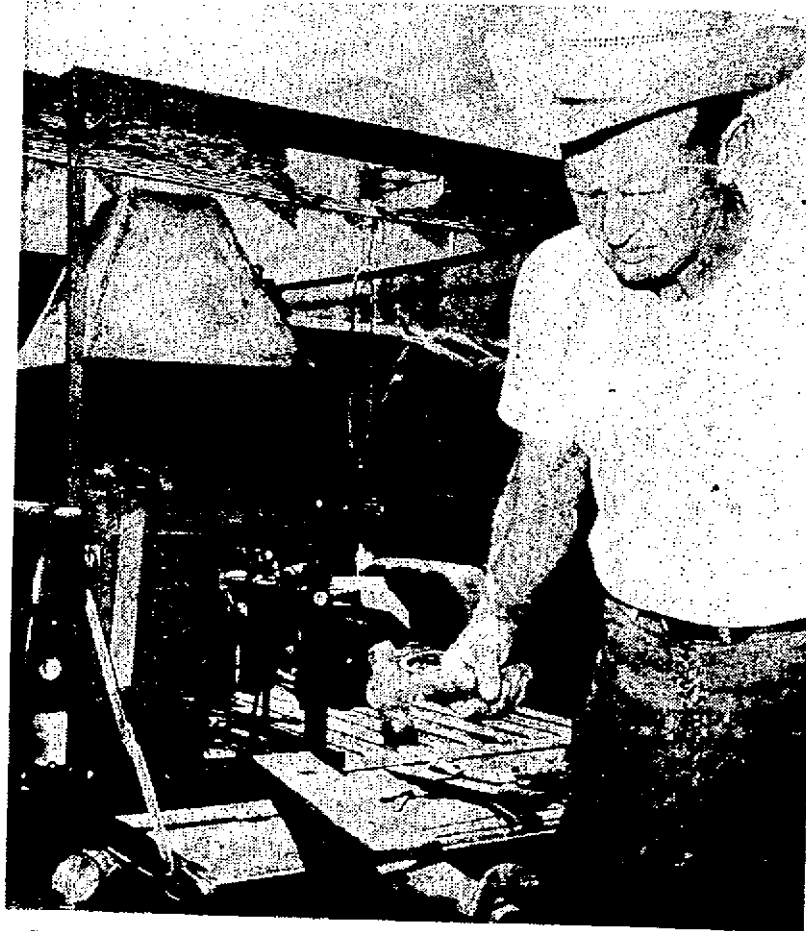

"Tranquilizers help," the sandy-haired smithy claims. "But even at that I've had to tie some down on their sides to shoe them."

The "best cure" for a bad horse, he says, is to "put the key in the ignition and say 'I'll see you later'."

And when he leaves — in his pick-up truck — he takes with him all the tools of a trade that goes back centuries.

Rattling in the bed are horseshoes, a leather apron which he makes himself, an anvil and hammers, horseshoe nails, knives, hoof stands, nippers, nail clinchers, rasps, leg hobbles and a forge — brought to a hurried red-hot readiness by an old newspaper, a match and an electric fan.

The only thing that's passe in the business is the bellows.

Bob Dierks, who served for 20 years as a motorcycle officer with the Los Angeles Police Department, now works full-time as a horseshoer on the Palos Verdes Peninsula. His forge, anvil are portable.

Dierks finds horseshoeing is a good business to be in on the peninsula. He is one of about 20 horseshoers serving the area.

Start of a $2 journey — the buying of a bet ticket at Los Alamitos. Track has 175 ticket machines, each wired into the main control room.

Main control room houses computers costing more than $1 million. The machines records bets, store information in memory bank and compute odds.

Many Rapid Steps Involved
in Handling Your $2 Bet

Men, Machines Start and Finish Fast to Keep Up With Horses

By Dave Daniel

EVEN IN THIS AGE of inflation, $2 goes a long way — at a race track. You'd probably be surprised at all the steps involved in handling a simple $2 bet.

We looked into the matter at Los Alamitos Race Course in Orange County, where, during the racing season, thousands of people wager hundreds of thousands of dollars six nights a week.

The track, which opened in 1951 with an 11-day season, has grown into one of the finest community race courses in the nation, thanks to its founder, the late Frank Vessels Sr., its president, Frank Vessels Jr. — and the $2 bettor. The track now is open 78 nights a year.

Los Alamitos last year became the first track in Southern California to stage night horse racing, and this year it became the first one to offer the quiniela form of betting.

Buying a ticket on a horse race at Los Alamitos is a pretty simple matter. All that's needed is $2 and faith. Buying a ticket on a winning horse takes a little more — a combination of knowledge, skill and luck.

One merely walks up to a mutual clerk ticket seller at a specified window and gives the number of the horse he wishes to bet on and exchanges his cash for a 2x3-inch pasteboard.

With luck, the $2 investment will be returned shortly with a handsome profit. If that's the case, just take the winning ticket to a cashier and collect the payoff.

Simple, right?
To the casual observer, it is, but let's follow your $2 wager from the moment you make the decision on which horse to bet in a race. You'll be surprised to find out just how complex the matter actually is.

Buried, beneath the Los Alamitos grandstand, away from the public's prying eyes, is a series of rooms containing a large number of costly machines and a great many employees, comprising the Operations Department, which is directly responsible for your $2.

Your $2 bill gets action even before it leaves your wallet. As soon as you tell the ticket seller the number of the horse you're betting on, he pushes the corresponding number on his totalizer machine and out pops the ticket, seemingly the instant you ask for it.

But the main control room, filled with more than a million dollars worth of computers and hundreds of miles of wires plus a 12-man staff, has already jumped into action.

There are 175 ticket-selling machines at Los Alamitos, all developed by the American Totalizator Company of Baltimore. Each machine is wired into the main control room.

Before a ticket is issued, the machine sends an impulse to the computers in the control room, which records the amount of the wager and the horse it is on and stores that information in a memory bank.

The computers then relay back to the seller's machine that the bet has been recorded, and the ticket is issued in less time than it takes to blink an eye.

With an average of 10 horses in each race and with nearly $100,000 bet on each race, the computers are continually kept humming to keep pace with the 175 selling machines that are not only punching out $2 win tickets, but $2 tickets to

In the calculating room, auditors figure odds and payoff prices to provide a double-check on the computers.

Money from 175 sellers goes to "Money Room" after each race, where it is counted and checked, then sent back to cashiers to pay off winning bettors.

Final stop of $2 wager is "Ticket Room," where all winning tickets are turned in, checked for counterfeiting or forgery and stored for 60-day period.

place and show as well as $5 and $10 wagers and $5 and $15 combinations, where a horse is bet across the board.

HORSE RACING is a profitable business, but the entire mechanical operation, down to the last light bulb on the infield tote board, is leased to each track that uses it. The expense is too great for a track to buy and store the set-up at one track for the limited number of days that it is used throughout the year.

The machines, and even those tote-board light bulbs, are shipped from track to track as the racing season ro-

The Quiet Boy

By Mark Clutter

WHEN MY WIFE said that David was coming to pay us a visit, I wondered what was in store. I hadn't associated with 11-year-olds since my daughters were that age quite a while ago.

I thought of a friend who said recently, "I wish my daughter would take her children and go home. They're wonderful kids and they are driving me crazy."

Nephew David is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Luke of Eugene, Ore. She is my wife's sister.

I expected noise, a word that rhymes with boys. There was no noise at all. I took David fishing from Pierpoint Landing. It was his first time at sea. Most of the time while we were under way he watched ships and shoreline with my binoculars.

As a fisherman he worked hard. He quickly learned to handle the unfamiliar salt water reel and how to hook on the anchovies. It was not a good day for fishing, but finally he caught a bass just big enough to be legal. I caught a fish, so we were not skunked. He said almost nothing all afternoon, but he looked happy.

I gave him the fish for his breakfast, and charcoal hamburgers for supper. "How do you like your hamburger?" I asked.

"Raw," he said.

"You mean rare?"

"Yeah."

Later I said, "I guess they are done."

"Overdone," he said.

(They were red inside). He ate hamburger. I don't understand how a slim, tanned, blond little boy can eat more than I do. He must have put away three-quarters of a pound. Then he had ice cream.

I tried to interview him, but I failed. He would answer every question directly. He is a Scout. He is a Little Leaguer. He is a sixth grader. His favorite subject, he said with a slight grin, is recess. He likes to go to the mountains.

We went other places. I

David Luke... sees a lot, says little.

bought him a harmonica, and he played small elfin music on it. He saw a coin-and-stamp store and he stared fascinated at the displays.

"Are you a collector?" I asked.

"Yes. I collect only United States stamps."

I gave him some money and he spent 20 minutes selecting the stamps he wanted.

I took him to the high slippery slide in Downey. He went four times. "It was scary the first time," he said. I tried it. It was scary.

I took him arrow shooting. With a little practice he did very well, even hitting the bull's-eye. "It is fun, but I like playing pool better," he said.

Everything we did for him brought forth a simple thank-you. He never asked for anything, but if we gave him a choice of things to do, he always knew exactly what he wanted.

Much of his visit was spent with another uncle, Gregory Luke, of Long Beach. Greg took him to Disneyland, Marineland, Palm Springs, the beach, the movies and other places.

After David returned to Oregon I asked Greg, "Did you get much out of him?"

"No. Dave doesn't say much. But I know him well enough to be sure he had a good time."

I wonder if he is saying much to the Scouts and Little Leaguers about his adventures in and around Long Beach.

Photographer was prepared for the unexpected and shot this candid wedding picture showing billowing sheet canopy, beaming bride, tuxedoed ushers.

Add a Candid Look

EVERY WEDDING day is planned to be perfect. But human nature and Mother Nature being as unpredictable as they are, there is bound to be an element of surprise somewhere in the schedule.

The professional photographer is an expert at capturing perfection, and the bride knows she will get polished, traditional pictures of her wedding day. She feels secure knowing she can count on the professional's consistently good results.

But the unexpected — the downpours, the high winds, the last-minute crisis — often create interesting picture subjects that the professional, busy with preplanned shots, does not have time or the opportunity to photograph. That's where the amateur can step in to record the off-beat but memorable moments of the occasion in candid pictures.

One secret of getting natural, unposed photographs is not to be noticed. Keep your equipment simple — all you really need is your camera, extra film and flashcubes. It's wise to use a camera-film combination that you have used before so that you know its capabilities. And, before you go to the wedding, clean flash battery contacts with a rough cloth or a pencil eraser. This is a good idea even when your batteries are new.

Once your equipment is ready, start thinking about the type of pictures you want. Find out from the bride's family how extensive the professional photographer's coverage will be so you can arrange to take the shots that might otherwise be missed. You might even make a list of picture ideas. For example, the professional photographer will see that he gets pictures of the wedding party and the parents of the bride and groom. But, in addition, there will almost certainly be aunts, uncles, cousins, grandparents and special friends. Make it a point to include them in your pictures, and the newlyweds will be eternally grateful.

It is tempting, of course, to keep your camera aimed at the bridal couple. They are the focal point of the occasion. But this is what the professional photographer is hired to do. Why duplicate his efforts when you can be making memorable shots elsewhere, such as the tiny flower girl asleep in a corner, the friends of the groom conspiring about "Just Married" signs, or the proud-but-sad look of the father of the bride as he watches his radiant daughter?

This is your special function as a candid photographer. Watch for the unplanned moment, the bit of humor, the unusual or the just plain exciting instant that comes with every wedding. It takes patience, imagination and quick reflexes to capture those natural, unposed pictures, but the results are worth it. With a flashcube on your camera, you can take four shots in quick succession and record an action sequence as a small child attacks his piece of wedding cake or the bride flings her bouquet.

If those you want to photograph are very conscious of your camera, borrow a trick from the pros for getting candid shots. Aim and focus your camera at a point roughly the same distance from you as the individual or group you want to picture. Then, just before snapping the shutter, turn the camera toward your subjects and click! They won't have time to pose, and you will have a candid picture.

Every wedding is planned to be perfect. And it can be "picture perfect" when you add your candid insight to the professional's prowess.

What Your Name Means

By LA REGNA RULE

Send your name to La Regina Rule, Post Office Box 64151, Los Angeles, Calif. 90064, for origin, meaning and brief genealogy, for reply only in this column.

MISS RULE: May we have the origin of GAY. — W.M., Seal Beach.

GAY, English, began as a trademark insign depicting a "jay-bird" or "Gay-bird," as these birds were originally known.

Adam and Robert Gay were Oxford land owners in the late 1200s. The Gay shield is gold, emblazoned with a blue chevron between three blue seashells.

MISS RULE: Please identify PIEMONTE. — E.M., Long Beach.

PIEMONTE, Italian, was adopted by the forefather from his native province of that name in Italy. Piemonte or Piedmonte, another form, evolved from the ancient Latin "Pedimontium" meaning "at the foot of the mountain," referring to the Alps along Italy's northern frontier.

MISS RULE: Please give data on CRABTREE. — K.C., Long Beach.

CRABTREE, English, originally "Crab-tree," was applied to "residents of a home landmarked by a crab-apple tree." The Crabtree armorial shield is silver, emblazoned with a black, zig-zag armed cross. Edward Crabtree, an American ancestor, settled in Virginia during 1635.

MISS RULE: Please inform us on WILCOX. — D.W., Huntington Beach.

WILCOX, English, was formed from "Wil," shortened from William, meaning "resolute protector," combined with "cocks," later "Cox" meaning "proud one." The Wilcox shield is silver, decorated with a rampant lion. John

CRITICS' CORNER

FATHERS AND SONS, aired Tuesday, Ch. 2.

THE VIDEOTAPED program focused on four sets of fathers and their sons, a small-town policeman and his alienated, drug-taking, college student son; a successful business man and World War II army officer and his son, a married graduate student and convicted draft resister; a working-class negro and his son, who attends Cornell as a psychology major and is captain of the football team, and a wall street administrator and his suburban-reared college-bound son.

In separate interviews, parents and children raised the familiar issues — the arguments over Vietnam, the business ethic, middle-class values, marijuana versus liquor and the meaning of contemporary patriotism. Particularly poignant was the growing estrangement between the policeman and his alienated son, who rejects most of his father's values and justifies the use of drugs as an escape from dreaded boredom.

MOVING ALSO was the plight of the young draft resister, a graduate student in history and an expectant father, as he awaited court decisions that would determine whether he would spend the next five years in prison. In interviews with CBS. He tried to explain how he felt his resistance to the draft and his refusal to run away to Canada was an expression of a higher kind of patriotism than his father's generation exemplified.

And then there was the Negro student at Cornell, torn between the demands of black militants and guilt-ridden whites, who found his center of sanity in the ideals of his hard-working ghetto parents. Perhaps he exemplified the difference between the affluent generation and those who have had to struggle for their niche on the ladder, but his words must have had a warm ring to older viewers.

"IT'S REALLY weird," he told Charles Kuralt. "Like you have to go away from home to find out that everything you had been taught at home was right, and I really respect that. You know, I'm amazed at how accurate my parents are. Sort of proud of it, too."

The quality of the production what's one's anticipation for next week's sequel, "Mothers and Daughters."

Epicure Treat - Cheese and Fruit

By Mildred K.
Flanary

Southland Magazine
Home Economics Editor

CCHEESE AND fruit is a universally favored dessert. The secret of this dessert duo is Liederkrantz Fruit Dip... a frosty blend of creamy Neufchatel and robust Liederkrantz cheeses.

Prepare it in advance and refrigerate to let the flavors mingle. Wash, cut and dip the fruit in lemon juice to prevent discoloration. Wreath the dip with the crisp fruits of the season — wedges of pear or apple — green grapes — and let the guests dip or sauce their favorites. Speaking of wreaths... the name Liederkrantz means "wreath of song." As color and sounds blend harmoniously, so, too, do these flavors. They are classic examples of elegant good taste.

FROSTY LIEDERKRANTZ
(Makes about 12 servings)

2 (8-oz.) packages pasteurized Neufchatel cheese

1 (4-oz.) package Liederkrantz Brand Soft Ripened Cheese

1/2 cup lemon juice

2 tablespoons homogenized milk

2 large ripe peaches, pitted

2 ripe Bartlett pears, cored

2 large bananas, peeled

1 avocado, apple or melon, peeled and seeded

1/2 lb. seedless grapes

In a medium-size bowl,

soften cheeses at room temperature. Beat together until smooth and fluffy. Gradually stir in 1/4 cup of the lemon juice and milk. Turn into serving bowl. Chill in refrigerator until ready to serve. Cut peaches and pears into 12 wedges each. Cut bananas diagonally, into 2-inch lengths. Dip sliced peaches, pears and bananas in lemon juice. Cut other fruit into wedges about the same size as the peaches and pears. Divide grapes into small clusters. Arrange fruit on a large tray around dip.

Recipe of the Week

MRS. JAMES L. UPTAIN, 6402 Eberle St., Lakewood, wins the $5 recipe prize this week.

BANANA-OATMEAL-RAISIN COOKIES

- 1/2 cup margarine
- 1/2 cup shortening
- 1 cup packed brown sugar
- 1/2 cup granulated sugar
- 1 egg, slightly beaten
- 2 mashed bananas
- 2 small boxes raisins
- 1/4 cup raisin water
- 1 tsp. vanilla
- 1 cup sifted flour
- 1 tsp. salt
- 1/2 tsp. soda
- 3 cups oats, uncooked

Set oven at 350. Put raisins in small pan, cover with water and simmer 5 minutes. Let sit until needed. In a large bowl, cream margarine, shortening and sugars. Add beaten egg. Drain off a fourth cup of the raisin water from the pan and add to batter. Blend. Then add bananas and vanilla. Sift in the flour, salt and soda. Add oats. Stir well. Drain raisins completely and add them to batter. Mix until well blended. Drop by teaspoon onto greased cookie sheets and bake 12-15 minutes. Cool before frosting.

MAPLE BUTTER FROSTING

- 2 tblsp. margarine
- 2 cups powdered sugar
- 1 1/2 tblsp. milk
- 1 tsp. maple flavoring

Blend margarine and half of sugar. Add milk and rest of sugar and flavoring. Beat well. Put just a dollop on each cookie center. Makes about 7 dozen cookies.

WITH no crystal ball at hand for peering into the future, I decided to do the summer gift show in Los Angeles to see what was in the store for us between now and Christmas.

I feel I should mention the quality of accessories in comparison to last year's show... superior!

And with that I shall bring you up to Christmas on what you might find under the tree.

Hippie art is on the wane with the exception of a few posters. I hesitate to mention the surfeit of poster art in the market... I don't think there are enough walls in the world. Some whimsical posters... some colorful and the most interesting of all, Polish imports! I think in retrospect the Polish posters are exciting because they make no attempt to be cute but rather are stylized independent. Holladay International is the representative to be thanked for the refreshing touch.

Much Indian, South American and New Mexican weaving will fill the walls, sofas and beds. Nature's bright colors predominate as opposed to the past season's sombre autumnal tones.

Still rising is Scandinavia in its always superior crystal and enamelware. Italia, a Finnish firm, produces some markedly beautiful stemware and vases from a somewhat new technique.

And dishes to delight the diner flow into the United States from all over the world.

Whimsical fruit and desert plates, just a bit naughty to some eyes, were designed in England and made in Germany especially for the American market by Peter Breck Corp. Air line drawings meld vegetables, fruits, wine bottles and naked ladies in a plate absolutely guaranteed the last drop of food will be eaten.

Peter Breck also includes fine enamelware in beautiful colors and lively accessories pretty enough for the table. A new touch was the triple bottom which gives the enamel the slow cooking characteristic of heavy iron pots.

Souper Server is the giant egg which also goes from oven to table and comes with server, tray and ladle. Naturally the colors are egg shell white or egg shell brown. The Souper Servers also shrink to individual size. The table could provide a home for either size for soup or nuts.

Vandor Imports came up with the clever fruit holder - circles within circles in a pyramid shape. Apples and oranges fit snugly without touching. Good looking enough to be used as a centerpiece!

The plastic bubble chairs have inflated the market with all colors and sizes and come complete with patches and pump... shades of old car days!

The cost of these chairs is so minimal that they can provide a happy accent without painful spending. Even the children have their own size, thanks to the same Vandor Imports.

Japan is tapped for the accents at this same house and some snack sets have been cleverly copied from the French. One puzzled nie: La Petit Snack on the cup and La Palata Snack on the plate.

I checked each showroom for local outlets and they assured me all of the mentionables would be purchasable in Long Beach.

Merv Goes Network

dence his restaurant is so close to his theater — it's hard but not impossible.

"I'm calling it Pip's," Treacher's nickname," Griffin said. "He's just had two arterial operations and while he was recovering from them he caught hepatitis.

"That took nine weeks of convalescence but I'm glad to say it hasn't mellowed him a bit. He'll still turn his back on guests he doesn't like — when you've been in show business 50 years you don't have to hide your feelings. I got a letter from him reporting that the surgeons had put metal inserts into him and adding 'So you don't have to do hernia jokes about me any more.'"

Merv said: "I'll introduce him as 'My foreign friend for whom it's getting very hard to find new parts.'"

AS FOR the competition on the opposition channels — Merv thinks his show is just that much different. "We try to have one big star and surround him or her with interesting people," he said. "We've always used more of a blend of authors, personalities and politicians than the others. An awful lot of politicians made their debuts with us — Mayor John Lindsay of New York, Martin Luther King Jr., Averell Harriman, Henry Cabot Lodge. We also like to bring the same people back time and again so the audience knows their likes and dislikes.

"We use them like soap opera characters and deliberately aim for familiarity rather than novelty."

MERV, WHO started his show business career as a band singer (and popularized the song "I've Got a Lovely Bunch of Coconuts"), will stick to the reliable desk-and-sofa setup as the best way to involve his guests in the discussion. "It's proven itself," he said. "The solo face to face interview is more news than entertainment."

The unscripted nature of talk shows naturally leads from time to time to an unprintable or unmentionable word or phrase but Merv said these would be erased from the tape before it is broadcast.

"However," he said, "there's a lady lip reader Thirteen in Westchester who watches my shows. Her friends telephone her afterwards to find out if anything scandalous was uttered. She's always glad to oblige."

Beware the Superwoman

MY TELEPHONE rang. "Mrs. Weiss," said an urgent voice on the other end, "one of our PTA members is sick. Could you take her day in the school library tomorrow and she'll take yours next week?"

Suddenly the receiver felt heavy in my hand. I already had so much to do. "Let me check my calendar," I said. But I was just stalling for time.

My 7-year-old had just arrived home from school with a nose bleed. My toddler — cranky as usual — had just awakened from her nap and was calling me from her crib. I scrambled to take care of both and still get back to the phone with my calendar in my hand.

Somehow I made it. "It's OK," I told her. "I'll be there tomorrow." "Good. We knew we could count on you."

It was meant as a compliment and perhaps a year ago it would have made me feel noble and strong and outstanding. Now it just left me with a dull all-penetrating weariness. But I had no time to ponder this. I had committed myself again. And two children were calling me — each with a need I alone could fill.

In desperation I took the phone off the hook — the only voice I could silence. Then I plunged into my afternoon.

That night after the children were in bed I told my husband about the call from PTA library.

"Maybe you're doing too much," he said. "You aren't a superwoman."

I was shocked into silence. A superwoman? Not I.

"Go and get your calendar," he said, and dully I obeyed. Bob is an attorney and his advice is usually very succinct.

I stared at my calendar as if I'd never seen it before. Every square had something written in it.

In addition to one day a month at the PTA library I spent one day as volunteer secretary for Legal Aid Foundation. Somehow both of these days fell within the same week.

Then I drove for Girl Scouts (to my credit I had declined being co-leader) and to and from music lessons. Every Monday I spent at my husband's law office keeping his personal books. Also I had regular meetings of Lawyers' Wives club and the League of Women Voters.

Somewhere around all of this, I kept house, cooked meals and took care of three young children. What was left over I gave to my husband.

"No wonder I'm too tired to read at night . . ." I gasped.

"You've spread yourself too thin," he said. "And you probably aren't doing anything well. That happens to me sometimes when I have a trial going and an emergency comes up and then all my phone messages go unanswered for two days.

"But," he went on, "there's a difference between us. You are a free agent. There's nothing you have to do except run the house."

"But I just wanted to help out . . ." I began.

This I realized had been my downfall. I hadn't learned how to say "no." In my eagerness to do my share I had taken on too much. I had to rush to fit everything in and consequently I wasn't enjoying any of it. Instead of a joy it had turned into a burden.

"All right," I said firmly. "I'll find replacements for my volunteer work."

And I did.

The next day at PTA Library — my last — was spent with a fellow volunteer. Oh, hers included teaching Sunday School too but the pattern of the superwoman was glaringly obvious.

"If I take on one more thing I'll explode," she finished.

I laughed out loud. "You're trying to be a superwoman," I said. "Instead you should choose one outside activity and do it well. That's what I've done. After today I only work with the Scouts and keep my husband's books."

By Joan Talmage Weiss

"How do I do it?" she asked.

"It's easy," I said. "Just ask yourself where your love lies. Look to your enthusiasms and follow them. Not obligations. Not duties. Enthusiasms."

She was quiet the rest of our day together. But a week later she phoned me. I was already feeling much better — less harassed and less tired.

"I've got it all figured out," she told me. "I'm cutting everything out except Sunday School. That means the most to me."

"Bravo," I cheered. "Welcome to the ex-Superwoman Club."

We chatted a while. We agreed that it is all too tempting to cut our lives up into so many little pieces there is nothing left. But if we only do one or two extra things, and do them well, our lives — and those of our families — will be much happier.

I leave my telephone on the hook now. No coward's way out for me.

Any woman can merely fill her life. Only an intelligent and determined woman can simplify and order it.

Quaint and Curious

THERE EXISTS on the face of this earth an abundance of strange facts, lore, legend, a vast treasure trove of the unusual. There have been written, particularly in England of the last century, a goodly number of books on these matters.

There is an odd quirk in human beings which makes them thirst for knowledge of the strange and unusual. But too many books that would slake that thirst have been out of print, in these many years. A rare publisher sometimes springs into being, to rescue such works out of the undeserved obscurity in which they have languished. Such a publisher is Gale Research Company, Detroit.

Nicknames and sobriquets of the famous; curious surnames; curiosities of civilization; strange lore about the teeth; funeral customs, these and a host of other matters are grist for the mill of Gale Research and for Singing Tree Press, a division of Gale, in their noble pursuit of reprinting long unavailable books. Among their reprints:

Sobriquets and Nicknames, by Albert R. Frey ($14) was first published in Boston in 1887. From it we learn that "the Best of the Cut-throats" was Wellington, so-named by Byron. Confederate troops called Gen. Jubal A. Early "the Bad Old Man." Disraeli was "the Gay Lothario of Politics." And if you want to know who were "the Squint-eyed," "the Prince of Beggars," "The Limping Old Bard," to mention a few, this is the book to tell you.

Ludus Patronymicus, or the Etymology of Curious Surnames ($9.50) by Richard Stephen Charnock, first saw the light of day in London in 1868. There were no less than 14 families named Dull, we are told, in Philadelphia. There is the family name Deuce, a corruption of D'Ewes; Deadman, corrupted from Debenham; Human, from the Dutch hoogman, a tall man. There are even Honeybun and Honeybun, from Honeybourne.

Curiosities of Civilization, by Andrew Wynter ($9.50) was originally issued in London in 1880, and was the work of a man who loved to dig into the hush-hush and frequently sinister facts of life in Victorian England. He writes of the insane asylums, the adulterators of food, the various rackets of his day, and even about the habits of rats in city, field and on ships.

Our Social Bees: Or Pictures of Town and Country Life, by Andrew Wynter ($9.50). The good Dr. Wynter goes on to deal with the smog of London, the "commercial grief" of the funeral homes; the trade in human hair and other odd facts of life in London of the 1860s.

Folklore of the Teeth, by Leo Kanner ($12.50) was first published in New York, in 1928. Among some people, a toothache was treated by painting blood from the ailing man's mouth on a nail or peg, which was driven into a tree. The book tells of the strange things into which human teeth are made — jewelry, charms, medicines, amulets.

Anti-Hero

PAIRING OFF. By Julian Moynihan. Morrow, $5.95. Reviewed by Prof. David Peck, English Department, California State College at Long Beach.

Myles McCormick, the anti-hero of this delightful black comedy, is another in that long line of intellectual and paralyzed fictional characters stretching back through Portnoy and Herzog to Joyce's Bloom. Unsuccessful at love and librarianship, Myles is successful only in convincing us of the difficulty and bitter-sweet humor of contemporary life.

His story takes us through Boston (where Myles works sporadically in the Rare Book Room of the "Boston Free Library") to Ireland (where Myles escapes failure and finds love) but to little purpose. Myles is the victim of his own tale, for as static anti-hero he is unable to provide the central control and strength needed in this rambling tragic-comedy. Other characters — a dying mistress, the library director, a Greek gangster — constantly threaten to disrupt the shaky order of the novel.

Moynihan's story is nonetheless rich in the musty lore of Boston and its libraries, and engaging in its stylistic evocations of life in New England and Ireland.

Terra's Neighbors

WORLDS AROUND THE SUN. By Lee Edson. Smithsonian Library-American Heritage, $4.95.

This sixth volume in the Smithsonian series of science books for the laymen is a handsomely illustrated introduction to elementary astronomy — an approach to understanding man's historic exploration of the solar system.

Findings of the pioneer astronomers, and their primitive but remarkable tools, are brought into perspective with the recent advances in research, brought about by giant telescopes, radio and radar signals, laser beams, spectroscopes and radiometers.

Other chapters summarize new facts about the sun, Venus, Mars, Mercury and the Jovian planets; Pluto, discovered in 1930 by Clyde W. Tombaugh at the Lowell Observatory in Flagstaff, Ariz.; and comets, meteors and asteroids.

Hell's Suburb

CAPTIVE CITY: Chicago in Chains. By Ovid Demaris. Lyle Stuart, p. 6-95.

The most violent gangster movie you ever saw, portraying the most rampant corruption, would be a pale imitation of what has been and is going on in Chicago.

This may sound like an exaggeration, but after reading "Captive City", one gets the feeling that Mr. Demaris took great pains to avoid any hint of muckraking or overstatement.

The mere recital of the Chicago facts covers the entire gamut of story-theme scenarios that would deal with everything illegitimate the human imagination could conjure — murder, every style; "protection" in every business, industry, service, (legal and illegal); crooked elections; blackmail; extortion; fake bankruptcies; labor racketeering; bribery; syndicate gambling; controlled prostitution; organized hi-jacking; narcotics, from importing to pushing; loan sharking; counterfeiting; currency and tax stamps; etc., etc., etc.

In a straight, reportorial, "plain-facts" style — in what amounts to deliberate objective understatement, Mr. Demaris gets the reader to think and say to himself — "How could this possibly be in 1969? And why is government so impotent?"

Samuel Whitman

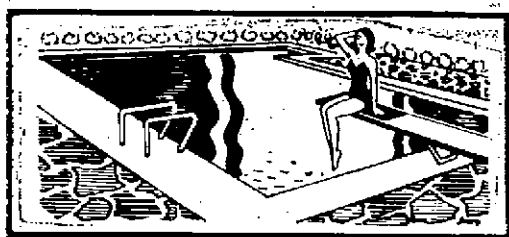

Cling to Warmth

SCIENCE IS NOT ENOUGH. By Vanevar Bush. Morrow, $1.95 paperback.

In our age of moon-landings, cybernetics, computers, etc., the danger of discounting basic humanistic qualities is a likelihood that must be confronted and dispelled at every turn.

That is the message one of our most renowned scientists bring us in the most "human" terms.

The "progress" that science can bring us is a sterile phenomenon, if we ignore the uniqueness of each individual; forget how wonderfully and fearfully amazing are our minds and bodies; how vital it is for the fulfilling of our humanity to realize we need each other and that we should not let go of those things that warm one human being to another. Smiles, touch, compassion — we can't have too much of these — "science is not enough." — Samuel Whitman

LORD MALQUIST AND MR. MOON. By Tom Stoppard. Knopf, $4.95.

A nobleman of the old school and a mild but fanatical man unite to oppose the spirit of the times and get involved in a series of hilarious adventures, but with ominous overtones. The novel raises serious questions, as does Stoppard's play "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are Dead."

WELLS FARGO: An Illustrated History. By Noel M. Loomis. Clarkson N. Potter, Inc., $12.50.

The story, with over 300 illustrations, many of them rare, of the express company that was both mail service and bank to the gold fields and from its foundation in 1852 was a symbol of faith. This is the exciting story of a company that delivered wives to California and soldiers to the Indian wars.

Anticlotting Drugs Fail To Halt Heart Attacks

By Ben Zinser

Southland Magazine Medical Science Editor

LONG-TERM USE of anticlotting drugs in the wake of an acute heart attack does no good, a new study contends.

The study, conducted by doctors at the University of Oregon Medical School and the Portland Veterans Administration Hospital, shows that anticoagulants do not reduce death rate or heart-disease complications.

Subjects in the study lived in metropolitan Portland, Ore. Continuous anticoagulant treatment was begun eight weeks after acute heart attack to see if this approach would prolong life, prevent complications or reduce illness.

It did none of these things, according to a report in the New England Journal of Medicine.

APPLICATION of low-intensity direct electric current is beneficial in tient to the anesthetic halothane.

A new finding has rekindled the debate over the safety of the drug.

One researcher, at Boston City Hospital, has found a possible association between rapid severe liver failure and multiple exposure to halothane.

Even so, another physician, Dr. Joseph F. Artusio Jr., professor of anesthesiology at Cornell Medical College, New York, contends that the advantages of halothane far outweigh what he calls a remote risk of liver damage.

Dr. Artusio says the value of halothane has been established and he advocates its continued administration.

One reason many doctors like halothane is that it doesn't explode and electrical equipment can be safely used in the operating room.

ORAL CANCER resistant to standard treatment — surgery, irradiation and drugs — sometimes will come under effective control if frozen by a cold probe.

The "cold knife" technique is technically known as cryotherapy.

Dr. Jerrie Cherry, formerly of Johns Hopkins Medical School, reports that patients are treated with the cold probe on an outpatient basis twice a week until the tumor sloughs off. No recurrence of cancer has taken place during follow-up periods ranging from six to 14 months.

In each treatment session, a standard cold probe is used to freeze tumor tissue for three minutes. After allowed to thaw, the tissue is then frozen again for three minutes. Tissue temperature at time of the procedure is around one degree Fahrenheit.

The report is in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

A STUDY involving patients in 23 Veterans Administration Hospitals has cast doubt on the value of preoperative irradiation in lung-cancer patients.

Preoperative irradiation produced a poorer survival rate than surgery alone in the study group.

The finding is surprising, for studies by a number of researchers in recent years have indicated that preoperative radiation has increased survival rate by making more tumors treatable by surgery.

The VA study, which involved hundreds of patients, suggests that preoperative radiation may even have an adverse effect.

One question that arises is that radiation delays time of surgery — perhaps to the detriment of the patient.

the treatment of skin ulcers such as bedsores, researchers have found.

Investigators at the University of Missouri School of Medicine applied the constant electrotherapy technique to 75 skin ulcers. The majority had proved resistant to standard treatment given earlier — but all but one patient "responded well" to the new treatment.

Gratifying results were observed in 34 patients (40 per cent). Here ulcers healed completely. Range of improvement in the remaining 41 treated ulcers varied from 97 per cent to zero.

The mechanism of how the electrotherapy works is not understood.

Details are in Southern Medical Journal.

BABIES born by breech delivery have a lower IQ at the age of 5 years, a British survey indicates.

The finding is reported by Dr. J. K. Russell, head of the department of obstetrics and gynecology at Princess Mary Maternity Hospital in Newcastle-on-Tyne, Great Britain.

However, the doctor notes:

"Let me say straight away, I am acutely aware of the fact that environment, as the child grows up, has a profound effect on its IQ."

tates from community to community. This way, the tracks pay only while the machines are in use, and the upkeep is minimal.

American Totalizator Co. has found that by keeping a few machines in constant use instead of building expensive new ones, maintenance problems, such as lubrication, really aren't problems at all. A machine that sits idle for nine months seems to develop more difficulties than one that is in use all year.

By the time you pick up your ticket, wondering if you purchased the right one, things are well under way. And, for the next 20 minutes or so, until the winner of the race is posted and declared official, activity for the track doesn't stop, even though you have time to relax and enjoy a drink while studying either the horses in the next race or the colorful Damon Runyon characters that always seem to find their way to race tracks — even in Orange County.

The computers have received and recognized your wager, as well as hundreds of others in a short span, and are busy figuring the odds at which the horse will finally be listed.

These odds are changed every 85 seconds and are determined by the bettors, not by the track, as many patrons assume.

Fans bet against each other, not against the track. The track acts only as an agent for holding the wagers and takes the responsibility of paying the winners. For this service, the track is paid a commission, which is deducted before any money is paid winning ticket holders.

The odds are determined by how much money is wagered on each horse. The more money that is plunked down on a horse to win, the lower the odds will be, while a horse with relatively little "action" will pay a higher price — but to fewer persons.

Eighty-five per cent of all money wagered is returned to the public. That means that 15 cents of every dollar (30 cents of your $2 bet) is deducted.

However, the state collects .0747 cents of every dollar or nearly half of the 15 cents that is taken off the top, and the tracks gets the rest, of which less than two cents is profit. The rest goes for overhead, such as salaries, charity, purse money, local taxes and payment of labor and equipment.

The computers take all this into consideration and figure odds by reading the memory banks where the bets are stored and recorded and then totaling all wagers to win, place and show on all 10 horses in the race and calculating the odds.

THE COMPUTERIZED odds are then flashed to the tote board in the infield of the track to give the betting public a fairly accurate idea of what each horse will pay.

Besides the odds, the amount of money wagered on each horse individually to win, place and show is posted, as well as the total amount for all 10 horses in the three separate pools.

The odds are guaranteed to be accurate by American Tote, whose own staff, not that of the track, runs the control room.

American Totalizator Co. is paid for the use of the equipment on a sliding scale basis of the entire mutual handle, beginning at one-fourth of one per cent and decreasing from there as the handle increases.

American Totalizator Co., which has a West Coast office in Arcadia (the home of Santa Anita Race Track), pays the staff to monitor, interpret and maintain equipment. Therefore, the 12 men in the control room have no connection with the track.

While bettors are betting and computers are computing, a step into the next room finds relative quiet — until the race goes off and the ticket machines are electronically locked by the judges.

In this room, six track auditors plus a state auditor are busy figuring the payoff prices of the first three horses. The computer is doing the same thing and is rarely wrong, but it is double-checked, nonetheless.

An occasional mistake is found and the employees in this pari-mutuel department, the calculating room, managed by Bob Williams, take pride in the fact that they get to double-check a machine, when most jobs are just reversed.

While the winning ticket holders are being paid off with the money from the losing ticket holders, the cycle starts over again, but your $2 still has a long way to go before the night is over.

THE TICKET SELLERS report into a tight security area of the track, known appropriately as the "money room," prior to the first race and receive a $50 bankroll of $1 bills to take to each selling window, where each is stationed for all nine races.

Each totalizator machine has a mechanical counter on it that records how many tickets are sold from the machine on each race. The clerk is responsible for the $50 bankroll and for the amount of money corresponding to the amount of tickets sold. If he comes up short, or miscalculates, the money is deducted from his weekly paycheck.

The money collected on tickets sold is sent to the money room, headed by Dick Brandley, along with a sheet that tells exactly how many tickets on each horse have been sold. This information is recorded by the totalizator machine on prepared slips of paper, assuring no mistakes.

The money is sent to the money room by runners from all 175 sellers after each race, where it is counted by machines and the totalizator slips are double-checked to see if the correct amount ging and we felt as we did for soccer and hockey that it's worth doing, at least giving the public a chance to see and decide.

"Ten years ago most people wouldn't have known the name of a ranked tennis player. Now they do — just as they've learned the names of star golfers. Almost everyone has played tennis at some time. It's a fast-moving game and really worth watching. We're giving it an hour on Aug. 30 and two hours each of Sept. 6 and 7. That's five hours and I don't think it's ever had that kind of coverage here before.

"We've got knowledgeable commentators in Bud Collins and Jack Kramer, we'll use all the technical aids — slow-motion, stop-action and so on. We've got the tournament for five years and perhaps in that time we can build an audience of both sexes as we are doing — finally — in football."

MACPHAIL said there was no logic to national reactions to sports. Baseball caught on tremendously in Japan yet failed miserably in Italy. In Britain — where it started in the game called "rounders" — it is played only as softball. CBS, it will be remembered, tried and missed with soccer here though this is played around the world by more people than any other sport.

"We were premature," MacPhail said. "We tried to go big league with soccer too soon, and small crowds in big stadiums do not generate the excitement we saw on satellite relays of the great World Cup Matches. But we did accomplish one thing. More schools and colleges now play the game here, more soccer clubs have been established because of our coverage. And perhaps one day our pioneering will payoff in TV acceptance of the sport.

MACPHAIL thinks CBS will make money on its pro football season this season. It may come as a surprise to fanatics but few sports programs top a good situation series in the ratings and fewer sports make money for the networks. ABC paid $12 million for the rights to the 1972 Olympics and industry sources expect it will lose two or three million dollars on the deal. NBC is geared for a loss on its baseball contracts.

Nevertheless all three networks bid for the limited number of prestige sports events as essential to well-rounded programming and because of the possibility sports audiences may actually contain — as their promoters allege — a higher quality per capita viewer than ordinary shows. "They always says the chairman of the board is more apt to be watching golf than the ordinary workingman," MacPhail said.

He is dubious sports will ever make regular prime time material.

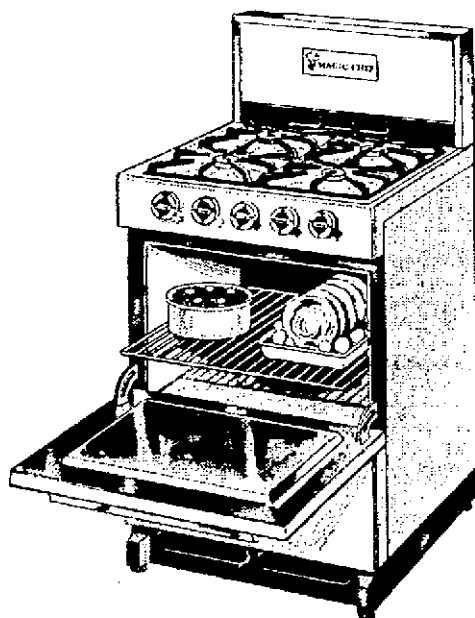

"Maybe they would if you could compress a football or baseball game into half an hour," he said.

Finish Fast to Keep Up Los Alamitos Track

of money, recorded by the machine, is turned in.

When all things are checked and double-checked, the money is placed in a locked cage, where it is dispatched back to cashiers by the runners to pay off winning ticket holders.

The cashiers, in turn, are responsible for the amount of money they handle and must account for it in much the same manner as the sellers.

Brandley, as manager of the money room, is in charge of balancing the books each night and despositing the money in the bank as well as withdrawing what is necessary. He handles more than a half million dollars each night.

After the money room, your $2 still hasn't been retired for the night, even though you may have cashed a winning ticket and received it back, plus a profit.

After all the tickets have been cashed, they are sent to another appropriately named place—the ticket room, where another series of checks and double-checks takes place.

Joe Gardner heads the ticket room and his crew sorts every ticket turned in by who sold it and the type of ticket it is—$2 win, etc.

With a carbon copy of the slip that was sent to the money room from the totalizator machine, the ticket room staff knows exactly how many tickets were sold on each horse in the race and the total number that should be cashed in.

WINNING TICKETS can be cashed any time up to 60 days after the meeting closes, and this can complicate matters when patrons leave the track without collecting their money, waiting until the next time they show up to take care of it.

That creates an "outstanding" list, much the same as in your checkbook. The tickets that are cashed, after they have been bundled and dated, are stored for the required 60-day period and then destroyed.

The checking of tickets requires more than just counting to see if everything corresponds. A major part is checking for counterfeit tickets or forged ones that may have been cashed.

"We've been lucky so far," Gardner

says, knocking on wood, "but I've seen some ingenious forgeries."

It's nearly impossible for a counterfeit ticket to slip through, however, as each race has a special code consisting of six letters or figures or symbols or a combination of all of them printed on each ticket.

The totalizator machine that the ticket seller works is coded by a supervisor prior to each race and the code is printed on a special fibrous paper when you ask for the number of the horse.

Each race has a different code and the same code will never come up twice during the entire 78 nights of racing.

Some of the ways of forgers include altering the number of a losing ticket so that it appears as the winning number; printing an entire new ticket with the correct code and number; or taking a losing ticket from the same race with the correct code, lifting the old number off with a razor blade and inserting the winning number after it has been cut off another ticket from a losing race.

The ticket room is the last stop and final check of the seller and the cashier as well as the public, where it all began.

Any mistakes found after the public has collected its money are paid for by either the seller, the cashier or American Totalizator, which has one outstanding debt that it is still in the process of settling.

On a daily double at a northern track several years ago, the wrong price was posted and the cashiers started paying off winning tickets.

A double check revealed that the posted price was too low and the payoffs were immediately halted until the correct price was verified to be higher.

But some 200 winners had already been paid the incorrect lower amount and were asked to file claims which would be settled at the end of the meeting. More than 5,800 claims were filed by persons seeking the difference of the two prices paid to the 200 unfortunates.

The case is still in the courts and each individual is going through a process of elimination that may still take several years before all is settled.

A costly mistake? Certainly, but only one to mar a near-perfect record.

Los Alamitos, being a quarter horse racing facility, is a smaller operation than, say, Hollywood Park, where thoroughbred racing, the most popular form of horse wagering, takes place.

Nonetheless, more than 200 employees and millions of dollars of machinery are involved when you place your $2 bet at the track. The figures can be tripled or quadrupled at one of the thoroughbred tracks.

It's something to keep in mind the next time you find yourself with a couple of spare dollars and a free evening. Two dollars can, and literally does, go a long way at Los Alamitos—and it's all so pleasant if you happen to be a winner.

Teens in Action Young Man's Thoughts

JAY BERK likes his days filled with people, guitar music and weather—not just good weather, but any weather.

His thoughts, like the times, tumble quickly from one stage to another. He doesn't pretend to have answers. When he doesn't know, he says he doesn't know. But he doesn't pretend not to have questions.

The 17-year-old Wilson High School graduate, who lives at 290 Granada Ave., Long Beach, hopes to live with as little pretense as possible, even if honesty makes him the oddball.

His views:

Right now I'm playing the guitar. I bounce from one thing to another. First, it's solid folk music, then, 12-bar blues. I've been playing for about three years—just getting on kicks, not much work. But now I've decided to get better at it. I might even want to join a group.

Youth, who hasn't said something about it? But I guess there's always something more to say. In the 1920s, they all got a whoop out of tossing rocks at windows and playing practical jokes. Youth couldn't care less about that kind of thing today. Maybe, we're too self-conscious to have a good time. I don't know.

Authority just isn't accepted as being right automatically. That's a big difference. We don't say "Yes, sir" just because the guy has gray hair, a bankroll or a gun. I know that I've had a soft life. I've never been hungry, but a lot of people have been. This bugs me. It should bug the guys with guns and money, too.

—Treating people as people, that's what being human is about. Americans have to learn to take the importance out of Things and make People—neighbors, even strangers—important and meaningful. Okay, a lot of people scoff at this like it was just sop. To me, their scoffing just shows how far they've come from the human place.

—Militant political action has its place, but I've never seen much good in it, from a personal point of view, that is. It just seems to flip people off. And that's too easy to do. It doesn't mean anything to win an argument of words.

—The people who have power today had to fight for it. Some of them went hungry. They think that what they've got now is heaven. Then I come along and say it's all wrong. Sure they get mad. The men who have power—politicians, businessmen—usually aren't evil. They're trapped and get angry when you show them how trapped they are.

—Opportunity to be what you want to be hasn't increased much in the last 100 years. It's just that the controls have become more subtle. If you cross society's line, you've had it. But two undergrounds are growing. A lot of people are ignoring the system and being themselves. And a lot of other people are hypocrites—acceptable in public, but radical in private. Would the cops ever be surprised if they knew how many "over 30" pot parties there are.

—I really don't consider myself an American in terms of heritage or values. The stress in America is so much on duty—duty to country, duty to your job, there's only one duty I recognize—duty to other humans. And even that's not so much a duty as it is a normal behavior.

—The differences between generations shouldn't always be phrased in terms of age. It isn't his age that makes a man square. It's his mind. A good mind, a human mind of feeling, can be found in a person of any age.

—The so-called "new generation" is a fake-up of the press. Our concern with what's happening in our own lives, on our own front porches, doesn't mean we don't pay attention to history or the future. We've still got a lot to learn about how things work. But so does everyone, because things aren't working too well. —Steve Stowe.

Going With the Wind

By Eleanor Avery Price

THE Mustang may have had the wide open range, the colored desert, the canyons, and the cool forest rooms in which to thunder in wild freedom (Mustang is Spanish for running wild), but he had some forebears who enjoyed none of this. He descended in main part from North African Barbs, Livestock horses and Andalusians brought from Spain by settlers of the New World.

There were no horses in America when Cortez first put foot on our shore. In fact, the Indians were frightened of the white conquerors charging them on backs of horses, and undoubtedly some Indians thought that Spaniards were half man and half horse. It didn't take long, however, before their watchful eyes took on a glint of excitement when they saw man and horse walking around separately.

Thus started horse stealing by Indians, and the more horses they could obtain, the richer they were considered. Both Indians and horses love freedom, so together they roamed northward and westward, finally deciding that the West was best of all. Here the horses grew even sturdier as they sped over billowing oceans of grass and million bed steep canyon walls. Some, of course, stayed from the Indians and formed bands each marshaled by a stallion.

The open range horses did not all stay solid in color. They adapted to their environment of cliffs and desert flowers, and appeared as pintos and piebalds.

The exceptionally wild

Rare American Mustang of Medicine Hat coloration and 'glass' eyes is Taric, owned by R. A. Bock, Costa Mesa.

horses were found to amuse cowboys in rodeos. They needed no bucking strap to arch them into contortions until they pitched the cowboys into the dust. So great did the Mustangs love their freedom that few barbed wires could hold them, and some even pitched themselves headlong over cliffs rather than be caught.

Many beautiful things come to an end, and one is the horse going along with the wind. Cowboys, the ugly noise of rifles, corralling airplanes and hungry mountain lions have made the Mustang almost a vanishing American. Most of the wild horses left in our country are known as "broomtails," scrawny animals but still with a desire to remain free.

There are fanciers breeding Mustangs, so the breed itself may never die completely, but they will probably remain stable horses, show horses, and mounts for capable persons. The standard says the ideal Mustang is between 13.2 hands and 15 hands high. Body is short coupled; very muscular, deep barrelled, with a neck that crests. Although any color is accepted, I'm told that the rare Medicine Hat coloration with "glass eyes" is one of the best. Pictured is such a stallion named Taric. Owner is R. A. Bock of Costa Mesa.

Address of the American Mustang Assn. Inc. is P.O. Box 9243, Phoenix, Arizona.

MANNO'S Pizza Den and Terrace Room, 5607 E. South St., Lakewood, offers a touch of Italy without the touch of indigestion which sometimes accompanies Italian cooking.

The secret obviously is in the sauce. Joe Manno's kitchen has a mastery over herbs, spices and tomatoes, and the artistry is reflected in the quality of the dishes he sets before his customers.

I dined at Manno's on a Friday night. The hour was lalish but the dinner traffic was still heavy. The restaurant has become one of "the" places to dine. Indeed, one of the aficionados at the next table was heard to say that his "only regret is that Manno's is closed on Mondays."

My choice was veal parmigiana. It was delicious, yielding gently to the cutting edge of my fork. The dish was served piping hot and rested on an individual wooden tray.

Manno's had prepared me for the delight of the veal parmigiana by teasing the taste buds with a bowl of minestrone, garlic bread and tossed salad. Even the preliminaries leave one well fed and satisfied. The entree is a bonus.

The atmosphere at Manno's is pleasant and conducive to lingering long over after-dinner coffee. The staff is attentive to the slightest drop in the coffee cup level, and one is made to feel at home among friends.

We left reluctantly — at 11 o'clock. All the way home my wife spoke glowingly of the spaghetti she had selected, and I kept interrupting with praise for the happy combination of veal, parmesan cheese, bread crumbs and delicate tomato sauce.

All that — and ravioli, too — made my cup runneth over with satisfaction. But not my plate. Within the bounds of good table deportment I left very little for the dish washers to do.

You'll like Manno's. So will your digestive tract and taste buds.

WALTER SCOTT'S Personality Parade

Want the facts? Want to spike rumors? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y., 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

NIXON AND ROCKEFELLER.

Q. Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's recent trip to Latin America—wasn't it part of a Nixon scheme to ruin Rockefeller politically? Don't these two guys hate each other's guts?—I.H., Milwaukee, Wis.

A. Rockefeller's Latin-America trip was a disaster. It damaged the Rockefeller image, brought death and destruction to several countries. Nixon and Rockefeller do not belong to a mutual admiration society, but politically Rockefeller is no longer any threat.

Q. How long has the U.S. military been in Vietnam?—Frederick Jenkins, Chicago, Ill.

A. On July 15, 1950, the first U.S. military mission arrived in Saigon for liaison with the French forces fighting Ho Chi Minh. We have been in Vietnam ever since.

Q. In the Steve McQueen movie, Bullitt, who did all those fantastically dangerous chase sequences, McQueen or a double?—Peter Young, Dallas, Tex.

A. Stuntman Bill Hickman was the true star of the chase sequences.

Q. Sen. Joe Tydings of Maryland (1) is just as rich, handsome, intelligent, and well educated as Sen. Ted Kennedy. Why isn't Tydings prominently mentioned as a possible Democratic Presidential candidate? He has just as much sex appeal as Teddy.—Ann Watkinson, Havre de Grace, Md.

A. Senator Tydings, 41, is not as wealthy as Senator Kennedy—$3 million vs. $10 million—but he is brighter than Senator Kennedy, and unlike Kennedy, avoids situations which are open to embarrassing interpretations, such as Senator Kennedy's recent accident in Edgartown, Mass. What Tydings needs is a publicity buildup.

Q. I've been told by a very good source that Jackie Kennedy's sister, Lee Radziwill, has had her face lifted, her nose re-hobbed, the whole works. Can you supply details?—E.H., McLean, Va.

A. Lee Radziwill's nose was broken in a car crash several weeks ago. She and her 9-year-old daughter, Tina, were admitted to the plastic surgery unit of Queen Victoria Hospital in East Grinstead, England, for repair and reconstructive therapy.

ELIZABETH TAYLOR AND HUSBAND, RICHARD BURTON.

Q. Is Elizabeth Taylor retiring from films, or is this just another publicity gimmick?—Helen Ann Andrews, Mobile, Ala.

A. Elizabeth Taylor is not a well person. She never wanted to become an actress in the first place. It was her mother who pushed her. Elizabeth has been working since the age of 12, is now 38, tired, rich, unenthusiastic, and overweight.

Q. Is it true that Richard Nixon owes his election to the oil moguls and is therefore determined to protect them tax-wise? Is it true that the oil industry gets away with murder in this country? Just for once, why don't you try telling the truth?—L. Thomas, San Antonio, Tex.

A. The oil industry, it is estimated, contributed from $2 to $3 million to Richard Nixon's Presidential campaign. With its 27½ percent depletion allowance and its tight control of oil imports which permits rigged prices for gasoline, the oil industry, tax-wise, is the single most favored industry in the nation. Whether Congress can stem the rising tide of opposition against the oil industry from the public that wants oil to pay its fair share of taxes is problematical.

Q. James Brown, the king of soul music, was recently involved in a paternity suit. Who filed it, and isn't Brown married?—Lois Gilligan, Atlanta, Ga.

A. Mary Florence, former president of the James Brown Fan Club, filed a suit in Sacramento, Calif., claiming Brown as the father of Michael Brown, born Sept. 7, 1968. Says millionaire Brown, a native of Macon, Ga., married and the father of five: "I am appalled that such a charge would come about. I have never had any intimate relations with her."

Q. Is it true that America's dogs are better fed than America's people?—Ann Brown, Providence, Ky.

A. Yes, according to many authorities, including James Corbin, of the Ralston Purina Company, providing the dogs are fed commercially prepared food. Such food is nutritionally well balanced, which is not true of the average American's diet.

Q. Sean Connery, the British actor who plays James Bond in the movies—is he really as bald as a billiard ball?—Vivian McCready, New Haven, Conn.

A. Connery is plenty bald and has to wear a hair-piece in films, but he is not completely bald. He still grows hair around the back and sides.

SEAN CONNERY LINES UP A PUTT.

Q. I would like to know if the U.S. Air Force used any napalm bombs in the Korean War. I would like to know how many napalm bombs we have used in Vietnam. I would like to know who authorized for use in Vietnam napalm, chemical defoliants, and tear gas.—Hank Johnson, San Jose, Calif.

A. No napalm was used in the Korean War. From 1963 to March, 1969, we dropped approximately 4 million tons of napalm in Vietnam. Lyndon Johnson was President of the U.S. when napalm, chemical defoliants, and tear gas were authorized for military use in Vietnam.

"Young lion," rifle in hands, leaps over gasoline-fed fire. Arab boys are preparing for war with Israel.

Hand to hand: boy at left, nicknamed "Castro," is only 6. "Che Guevara," his opponent, admits to 8.

ARAB KIDS TRAIN FOR WAR

■ In most elementary schools around the world, the physical education course is a happy diversion from classroom to sports—baseball, cricket, foot races. But not in the Arab refugee camps of Jordan. There the "young lions" of El Fatah—the guerrillas dedicated to wresting Israel from the Jews—grimly learn karate and judo, how to handle guns and knives, how to face up to fire without fear. Boys as young as 6 switch from books to bayonets under the coaching of adult members of El Fatah. They're drilled intensively both as individuals and in groups. Literally, these little hoys of Jordan are majoring in war.

Against background of bleak Jordanian hills, this "guerrilla cub" practices his risky commando tactics.

Close order drill is part of curriculum. Boys shout anti-Israel slogans as they march at double time.

What kind of people buy a new Pontiac LeMans at this time of year?

The Wide-Track Family for '88: Grand Prix, Bonneville, Brougham, Executive, Catalina, GTO, LeMans, Custom S, Tempest and Firebird, Pontiac Motor Division.

Smart people. Very smart people.

Sure. They've had a thing for LeMans since way last September.

Styling that won't quit. Wide-Track stance. Big, comfortable bucket seats.

And they've given more than a little thought to their choice of power. America's strongest OHC Six (standard).

Or one of the two great V-8s you can order.

But, above all, they've been patient. Waiting for just the right time. For the best possible deal. Now their wait is over.

They're our kind of people. Smart. Very smart. Maybe you? Find out at your local Pontiac dealer's. Soon.

EDITED

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

HELP WANTED In 1948 the Federal government decided to permit each taxpayer a $600 individual exemption. At that time the median family income in the U.S. was $3031, and the $600 tax exemption represented 20 percent of the family's income.

The median family income in this country has jumped to $8017, so that the $600 tax exemption is now reduced to 7.5 percent of the average family income. Many legislators, among the most prominent of whom is Sen. Stephen Young of Ohio, believe that the $600 tax exemption for individuals and dependents should be raised proportionately to $1000 or $1200.

Certainly it costs more than $600 a year to clothe, feed, and otherwise support a teenaged daughter, especially one who's been sent off to college.

BODY RHYTHM Businessmen and tourists think nothing of breakfasting in London, then flying to New York in time for a late lunch. But scientists point out that while it is relatively easy for a traveler to reset his watch, it is far more difficult for him to reset the timing system of his body.

Without time for rest and readjustment, a body that has been air-propelled into a new time zone will not function at par.

Many body processes operate in rhythm patterns adjusted to the 24-hour cycle of a day and a night. These are called circadian rhythms. External stimuli such as lightness and dark and temperature changes act as timing mechanisms for our established patterns of eating, sleeping, working, and resting.

Throw the circadian rhythm out of whack by losing or gaining hours via jet travel, and the traveler finds that he wants to sleep when it is time to wake, to work when it is time to rest.

An experiment by the Federal Aviation Administration shows that it takes eight days for a man's heart-rate to synchronize with the local time after a flight from Rome to Oklahoma City.

Organizations that require top physical and mental performance from their employees should allow recuperation or adjustment time following long air flights.

The International Civil Aviation Organization in Montreal devised a formula which takes into account travel time, departure and arrival times, and time zones crossed. Under this formula, an employee traveling from Rome to New York receives 1.2 days' rest. If you're flying from Montreal or New York to Karachi, India, you need 2 and a half days' rest.

Tourists making long overseas flights might follow these suggestions: (1) Avoid heavy eating and drinking while adjusting to a new environment, (2) take moderate exercise and a warm bath to induce sleep rather than use sleeping pills.

THE JOHNSONS HAVE SIGNED WITH CBS AND SUBSIDIARIES.

LBJ TO CBS Lyndon B. Johnson has never been known as a shy, retiring violet. During the first six months of the Nixon Administration, Johnson said nothing for public consumption except that he was not going to rock the Presidential boat by becoming a Monday morning quarterback. His former press secretary relayed the mixed metaphor, and the press kept its distance.

Johnson's first nationwide public exposure this year occurred during the Apollo 11 launching ceremonies. He appeared opposite Walter Cronkite on a CBS-TV interview.

The Columbia Broadcasting System has not only purchased the broadcast rights to Johnson's memoirs but has signed him to appear on TV from time to time for the discussion of public issues.

CBS made a similar deal with the late President Eisenhower after he left office, and Johnson is continuing the pattern. Best guess of the Johnson deal: $25,000 per telecast, $50,000 per year.

CBS also owns the publishing firm of Holt, Rinehart & Winston, and it is to this subsidiary that both Mr. and Mrs. Johnson previously sold the rights to their memoirs and diaries, each for a reported $1 million. The first volume of President Johnson's memoirs is scheduled for release in May of 1970. The diaries kept by Lady Bird Johnson during her five years in the White House will be published one year later.

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

BECAUSE OF VOLUME OF MAIL RECEIVED, PARADE REGRETS IT CANNOT ANSWER QUERIES ABOUT THIS COLUMN.

HELP WANTED In 1948 the Federal government decided to permit each taxpayer a $600 individual exemption. At that time the median family income in the U.S. was $3031, and the $600 tax exemption represented 20 percent of the family's income.

The median family income in this country has jumped to $8017, so that the $600 tax exemption is now reduced to 7.5 percent of the average family income. Many legislators, among the most prominent of whom is Sen. Stephen Young of Ohio, believe that the $600 tax exemption for individuals and dependents should be raised proportionately to $1000 or $1200.

Certainly it costs more than $600 a year to clothe, feed, and otherwise support a teenaged daughter, especially one who's been sent off to college.

BODY RHYTHM Businessmen and tourists think nothing of breakfasting in London, then flying to New York in time for a late lunch. But scientists point out that while it is relatively easy for a traveler to reset his watch, it is far more difficult for him to reset the timing system of his body.

Without time for rest and readjustment, a body that has been air-propelled into a new time zone will not function at par.

Many body processes operate in rhythm patterns adjusted to the 24-hour cycle of a day and a night. These are called circadian rhythms. External stimuli such as lightness and dark and temperature changes act as timing mechanisms for our established patterns of eating, sleeping, working, and resting.

Throw the circadian rhythm out of whack by losing or gaining hours via jet travel, and the traveler finds that he wants to sleep when it is time to wake, to work when it is time to rest.

An experiment by the Federal Aviation Administration shows that it takes eight days for a man's heart-rate to synchronize with the local time after a flight from Rome to Oklahoma City.

Organizations that require top physical and mental performance from their employees should allow recuperation or adjustment time following long air flights.

The International Civil Aviation Organization in Montreal devised a formula which takes into account travel time, departure and arrival times, and time zones crossed. Under this formula, an employee traveling from Rome to New York receives 1.2 days' rest. If you're flying from Montreal or New York to Karachi, India, you need 2 and a half days' rest.

Tourists making long overseas flights might follow these suggestions: (1) Avoid heavy eating and drinking while adjusting to a new environment, (2) take moderate exercise and a warm bath to induce sleep rather than use sleeping pills.

THE JOHNSONS HAVE SIGNED WITH CBS AND SUBSIDIARIES.

LBJ TO CBS Lyndon B. Johnson has never been known as a shy, retiring violet. During the first six months of the Nixon Administration, Johnson said nothing for public consumption except that he was not going to rock the Presidential boat by becoming a Monday morning quarterback. His former press secretary relayed the mixed metaphor, and the press kept its distance.

WOMEN PILOTS

There are 70 women in the U.S. today who hold air transport ratings from the Federal Aviation Administration. Approximately another 1700 hold commercial licenses, while an additional 500 are licensed flight instructors.

In spite of legislation which forbids job discrimination on the basis of sex, the airlines refuse to hire women as air transport pilots.

Why?

According to the U.S. Department of Labor, "Reasons for lack of women airline pilots seem to center around special requirements established by the airlines, such as flying hours logged, physical size and stamina, as well as too few qualified candidates for selection."

There are 28,000 U.S. pilots flying major airlines, but not a single woman. The only female allowed in the cockpit of a major scheduled airliner is the stewardess.

The Soviet Union, however, and other Communist-bloc nations have had women pilots flying scheduled airlines for years. In Western Europe, Scandinavian Airlines System boasts the only woman pilot flying passengers for a major airline.

The major reason U.S. airlines refuse to hire a woman transport pilot is the lack of passenger confidence.

Explained one aviation executive: "How confident would the average passenger feel when told that the pilot of the plane was a female. Would he balk? Would he ask to be transferred to another flight? Confidence in the safety of airlines is what we've tried to build for years."

Women declare that the "confidence factor" is merely an "alibi," that the 10,000 women who have been certified as private pilots in this country are the equal of men, that women should be given the opportunity to prove themselves as airline pilots.

One woman, Jan Dietrich, 41, who has been qualified for such work by the FAA has brought suit against World Airways of Oakland, Calif., which turned her down despite her high test ratings.

JAN DIETRICH, A LICENSED PILOT—BUT.

SEX JOKE

Is there no end to the salacious material from which motion pictures are currently being fashioned? Betty Box, a prominent film producer in England, has just paid $100,000 for the film rights to Percy, a novel scheduled for publication in November.

Percy is the story of one man's search to discover the owner of the sexual organ given to him in a transplant operation.

In the novel, the leading character bribes a hospital attendant to determine the identities of all the dead men in the mortuary who served as possible donors at the time of his operation. He then sets out to trace the women who knew these men.

Miss Box describes the novel by Raymond Hitchcock as "an incredible detective story."

"I know people are saying that this film cannot possibly be made...but it can be made and it will not be salacious or sniggory...It will be a comedy with sex, not a sex film...It is the intrigue, the situations and the tracking down of the women that really make it. It will be a question of building and maintaining suspense to the end."

REVIVAL

Is there any way to revive a flop movie? Take a film like Star, with Julie Andrews. It was the major cinema disappointment of 1968. It cost approximately $15 million to produce and to date has returned only $3 million at the box office.

Apparently American audiences do not care about a British music hall star named Gertrude Lawrence on whose life the film is based. Audiences also find the picture far too long.

Twentieth Century-Fox quietly removed Star from release on July 1st. It cut 35 minutes from the film, originated a new campaign for its promotion, plans to place the production back in release in October under a new title, which will probably be Gertie Was a Lady.

In its shorter version at regular box office prices instead of road-show admission rates, Star under its new name might yet make a few bucks. Twentieth Century-Fox, even with eventual sales to television, will lose money on two bombs, Dr. Dolittle and Star, but the company has two surefire money-makers upcoming in Hello Dolly! with Barbra Streisand, and John and Mary with Mia Farrow and Dustin Hoffman.

JULIE ANDREWS IN A SCENE FROM 'STAR.' $15 MILLION FILM WILL BE CUT, RETITLED AND RERELEASED.

Artificial Grass Is Greener

Tired of watering the grass? Mowing the lawn? Pulling up weeds? How would you like to vacuum a lawn which is all-year green and virtually indestructible?

Artificial turf boasts all these virtues. If current trends continue, ersatz turf will eliminate the weather factor from athletic contests, and wrenched knees from football.

Although most people still prefer old-fashioned lawns of natural grass, athletic teams throughout the nation are buying themselves fields of artificial turf.

At first, the football pros complained that it just wasn't the same. "Now," says Joe Namath, the New York Jets' hero, "everybody likes it better than regular grass."

Artificial turf prevents rain from turning football games into mud baths, summer sun from baking golf courses yellow. Tennis courts can be rolled up and moved, and baseball grounds can quickly be re-marked into soccer fields. With only an occasional vacuuming and wash-down, the fields wear well, drain and dry rapidly.

Fewer injuries

An added advantage is the 80 percent injury reduction on artificial football fields. On regular turf, cleats frequently get locked into grass and ground, causing falls, twisted knees and sprained ankles. This practically never occurs on the new artificial turf. Football players report that traction and maneuverability are excellent on synthetic turf.

A field of the ersatz grass consists of a carpet of plastic grass bonded to a base of asphalt or concrete. The weave and thickness of the plastic is especially designed for each sport.

Artificial turf is coming into its own all over the country. In Comiskey Park, Chicago; Municipal Stadium, Seattle; on the football fields of Indiana State University, Hofstra University, Boston University, the University of Washington, at the Los Angeles Tennis Club, in the courtyards of apartment houses, in motion picture studios, on patios and backyards.

There are also in existence 50 tracks of synthetic turf, including those in Rome's Olympic Stadium, Mexico City, Athens, Greece; Paris, Tokyo, Germany and Switzerland. In operation, too, are 200 basketball courts of synthetic turf.

The pseudo-grass first gained prominence in Houston's Astrodome. To reduce glare, the Astrodome was shaded, which left the field without the necessary sunlight to grow grass. Monsanto, the St. Louis chemical company, rushed to the rescue with its Astro Turf and 8 places a Start[®] can can go.

Or, how our orange flavor breakfast drink can add zip to your life

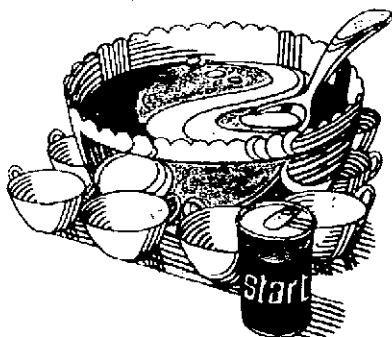

Go to work. Start's not a juice or juice product, so no defrosting's necessary. Good reason to take a Start break at the office. Keep the drawer locked, though. People know a good thing when they taste it.

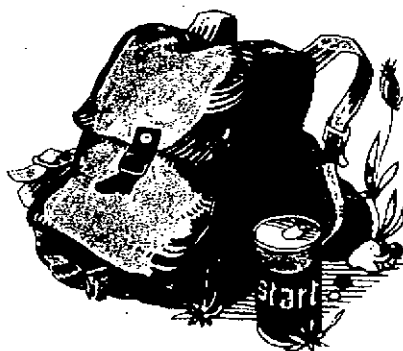

Go to lunch. Put a vacuum bottle of Start in each kid's lunch box. The kids will get more Vitamin C than orange juice gives them, plus taste that turns them on.

Go glazy. Start makes a crazy glaze for hams. Roast a 2 or 3 lb. ham. About 30 minutes before ham is done, combine 8 tsp. Start, 3 tsp. brown sugar, 2 tsp. water, 1/4 tsp. ground cinnamon, 1/4 tsp. ground cloves. Spread over ham and finish roasting, basting occasionally with glaze.

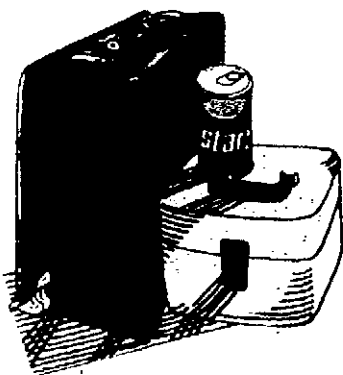

Go punchy. Make a swinging punch with Start. Combine 1 can of Start, 1 cup cranberry juice cocktail and 2 1/2 cups ginger ale or club soda. Pour over ice cubes in punch bowl. Makes about 10 servings.

Go camping. Pack great-tasting Start with your gear. Or stow it aboard your boat. One light-weight can makes 32 ounces of delicious drinking. (Incidentally, that's 8 more ounces than you'd get from the regular 6 oz. frozen orange juice can.)

Go fancy. Company coming? Here's an ideal last-minute dessert. Combine 3 tsp. Start crystals and 1 cup Log Cabin Syrup in saucepan, simmering 3 minutes. Serve over ice cream. Groovy.

Go tripping. Traveling abroad? An orange-flavor breakfast drink may be hard to find. Smuggle along a few cans of Start. Seeing the U.S.A.? Check into your motel with a can of Start and enjoy its tart-sweet taste in your room each morning.

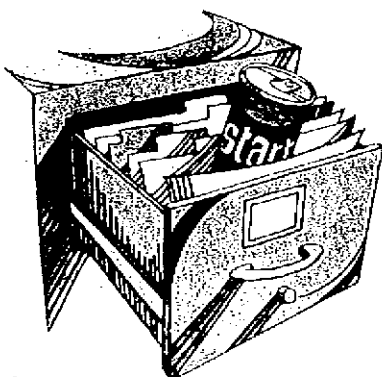

Go to breakfast. A Start can can go lots of places, but a good place to start using it is at breakfast. It's so easy to fix you can do it with your eyes closed. Sneaky way to get a few extra winks.

rolled it out under the dome.

This was in 1966. Not long after, Minnesota Mining came out with a similar product named Tartan Turf, which is used on the football fields of the Universities of Tennessee and Wisconsin.

$250,000 per field

Artificial turf is not cheap. Astro Turf and Tartan Turf run about $2.50 per square foot or $250,000 and up for a football field. Upkeep is minimal. The yearly cost of maintaining a football field of synthetic grass is about $5000 compared to $25,000 and more for a field of natural grass.

Although athletes now appreciate the plastic turfs for esthetic and safety reasons, there's no denying that it's not the same old game. Baseballs bounce faster and higher on the stuff. At the Olympic Track Stadium in Mexico City, new records were set in all but one of the running events under 1500 meters.

It follows, of course, that artificial turf will make field conditions uniform and competition more exact. Since no athlete likes being at a disadvantage, pretty nearly all will clamor for home fields like those on which they compete. With so many fields consisting already of synthetic turf, chances are excellent that the rest will follow in time.

Giving a hotfoot

Both manufacturers of artificial turf are concerned with making their product viable. Boston University football players, suffer from hot feet on their new field, because artificial turf retains heat more than grass. The possibility of special turf-proof shoes is therefore being investigated.

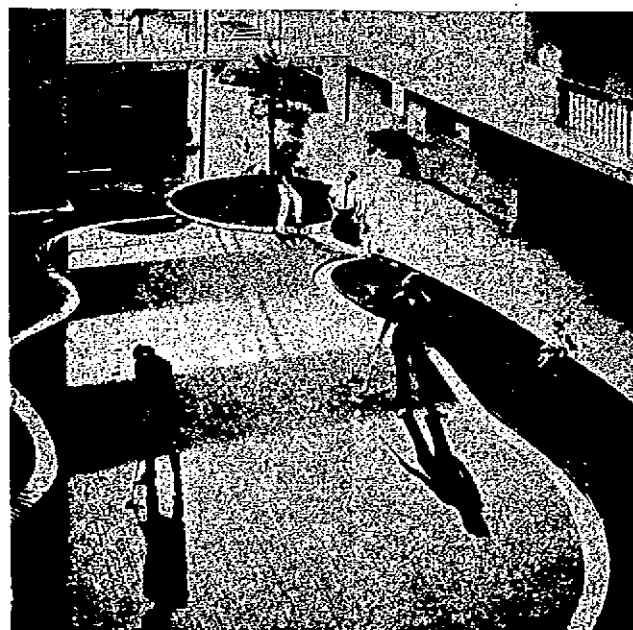

Monsanto and Minnesota Mining guarantee their turfs for five years and will replace any section that shows greater than one percent wear. The equivalent of more than 100 football games have been played on the Astro Turf of Seattle's Municipal Stadium without the slightest indication of damage.

How good are the chances of synthetic turf replacing natural grass in home lawns? Tex Schramm, president of the Dallas Cowboys, says, "By 1975 you will have an artificial lawn surrounded by artificial flowers and shrubs. No more mowing the grass. No more watering. An hour or two of maintenance per year, and you'll have a prettier garden than you have now."

Nature lovers reply to that declaration with one word, "Baloney."

In any event it will take time for the public, like the athletes, to get accustomed to the change on their home-grounds. Without crabgrass and crawling insects, it just won't be the same. Besides, what are homeowners supposed to do on weekends?

This synthetic putting green (shown on cover) is part of a California apartment complex, whose inhabitants give it a lively workout.

Here is a beneficial exercise for the back, one of several described in new book.

Oh, my aching back!

■ One of the most persistent and nagging ailments that bedevil Americans is low back trouble. Indeed, the term "slipped disc" and the lament, "Oh, my aching back," have worked their way into our language.

The principal causes and treatments of low back trouble are thoroughly discussed in a new book, Help For Your Aching Back, written by Dr. Harvey P. Kopell, one of the nation's leading orthopedic surgeons, in collaboration with Dr. Nancy C. Kester. Because we believe that Dr. Kopell's book will be helpful to the many persons suffering from low back trouble, PARADE is offering it for only $1.

Dr. Howard A. Rusk, the expert on body rehabilitation, comments in an introduction: "Drs. Kopell and Kester have done a masterful job in discussing and putting in perspective the problems of the aching back, a condition causing more discomfort, loss of time from work and disability than any other. The sections on rest, sleep, sports and even sex are frankly discussed and make an important contribution."

A strong feature of the book, with illustrations, is a set of exercises that bring into play muscles that are too little used in our pushbutton age. So, for a valuable health aid, buy Help For Your Aching Back today.

Clergymen who help women to get abortions

by Sid Ross & Herbert Kupferberg

On a Thursday evening not long ago, a New Jersey woman, whom we shall call Mrs. Mary Smith, sat down by her telephone and nervously dialed 933-2937. Tensely she waited until she heard a female voice give a tape-recorded message: "This is the New Jersey Clergy Consultation Service on Abortion. You are being answered electronically and need only take down the name and phone number of one of the clergymen mentioned. When you call, tell either the clergyman or his secretary that you wish to make an appointment about a problem pregnancy."

Mrs. Smith, 48 years old and the mother of three children, one of them retarded, wanted an abortion desperately. Her doctor had refused to perform it because it would be an illegal operation. Instead he gave her the number of the clergy group, an organization of ministers and rabbis who, convinced that the laws are wrong, tell women where they can get abortions at reasonable fees and in relative safety.

A million a year

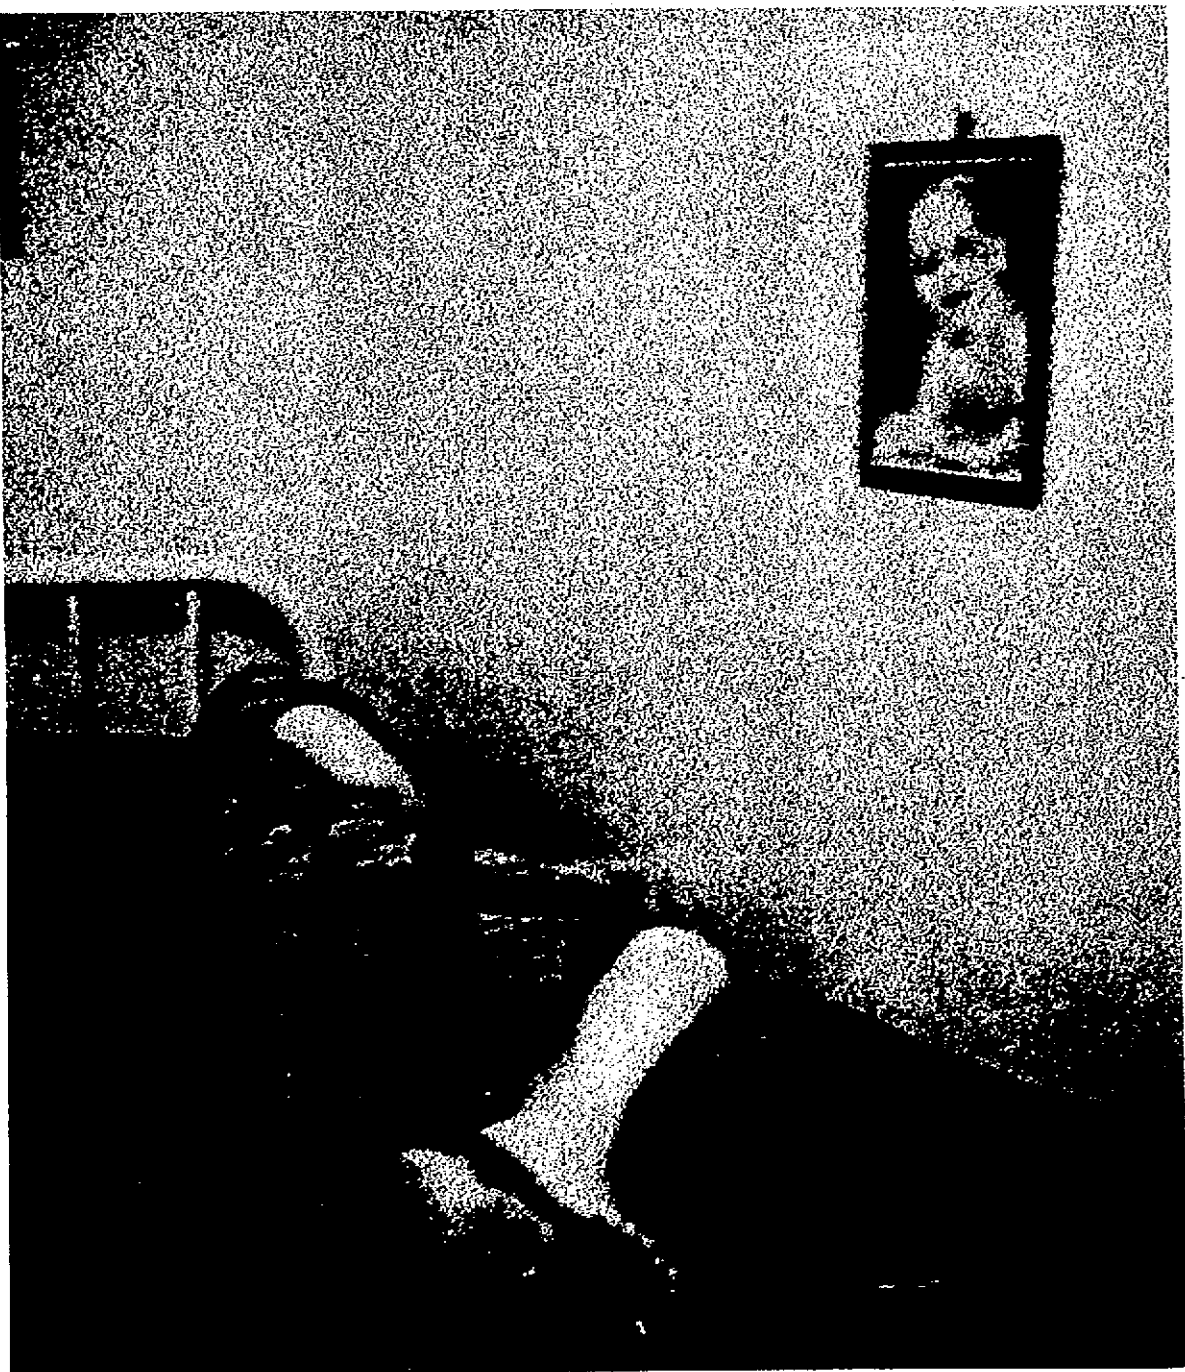

The case of Mrs. Smith typifies the rising controversy in the U.S. over abortion. Between 1 and 1.2 million illegal abortions are estimated to take place in the country annually. The total of legal or "therapeutic" abortions, permitted in most states only when they're essential to save the life of the mother, is only 10,000.

Attempts to liberalize abortion laws in state legislatures have run into stern opposition, spearheaded by Roman Catholics. Their basic argument is that human life is sacred from the moment of conception and that it is as murderous to kill an unborn child as a child after birth. Opponents also contend that abortion encourages promiscuity or that it represents a form of "genocide." The Knights of Columbus runs ads in newspapers and magazines asking: "If the unborn child can be killed, what about the aged, the sick, the handicapped? . . . Just 30 years ago the Nazis preached the same philosophy."

A determined battle in favor of abortion reform is being waged by women's associations, legal organizations, and

ABORTIONS CONTINUED

Protestant and Jewish church groups. Resolutions demanding either liberalization or outright repeal of present laws have been adopted by the American Baptist Convention, the General Convention of the Episcopal Church, the General Assembly of the Unitarian Universalist Association, the New York Federation of Reform Synagogues, and many others.

Proponents of total repeal of existing state laws contend that abortion should be a matter strictly between a woman and her physician. They want the law to require only that the operation be performed by a licensed doctor under proper medical conditions. Since a fetus in the early stage of pregnancy is incapable of survival outside the womb, they argue that it is embryonic and not true human life—and that removing it cannot be construed as "murder."

In addition to opposing the laws, some 200 clergymen are openly circumventing them by actually telling women how to go about getting abortions. The service had its beginnings two years ago when the Rev. Howard R. Moody, Baptist senior minister of the Judson Memorial Church in Greenwich Village, originated it in New York City. Today, the clergymen operate in separate organizations in six areas—New York, New Jersey, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Cleveland and Boston—and will soon be joined in four others—Detroit, Chicago, Connecticut and North Carolina.

The organizations are listed in the phone book. Few attempts to interfere with them have been made by the authorities. In the last two years they have counseled between 15,000 and 25,000 women, 95 percent of whom have gone ahead and had abortions.

'Doing God's work'

Says the Rev. John T. Adamczyk of the First Baptist Church of Moorestown, N.J.: "I feel deeply that what we are doing is God's work—helping people in trouble. We are not breaking the law. While our views on abortion are clear, what we do is counseling. We don't advocate or recommend abortions. We help people think their problem through, then they make their own decisions. If a woman or a family decides on abortion, we tell them what resources are available."

When Mrs. Mary Smith called the phone number of the New Jersey Clergy Consultation Service she was answered by a recording device located in the study of the Rev. Charles H. Straut Jr., of Christ Methodist Church, East Rutherford. Following instructions, she made an appointment with a Lutheran minister she selected from the list, but he had such a heavy schedule of similar cases that he turned her over to an associate, Rabbi Reeve Brenner of Princeton. She was instructed to bring a note with her from her doctor stating how far pregnant she was, since the NJCCS usually won't offer help on pregnancies over ten weeks—abortions in such cases are regarded as dangerous.

Rabbi Brenner, a young man like many of the clergymen in the NJCCS, was sympathetic to Mrs. Smith's plight. He told her that in her case the quickest place she could have an abortion would be Puerto Rico, that it would be performed by a licensed physician, that the doctor's fee would be $400 plus $10 for a blood test. He gave her a number in San Juan, Puerto Rico, to call when she got home, and she made an appointment for 8:30 a.m. the following Monday.

On Sunday night she boarded an economy flight at Newark Airport, went to a hotel in San Juan and tried vainly to get a few hours' sleep. The next morning she took a cab to a clinic in a lower middle-class area.

Already in the waiting room were two other women, a girl of 18 and a married woman in the 30s.

A nurse took her into a small room with two beds, an oxygen tank, and a folding chair. The only decoration was a photo of a baby on the wall.

Cash in advance

A young doctor came in and asked: "Are you the patient who wants something done?" Mrs. Smith nodded yes and handed him the note from her doctor about the length of her pregnancy. There were a few more questions, then the doctor left and the nurse returned. "The money?" she asked. Mrs. Smith handed her four $100 bills. A few moments later she was led into the next room with the first piece of modern medical equipment she had seen in the clinic—a spotless, gleaming gynecological table.

The operation, performed by the young doctor, lasted 12 minutes. Mrs. Smith had a brief rest on one of the beds, then took a cab back to her hotel. The next morning she flew home and wrote this note to Rabbi Brenner:

"I cannot express the gratitude that I feel for all the help and understanding you have given me. I am sure that many other women who have come to you or other members of the Clergy Consultation Service for aid feel the same way. The work you are doing is indeed blessed."

The NJCCS and similar groups in other states only occasionally refer women to doctors in Puerto Rico. They have contacts with physicians throughout the U.S., and keep close tabs on them. In fact, they maintain a blacklist of doctors they won't recommend because they have been found to be unlicensed, unsanitary or incompetent.

England and Japan

The various CCS units also provide information about doctors in England or Japan, where American women have been going in recent years for abortions. Japan, which has no restrictions on abortions, is a particular haven for women whose pregnancies have lasted longer than ten weeks and who therefore face a relatively difficult operation. Britain has had a boom in abortions since adoption of a law in April, 1968, permitting such operations on a very broad basis. Some 35,000 abortions now take place yearly in Britain, and about 5000 of these cases are said to be women from the U.S. Not all emerge unscathed: in May of this year an 18-year-old girl from Bay Village, Ohio, died in a London clinic under anesthesia prior to an abortion.

About the same time that the London death occurred, police in New York and Boston raided premises where abortions were being performed. A number of college girls and older women found there were alleged to have been referred by CCS groups. Several doctors were arrested, putting a temporary crimp in the clergymen's referrals.

Although many abortion-seekers are college coeds or other young, single girls, all available studies indicate that the majority are married women who, like Mrs. Smith, already have children but want no more. Many are in their 30's and 40's. The Rev. Farley Wheelwright, a Unitarian minister who serves on the Cleveland CCS, says that more than half his applicants are married, and that many of them are Catholics. The younger, unmarried girls, he claims, are usually of an unsophisticated type. "They're not promiscuous," he adds. "The promiscuous girls know how to take care of themselves." Other CCS clergymen point out that most women who come to them for help are of modest means. "The more affluent can often manage to get abortions performed by qualified physicians," says the Rev. Mr. Straut. "Our abortion laws are most oppressive of the poor and minority groups."

Despite past defeats, abortion reform measures keep being reintroduced in state legislatures. Few bills are debated more heatedly or emotionally. Earlier this year, New York State turned down a liberalized abortion law in a close vote after an impassioned address by a polio-stricken legislator who rose on his canes to declare: "A crippled child has the right to live." In Michigan an emotional plea in favor of reform was given by State Senator Lorraine Beebe, a mother of two, who revealed that she herself had once undergone a therapeutic abortion. She was warmly applauded—but the reform bill lost.

Heartened by such victories, the foes of abortion reform have tightened their ranks, insisting that any loosening of the law would be immoral and an act of discrimination against the deformed, the unwanted and the poor. Catholics are not alone in their opposition to reform; many non-Catholic clergymen and laymen also want present laws maintained. Some Negro leaders regard legalized abortion as a move to keep down the black population.

Eight states act

So far liberalized abortion laws have been passed only in eight states—Arkansas, California, Colorado, Georgia, Kansas, Maryland, New Mexico and North Carolina. Most of these reform laws follow a formula recommended by the American Law Institute, which permits abortion if pregnancy might result in the death of the mother, impair her mental health, is the result of rape or incest, or would lead to the mental or physical handicap of the child.

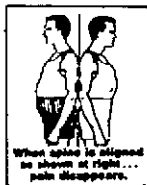

But most of the CCS clergymen say they would prefer outright repeal of existing abortion laws to the ALI code. They regard reform as inadequate and unsatisfactory, since strict application of the new laws has brought only small increases in the numbers of legal abortions performed in the states involved—and no apparent decline in the total of illegal operations. Besides, the ALI code does not apply to married women who want no more children or to unmarried women unwilling to bear an illegitimate child. Until these cases, too, are covered, the CCS intends to stay in business, and its phones are likely to go on ringing.

Nationwide Consumer Testing Institute reports:

Lark's Gas-Trap filter reduces certain harsh gases more than twice as much as ordinary popular filter brands.

Latest average figures on gas reduction for Lark and 13 ordinary filter brands as certified by the Nationwide Consumer Testing Institute.

(Based on the average of Lark and of the 13 leading cellulose-acetate filter brands.)

Surprised? We're not. We've spent years in research and millions of dollars developing one of the most effective filters yet discovered—one that reduces "tar," nicotine and gas, effectively.

And that's why we're not surprised that an independent research company certified Lark's Gas-Trap filter best for gas reduction.

Cucumbers and Beauty

by ANA MAHER

Every woman, at some time in her life, faces the spectre of an aging skin. Most women never solve the problem, and finally become resigned. A fortunate few find the answer and are rewarded with a complexion that remains fresh and youthful all their lives.

Eight years ago, I had this skin problem. Nothing very serious, but when I took my mirror over to a bright light, I could detect evidence of dryness and faint little lines in those areas where wrinkles have a tendency to show first. And I didn't like it. I knew that these were danger signals that warned of an aging skin.

I was also very bewildered. I had always taken the best care of my skin. I used expensive night creams, lotions and highly touted astringents. So I tried other creams, with no improvement. Finally I became resigned. After all, everybody gets older and most of us show our age.

Then one day I had a visit from an elderly widowed neighbor. This charming lady was about seventy, but she had the most beautiful, moist, youthful skin. I remarked about it and mentioned my own skin problem.

She told me she used a marvelous cream which had been formulated by her late husband, a physician, and that she made it herself. "Try it," she said, and then she left and returned with a jar of this cream.

So I tried using my neighbor's cream.

In only three weeks, I began to see a marked improvement. My skin was fresher, clearer, smoother. After two months, my former dry, dull skin was revitalized. The lines and puffiness had been eased away. My skin now had a youthful, almost translucent quality. I was thrilled with my neighbor's formula.

For six years, this kind lady kept me supplied with this cream. And I want to tell you that my skin was more vital and younger looking than it had been when I first started to use it, six years before.

Then my neighbor died suddenly—and with her went that wonderful cream and its secret ingredients. I was saddened by the loss of a good friend—and dejected by the loss of a miracle cream. Her family told me that her personal papers revealed no formulas of any kind. I was desperate. But I did have three jars left from the last batch she had made.

So I took the cream to one of the best known analytical cosmetic chemists. The cost of the analysis was enormous, but I got what I wanted. I had the wonder cream formula.

It has a base of pure cucumber juice, two super-moisturizers and three natural lubricants. It also contained Vitamins A and D and a special component to keep the cucumber juice fresh. My chemist told me that the formula consisted of only safe, pure ingredients—no hormones, estrogens or steroids.

I made a batch of cream for myself, following the chemist's instructions. Then my friends and relatives began using it. And in every case, the results were absolutely astounding.

Soon friends began insisting that the cream should be made known and available to all women, since the problem of aging skin is universal.

So my cream was put on the market a year ago, with the financial help of an uncle. It is called Cucumbe Frost. The same wonderful results experienced by me, my friends and relatives were repeated time and time again by women all over the country. I have in my file hundreds of letters from grateful women telling of the remarkable results obtained with Cucumbe Frost.

Treatment is not a complicated ritual. I don't have time for that and the chances are you don't, either. You apply Cucumbe Frost at bedtime. Leave it on all night. It feeds, protects and nourishes your skin while you sleep.

I know what Cucumbe Frost can do for you. Therefore, I offer you this UNCONDITIONAL GUARANTEE. Try it. See for yourself in your own mirror how, after a few treatments, Cucumbe Frost helps revitalize dull, dry, aging skin. How Cucumbe Frost helps ease away lines and puffiness. Many women wrote me of astonishing results after only two weeks. Some take longer. But I say this to you: If, for any reason, you are not delighted with Cucumbe Frost—return the unused portion to me for a complete refund. No questions asked.

You now have the opportunity to have a vital, youthful, lovely skin—at no risk. Cucumbe Frost can be purchased only by ordering it directly from me. Simply send your name, address and $5.00 (cash, check or money order) to:

Bring The Bloom of Beauty To Your Complexion

Every day your complexion can grow a little lovelier, lavishly cared for with a remarkable tropical moist oil which has the skin-cherishing ability to help capture and maintain the precious bloom of true complexion beauty.

The fine, fair promise of skin beauty is initially determined deep down under the surface, where the tiny oil and moisture reservoirs establish a delicate balance by releasing just the right amounts of perfect, natural nourishment to keep the complexion soft, supple and gloriously alive.

Cosmetic researchers have constantly borne in mind this basic understanding of the human skin in their efforts to find ways and means to improve and cherish its most precious qualities. With the discovery of the tropical beauty fluid has come the realization that at last it is possible to assist nature in maintaining the flow of the skin's natural oil and moisture and help in every way to bring long-term youth and beauty to the complexions of women living in all the differing climates of the globe.

When the beautifying moist oil is lavished on your skin nightly before your sleep, and worn every day beneath your make-up, your complexion will benefit immediately from its isotonic action, which is calculated to take conserving fluids directly down to where they are most needed.

Being remarkably compatible with the natural fluids of the skin, this moist oil readily merges with existing reserves and helps boost the dwindling cellular levels so that the complexion is encouraged to regain its equilibrium.

The beauty fluid also helps to maintain the vital measures of moisture responsible for the dew-fresh appearance of a lovely complexion. It encourages the natural hygroscopic attraction of moisture from the surrounding atmosphere and sponsors the moisture-retaining ability of the tissues so that youthful freshness and radiance become wonderfully constant on the skin.

In America this unique moist oil is available from druggists as oil of Olay, a remarkable blend of precious elements that brings your skin its softest, smoothest bloom of beauty.

Beauty Skin-Care Consultants Recommend

To take advantage of the beautifying properties of this moist oil and to give your complexion smoothness, clearness and youthful loveliness, always smooth on a film of oil of Olay over the face and neck before applying make-up. Besides cherishing and beautifying, the Olay oil will insure that your make-up has a perfect matt beauty.

Areas where age-signs first begin to show need extra rich care at night. Massage oil of Olay over your throat and neck and tap it lightly into the delicate tissues around your eyes to smooth and beautify the skin.

To keep your lips soft and pretty, give them a generous quota of the beautifying moist oil when you do your face. This light film of oil of Olay will also act as a foundation for the smooth and lasting application of your lipstick.

The Easy Picnic

by Beth Merriman
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Sometimes it's fun to plan a picnic menu that requires no cooking at the picnic site. All of that has been done ahead of time. All that remains is to eat and enjoy. For digestion's sake, a vacuum jug of hot soup or hot coffee, or both, can be carried along to serve with the cold foods in the picnic basket. Remember that paper or disposable plastic dishes and cups make cleanup quick and easy when the meal is over

How to raise a brighter child

These new methods, based on the theories of famous physicians, educators and behavioral scientists, are simple and fun—and they can increase your child's I. Q. by 20 points or more! Start using them as early as possible—even right after birth!

Imagine a 21-month-old with a reading vocabulary of 160 words... a boy of four who enjoys teaching himself major number principles... a girl not yet four who reads at the third grade level! None of these children was born a genius. Yet, through the early learning concepts described in this remarkable new book—HOW TO RAISE A BRIGHTER CHILD—all are being helped to develop above-average intelligence and a joyous love of learning.

Now you can give your little pre-schooler the same happy advantages... and they may well last throughout your child's life. For according to recent research, a child's I. Q. level is not permanently fixed at birth. It can be raised—or lowered by 20 points or even more in the precious years before six, by the way you rear your child at home.

A "blueprint" for increasing your child's brain power—without "pushing"

In this wonderful new guide for improving your child's mind, author Joan Beck—herself a mother and widely known as an adviser and counselor to thousands of families through her syndicated column on child care—tells you about all the important new findings on early learning. Drawing on the concepts of many famous physicians, educators and behavioral scientists (including Dr. George W. Beadle, Nobel prize-winning geneticist and president of the University of Chicago; Dr. Paul Dunn, pediatrician and medical director of the Chicago Center for Achievement of Human Potential and Dr. O. K. Moore, professor of social psychology, University of Pittsburgh and creator of the "talking typewriter"), she shows you how to apply these practical methods to your child's particular personality and needs. Her guidance is designed to help you help your child right in your home—happily and easily—without pressure or "pushing."

Watch your child enjoy learning science, math, reading and much more!

You'll find hundreds of specific brain-building techniques in this book to help your child's mind develop—starting from birth and continuing on through the first six years. These are not formal lessons. Most are fascinating games.

Want your child to be more creative? Learn the 10 ways to spot creativity in your child—and 30 delightful ways to encourage it... see how the proper use of almost any common object can challenge your child's inventiveness... how simple questions he'll enjoy answering can train him to "think on his feet"... how a quiet family game will increase his imaginative powers... how a simple conversational technique will start him off on a lifelong "romance" with words.

Help your child acquire reading and language skills... let him master—at an early age—the skills that are the basis of almost all learning... from techniques that are fun! You'll find complete details and step-by-step methods to teach your child to read as early as 2 or 3 years of age... another section on the famous Montessori early training techniques and how you can use them at home... learn how your 2-month-old baby tries to communicate... how to introduce your 2-year-old to writing.

Give your child the ability to grasp more advanced ideas... help him get a head start on the principles of math, science, natural laws. For example, turn bath time into a series of exciting scientific experiments... use snack time to teach him number concepts such as multiplication and division... see how a common household item can give him hours of pleasure while he learns something of linear perspective, dimension, structure... how a sheet can start your year-old baby toward an understanding of spatial relations... how a knotted string can help your 3-year-old learn to tell time... how your child's favorite television shows can be used to help him deal with abstractions.

Give your child unusual powers of observation... your training can sharpen his perceptions, help him in every school subject he will ever take. You'll discover, for example, how some quiet little bedtime games will give your child the habit of acute listening... how a simple trick with your infant's room will delight him with his new surroundings... how an ordinary paper bag can develop your youngster's tactile sense while he has a wonderful time... how you can turn a visit to the supermarket into a fascinating exercise for all of his senses.

My Favorite Jokes

by Steve Rossi & Slappy White

EDITOR'S NOTE: Steve Rossi and Slappy White are a brand-new comedy team, the first such integrated act in show business history, and they're off to a fast and impressive start. For 11 years Rossi teamed with Marty Allen and the whole nation got to know them through their scores of TV appearances. Then late last year Allen and Rossi split up. Clever, dependable Slappy White is a show business Old Pro who never quite made it big. He may well do so now. Rossi and White already are working their way through such prestige bookings as the Royal Box at New York's Americana Hotel, Caesars Palace in Las Vegas and, on television, Hollywood Palace. Their material is as new as their act. Here is a sampling:

While we were appearing in Las Vegas, we went to a casino that was so swank, the dice had unlisted numbers. We were asked by a newcomer how often the red numbers came up. We told him: "As often as we played the black ones." ... Actually, the quickest way for some people to win the war on poverty is to lock up the bookies.

We played an engagement in a town so small, Howard Johnson had only one flavor. Returning to New York, the air traffic problem was so severe and we were stacked over the city so long, the plane became obsolete.

New York is the only town where the shortest distance between two points is always under construction.

We just bought one of those political dolls: You pull its string, and it talks out of both sides of its mouth.

The government has an effective solution for housing problems, just for veterans. It's called re-enlistment.

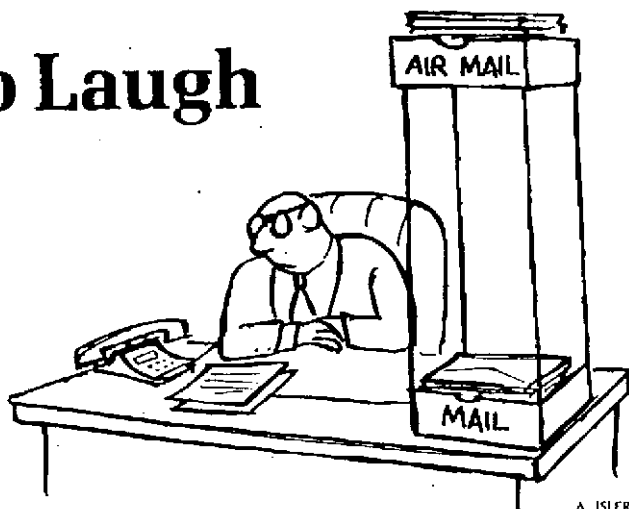

Wives make excellent baseball umpires, they never think a man is safe when he's out.

A couple we know once lived in a pretty exclusive location. It even had an unlisted zip code. Things became difficult, they went to New York and were growing desperate trying to find an apartment there. They finally found a place with a big sign in front that read: "Open Housing." They checked, and learned it meant all the windows were broken. They asked the manager if he took children. He replied: "No, only cash or traveler's checks."

A rich uncle died, and we all went to the lawyer's office for the reading of the will. He left $300,000 to his wife, $100,000 to his two brothers, and $50,000 to his sister. Then the lawyer continued reading the text: "And to my nephew Slappy, who always wanted to be mentioned in my will, here it is. I say, 'Hiya, Slappy.'"

An old friend visited, and we asked him how everything was. He moaned: "My house burned down and it wasn't insured; my wife got run over by an uninsured car and she's in the hospital; my son's in jail, and my daughter's on LSD." We said: "That's really tough. What are you doing now?" He answered: "Same old thing ... selling lucky charms."

But—just as your body RESPONDS MAGNIFICENTLY to the simple diet that fills your blood with potent power—so does your brain. In Dr. Martin's own words:

"There is an easy way out of this vicious circle, and fortunately it does not take too long. Usually a week or two after beginning the food-for-energy plan... MENTAL AND PHYSICAL SYMPTOMS DISAPPEAR." You bet those symptoms often disappear—for practically anyone of any age—because at last you are nourishing your blood—strengthening your mind and body, and HELPING your brain, glands and organs do the first-class job they can do for you. MARK TRAIL

by Ed Dodd and Tom Hill

Here is a beneficial exercise for the back, one of several described in new book.

Oh, my aching back!

■ One of the most persistent and nagging ailments that bedevil Americans is low back trouble. Indeed, the term "slipped disc" and the lament, "Oh, my aching back," have worked their way into our language.

The principal causes and treatments of low back trouble are thoroughly discussed in a new book, Help For Your Aching Back, written by Dr. Harvey P. Kopell, one of the nation's leading orthopedic surgeons, in collaboration with Dr. Nancy C. Kester. Because we believe that Dr. Kopell's book will be helpful to the many persons suffering from low back trouble, PARADE is offering it for only $1.

Dr. Howard A. Rusk, the expert on body rehabilitation, comments in an introduction: "Drs. Kopell and Kester have done a masterful job in discussing and putting in perspective the problems of the aching back, a condition causing more discomfort, loss of time from work and disability than any other. The sections on rest, sleep, sports and even sex are frankly discussed and make an important contribution."

A strong feature of the book, with illustrations, is a set of exercises that bring into play muscles that are too little used in our pushbutton age. So, for a valuable health aid, buy Help For Your Aching Back today.

Send $1 for "Help For Your Aching Back." Cash, money order or check to Parade, P.O. Box 28, Kensington Sta., B'klyn, N.Y. 11218. Print name, address, zip, allow 3 weeks.

Dog Nearly Itches to Death

"I thought we'd have to put Daisy to sleep, she suffered so from large itching sores. I had about given up trying things when I found Sulfodene. The itching stopped, sores soon healed, hair grew back. Bless you for Sulfodene," says Mrs. John Burnester, New Jersey.

Clergymen who help women to get abortions

by Sid Ross & Herbert Kupferberg

This woman has just had an abortion: Mrs. Mary Smith rests on a bed in a Puerto Rico clinic after undergoing an illegal operation.

On a Thursday evening not long ago, a New Jersey woman, whom we shall call Mrs. Mary Smith, sat down by her telephone and nervously dialed 933-2937. Tensely she waited until she heard a female voice give a tape-recorded message: "This is the New Jersey Clergy Consultation Service on Abortion. You are being answered electronically and need only take down the name and phone number of one of the clergymen mentioned. When you call, tell either the clergyman or his secretary that you wish to make an appointment about a problem pregnancy."

Mrs. Smith, 48 years old and the mother of three children, one of them retarded, wanted an abortion desperately. Her doctor had refused to perform it because it would be an illegal operation. Instead he gave her the number of the clergy group, an organization of ministers and rabbis who, convinced that the laws are wrong, tell women where they can get abortions at reasonable fees and in relative safety.

A million a year

The case of Mrs. Smith typifies the rising controversy in the U.S. over abortion. Between 1 and 1.2 million illegal abortions are estimated to take place in the country annually. The total of legal or "therapeutic" abortions, permitted in most states only when they're essential to save the life of the mother, is only 10,000.

Attempts to liberalize abortion laws in state legislatures have run into stern opposition, spearheaded by Roman Catholics. Their basic argument is that human life is sacred from the moment of conception and that it is as murderous to kill an unborn child as a child after birth. Opponents also contend that abortion encourages promiscuity or that it represents a form of "genocide." The Knights of Columbus runs ads in newspapers and magazines asking: "If the unborn child can be killed, what about the aged, the sick, the handicapped? ... Just 30 years ago the Nazis preached the same philosophy."

A determined battle in favor of abortion reform is being waged by women's associations, legal organizations, and

Protestant and Jewish church groups. Resolutions demanding either liberalization or outright repeal of present laws have been adopted by the American Baptist Convention, the General Convention of the Episcopal Church, the General Assembly of the Unitarian Universalist Association, the New York Federation of Reform Synagogues, and many others.

Proponents of total repeal of existing state laws contend that abortion should be a matter strictly between a woman and her physician. They want the law to require only that the operation be performed by a licensed doctor under proper medical conditions. Since a fetus in the early stage of pregnancy is incapable of survival outside the womb, they argue that it is embryonic and not true human life—and that removing it cannot be construed as "murder."

In addition to opposing the laws, some 200 clergymen are openly circumventing them by actually telling women how to go about getting abortions. The service had its beginnings two years ago when the Rev. Howard R. Moody, Baptist senior minister of the Judson Memorial Church in Greenwich Village, originated it in New York City. Today, the clergymen operate in separate organizations in six areas—New York, New Jersey, Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Cleveland and Boston—and will soon be joined in four others—Detroit, Chicago, Connecticut and North Carolina.

The organizations are listed in the phone book. Few attempts to interfere with them have been made by the authorities. In the last two years they have counseled between 15,000 and 25,000 women, 95 percent of whom have gone ahead and had abortions.

'Doing God's work'

Says the Rev. John T. Adamczyk of the First Baptist Church of Moorestown, N.J.: "I feel deeply that what we are doing is God's work—helping people in trouble. We are not breaking the law. While our views on abortion are clear, what we do is counseling. We don't advocate or recommend abortions. We help people think their problem through, then they make their own decisions. If a woman or a family decides on abortion, we tell them what resources are available."

When Mrs. Mary Smith called the phone number of the New Jersey Clergy Consultation Service she was answered by a recording device located in the study of the Rev. Charles H. Straut Jr., of Christ Methodist Church, East Rutherford. Following instructions, she made an appointment with a Lutheran minister she selected from the list, but he had such a heavy schedule of similar cases that he turned her over to an associate, Rabbi Reeve Brenner of Princeton. She was instructed to bring a note with her from her doctor stating how far pregnant she was, since the NJCCS usually won't offer help on pregnancies over ten weeks—abortions in such cases are regarded as dangerous.

Rabbi Brenner, a young man like many of the clergymen in the NJCCS, was sympathetic to Mrs. Smith's plight. He told her that in her case the quickest place she could have an abortion would be Puerto Rico, that it would be performed by a licensed physician, that the doctor's fee would be $400 plus $10 for a blood test. He gave her a number in San Juan, Puerto Rico, to call when she got home, and she made an appointment for 8:30 a.m. the following Monday.

On Sunday night she boarded an economy flight at Newark Airport, went to a hotel in San Juan and tried vainly to get a few hours' sleep. The next morning she took a cab to a clinic in a lower middle-class area.

Already in the waiting room were two other women, a girl of 18 and a married woman in the 30s.

A nurse took her into a small room with two beds, an oxygen tank, and a folding chair. The only decoration was a photo of a baby on the wall.

Cash in advance

A young doctor came in and asked: "Are you the patient who wants something done?" Mrs. Smith nodded yes and handed him the note from her doctor about the length of her pregnancy. There were a few more questions, then the doctor left and the nurse returned. "The money?" she asked. Mrs. Smith handed her four $100 bills. A few moments later she was led into the next room with the first piece of modern medical equipment she had seen in the clinic—a spotless, gleaming gynecological table.

The operation, performed by the young doctor, lasted 12 minutes. Mrs. Smith had a brief rest on one of the beds, then took a cab back to her hotel. The next morning she flew home and wrote this note to Rabbi Brenner:

"I cannot express the gratitude that I feel for all the help and understanding you have given me. I am sure that many other women who have come to you or other members of the Clergy Consultation Service for aid feel the same way. The work you are doing is indeed blessed."

The NJCCS and similar groups in other states only occasionally refer women to doctors in Puerto Rico. They have contacts with physicians throughout the U.S., and keep close tabs on them. In fact, they maintain a blacklist of doctors they won't recommend because they have been found to be unlicensed, unsanitary or incompetent.

England and Japan

The various CCS units also provide information about doctors in England or Japan, where American women have been going in recent years for abortions. Japan, which has no restrictions on abortions, is a particular haven for women whose pregnancies have lasted longer than ten weeks and who therefore face a relatively difficult operation. Britain has had a boom in abortions since adoption of a law in April, 1968, permitting such operations on a very broad basis. Some 35,000 abortions now take place yearly in Britain, and about 5000 of these cases are said to be women from the U.S. Not all emerge unscathed: in May of this year an 18-year-old girl from Bay Village, Ohio, died in a London clinic under anesthesia prior to an abortion.

About the same time that the London death occurred, police in New York and Boston raided premises where abortions were being performed. A number of college girls and older women found there were alleged to have been referred by CCS groups. Several doctors were arrested, putting a temporary crimp in the clergymen's referrals.

Although many abortion-seekers are college coeds or other young, single girls, all available studies indicate that the majority are married women who, like Mrs. Smith, already have children but want no more. Many are in their 30's and 40's. The Rev. Farley Wheelwright, a Unitarian minister who serves on the Cleveland CCS, says that more than half his applicants are married, and that many of them are Catholics. The younger, unmarried girls, he claims, are usually of an unsophisticated type. "They're not promiscuous," he adds. "The promiscuous girls know how to take care of themselves." Other CCS clergymen point out that most women who come to them for help are of modest means. "The more affluent can often manage to get abortions performed by qualified physicians," says the Rev. Mr. Straut. "Our abortion laws are most oppressive of the poor and minority groups."

Despite past defeats, abortion reform measures keep being reintroduced, in state legislatures. Few bills are debated more heatedly or emotionally. Earlier this year, New York State turned down a liberalized abortion law in a close vote after an impassioned address by a polio-stricken legislator who rose on his canes to declare: "A crippled child has the right to live." In Michigan an emotional plea in favor of reform was given by State Senator Lorraine Béebe, a mother of two, who revealed that she herself had once undergone a therapeutic abortion. She was warmly applauded—but the reform bill lost.

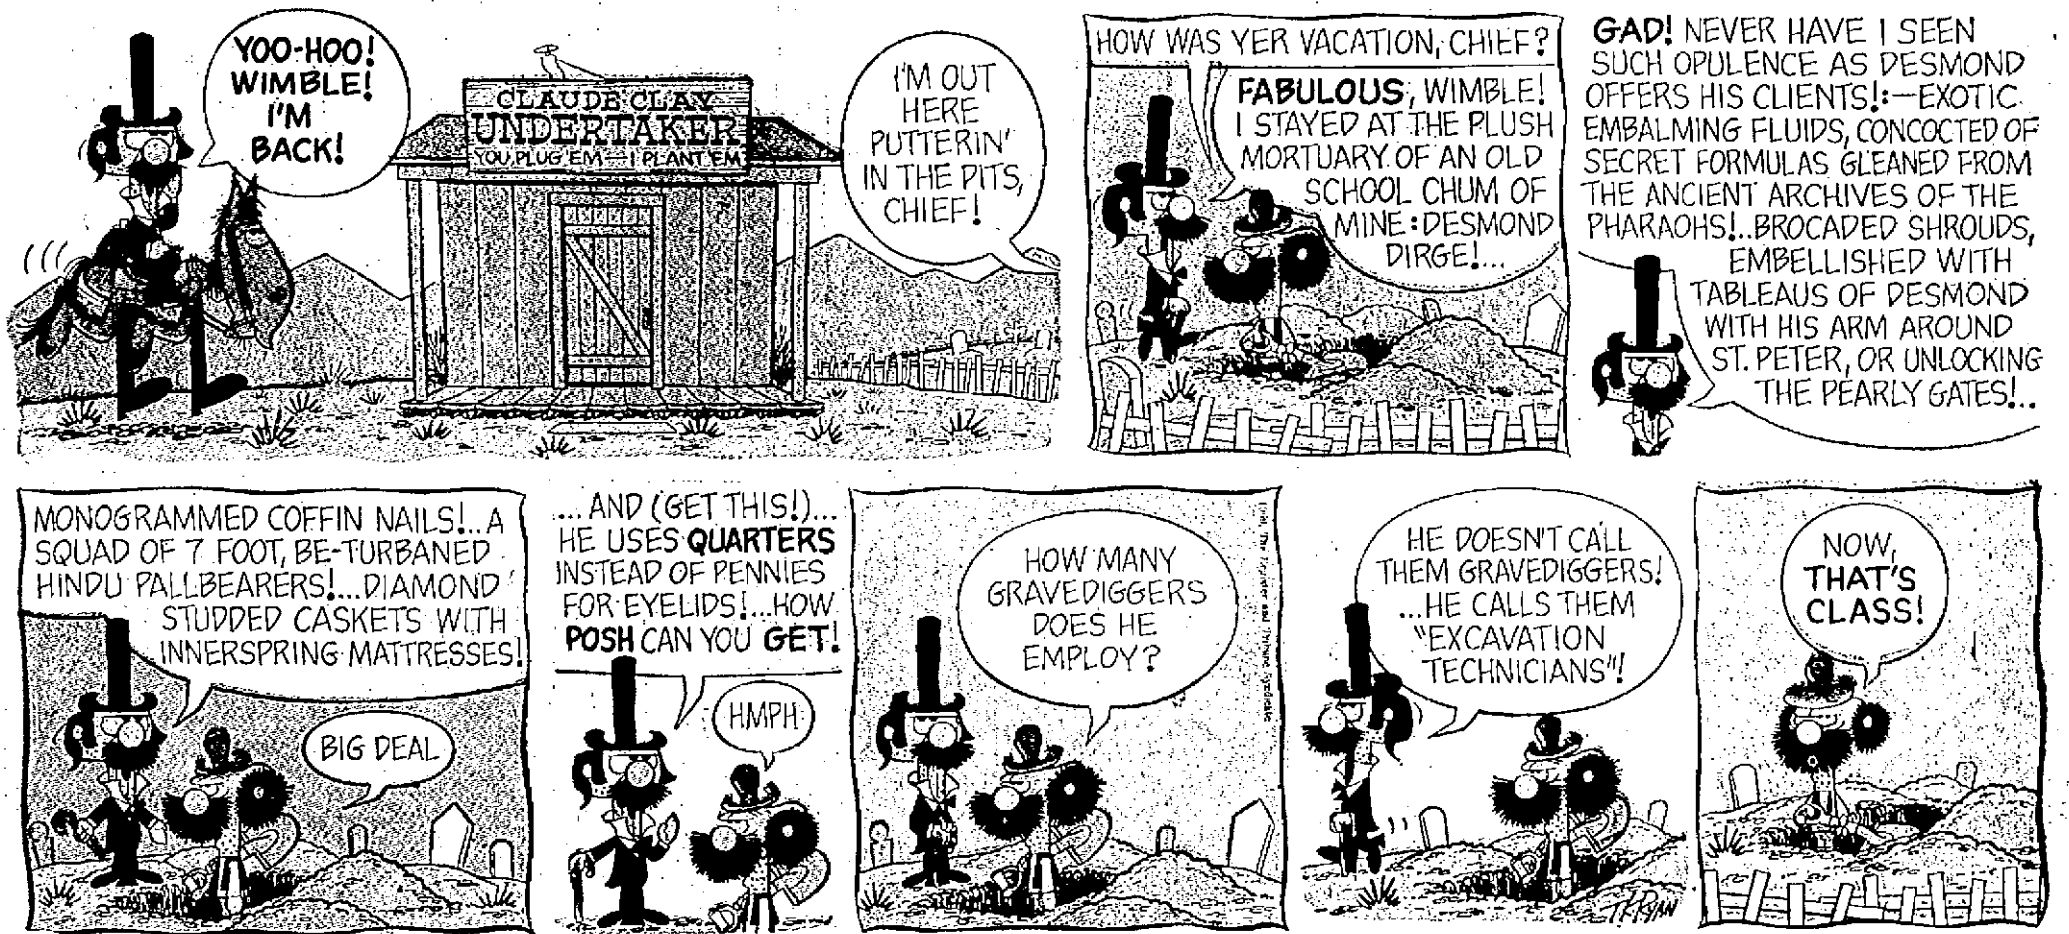

Heartened by such victories, the foes of abortion reform have tightened their ranks, insisting that any loosening of the law would be immoral and an act of discrimination against the deformed, the unwanted and the poor. Catholics are not alone in their opposition to reform; many non-Catholic clergymen and laymen also want present laws maintained. Some Negro leaders regard legalized abortion as a move to keep down the black population.

Eight states act

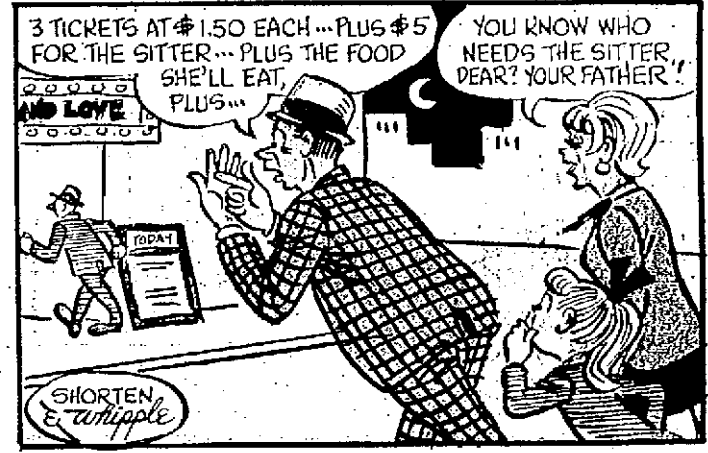

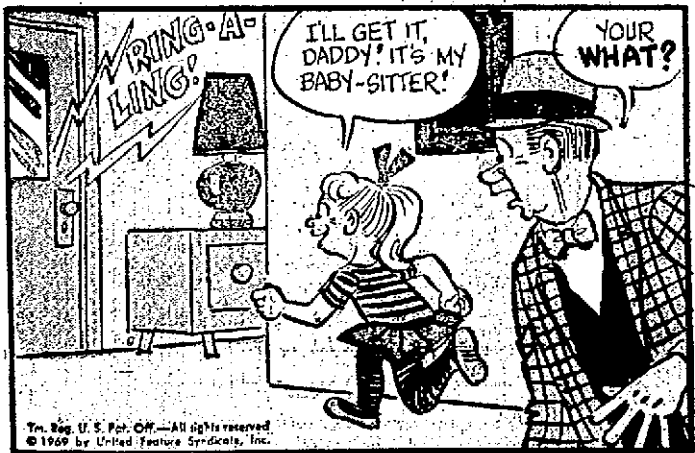

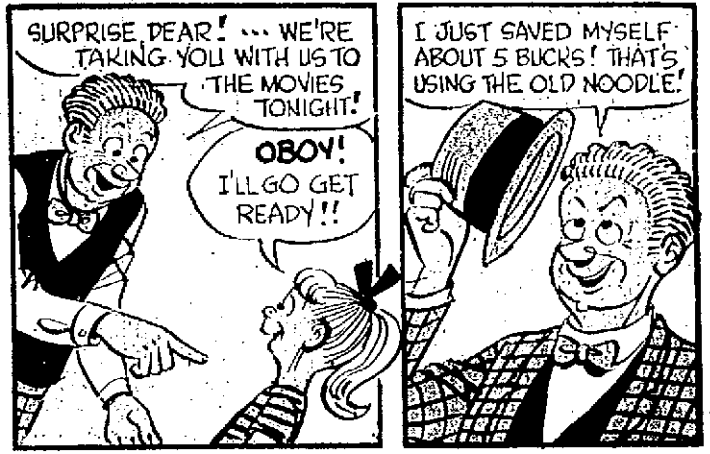

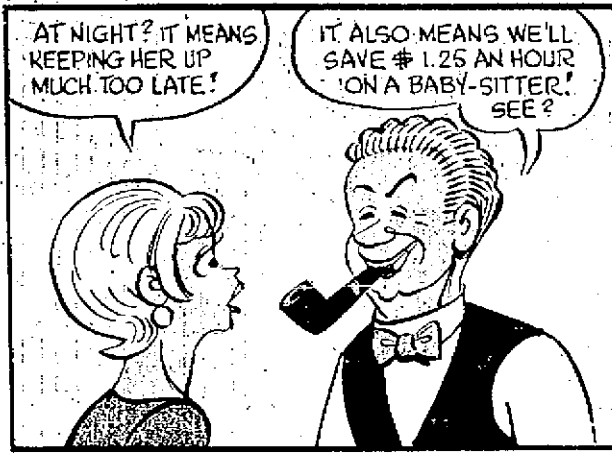

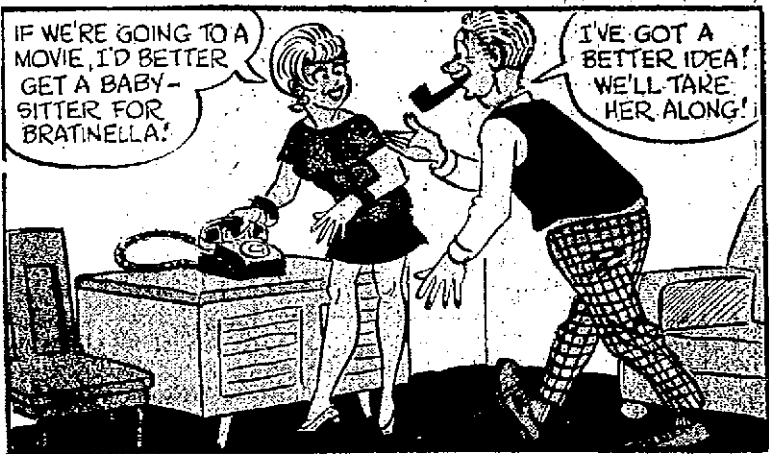

So far liberalized abortion laws have been passed only in eight states—Arkansas, California, Colorado, Georgia, Kansas, Maryland, New Mexico and North Carolina. Most of these reform laws follow a formula recommended by the American Law Institute, which permits abortion if pregnancy might result in the death of the mother, impair her mental health, is the result of rape or incest, or would lead to the mental or physical handicap of the child.

But most of the CCS clergymen say they would prefer outright repeal of existing abortion laws to the ALI code. They regard reform as inadequate and unsatisfactory, since strict application of the new laws has brought only small increases in the numbers of legal abortions performed in the states involved—and no apparent decline in the total of illegal operations. Besides, the ALI code does not apply to married women who want no more children or to unmarried women unwilling to bear an illegitimate child. Until these cases, too, are covered, the CCS intends to stay in business, and its phones are likely to go on ringing.

Bring The Bloom of Beauty To Your Complexion

Every day your complexion can grow a little lovelier, lavishly cared for with a remarkable tropical moist oil which has the skin-cherishing ability to help capture and maintain the precious bloom of true complexion beauty.

The fine, fair promise of skin beauty is initially determined deep down under the surface, where the tiny oil and moisture reservoirs establish a delicate balance by releasing just the right amounts of perfect, natural nourishment to keep the complexion soft, supple and gloriously alive.

Cosmetic researchers have constantly borne in mind this basic understanding of the human skin in their efforts to find ways and means to improve and cherish its most precious qualities. With the discovery of the tropical beauty fluid has come the realization that at last it is possible to assist nature in maintaining the flow of the skin's natural oil and moisture and help in every way to bring long-term youth and beauty to the complexions of women living in all the differing climates of the globe.

When the beautifying moist oil is lavished on your skin nightly before your sleep, and worn every day beneath your make-up, your complexion will benefit immediately from its isotonic action, which is calculated to take conserving fluids directly down to where they are most needed.

Being remarkably compatible with the natural fluids of the skin, this moist oil readily merges with existing reserves and helps boost the dwindling cellular levels so that the complexion is encouraged to regain its equilibrium.

The beauty fluid also helps to maintain the vital measures of moisture responsible for the dew-fresh appearance of a lovely complexion. It encourages the natural hygroscopic attraction of moisture from the surrounding atmosphere and sponsors the moisture-retaining ability of the tissues so that youthful freshness and radiance become wonderfully constant on the skin.

In America this unique moist oil is available from druggists as oil of Olay, a remarkable blend of precious elements that brings your skin its softest, smoothest bloom of beauty.

Beauty Skin-Care Consultants Recommend

To take advantage of the beautifying properties of this moist oil and to give your complexion smoothness, clearness and youthful loveliness, always smooth on a film of oil of Olay over the face and neck before applying make-up. Besides cherishing and beautifying, the Olay oil will insure that your make-up has a perfect matt beauty.

Areas where age-signs first begin to show need extra rich care at night. Massage oil of Olay over your throat and neck and tap it lightly into the delicate tissues around your eyes to smooth and beautify the skin.

To keep your lips soft and pretty, give them a generous quota of the beautifying moist oil when you do your face. This light film of oil of Olay will also act as a foundation for the smooth and lasting application of your lipstick.

PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Sometimes it's fun to plan a picnic menu that requires no cooking at the picnic site. All of that has been done ahead of time. All that remains is to eat and enjoy. For digestion's sake, a vacuum jug of hot soup or hot coffee, or both, can be carried along to serve with the cold foods in the picnic basket. Remember that paper or disposable plastic dishes and cups make cleanup quick and easy when the meal is over.

DOUBLE CHESS: Chess, always a 2-player game, now has been adapted so you can play it with 2, 3 or 4. A new set provides 4 armies, 64 chessmen, in red, white, blue and black—and a specially designed game field. Rules are the same as for standard chess with a few minor additions. The set comes with complete instructions. $14.95 postpaid. Normandy House, Dept. PP, 4701 Normandy Drive, Fort Worth, Tex. 76103.

VENTING NAIL: A new kind of nail is designed to let your house walls breathe—allowing the escape of vapor that might otherwise be trapped, and helping to prevent peeling of exterior paint and rotting of wood structure. The nail vents by means of a slot running lengthwise along its body and through the head. You can use it in place of the conventional type if you're installing new siding on your house. In older construction, you can drive in some of the nails to achieve not only venting but additional nailing strength. A box of 100: $2.89 in stores. Vapor Vent Nail Company, Dept. PP, 45 Market Street, Manchester, N.H. 03101.

SPRAY-ON TALC: Now there's a talcum powder you can spray on from the can. It dries in seconds and, when sprayed directly on the skin, has a cooling effect. It's useful in shoes, socks, diapers and especially, claims the maker, as a help in putting on girdles. $1.50 postpaid. Franzen, Dept. PP, 110 Franzen Building, Flanagan, Ill. 61740.

PARTY PALETTE: Here's a convenience for your parties — a plastic tray (left) that holds glasses and snacks and that you can hold with two fingers, leaving the other hand free. It's dishwasher-safe, comes personalized with your monogram, in choice of colors (turquoise, smoke, avocado, yellow, or red). A set of four: $3.95 ppd. Party Palette, Dept. P, Box 15348, Sarasota, Fla. 33579.

How to raise a brighter child

These new methods, based on the theories of famous physicians, educators and behavioral scientists, are simple and fun—and they can increase your child's I. Q. by 20 points or more! Start using them as early as possible—even right after birth!

Imagine a 21-month-old with a reading vocabulary of 160 words... a boy of four who enjoys teaching himself major number principles... a girl not yet four who reads at the third grade level! None of these children was born a genius. Yet, through the early learning concepts described in this remarkable new book—HOW TO RAISE A BRIGHTER CHILD—all are being helped to develop above-average intelligence and a joyous love of learning. Now you can give your little pre-schooler the same happy advantages... and they may well last throughout your child's life. For according to recent research, a child's I. Q. level is not permanently fixed at birth. It can be raised—or lowered by 20 points or even more in the precious years before six, by the way you rear your child at home.

A "blueprint" for increasing your child's brain power—without "pushing"

In this wonderful new guide for improving your child's mind, author Joan Beck—herself a mother and widely known as an adviser and counselor to thousands of families through her syndicated column on child care—tells you about all the important new findings on early learning. Drawing on the concepts of many famous physicians, educators and behavioral scientists (including Dr. George W. Beadle, Nobel prize-winning geneticist and president of the University of Chicago; Dr. Paul Dunn, pediatrician and medical director of the Chicago Center for Achievement of Human Potential; and Dr. O. K. Moore, professor of social psychology, University of Pittsburgh and creator of the "talking typewriter"), she shows you how to apply these practical methods to your child's particular personality and needs. Her guidance is designed to help you help your child right in your home—happily and easily—without pressure or "pushing."

Watch your child enjoy learning science, math, reading and much more!

You'll find hundreds of specific brain-building techniques in this book to help your child's mind develop—starting from birth and continuing on through the first six years. These are not formal lessons. Most are fascinating games.

Want your child to be more creative? Learn the 10 ways to spot creativity in your child—and 30 delightful ways to encourage it... see how the proper use of almost any common object can challenge your child's inventiveness... how simple questions he'll enjoy answering can train him to "think on his feet"... how a quiet family game will increase his imaginative powers... how a simple conversational technique will start him off on a lifelong "romance" with words.

Help your child acquire reading and language skills... let him master—at an early age—the skills that are the basis of almost all learning... from techniques that are fun! You'll find complete details and step-by-step methods to teach your child to read as early as 2 or 3 years of age... another section on the famous Montessori early training techniques and how you can use them at home... learn how your 2-month-old baby tries to communicate... how to introduce your 2-year-old to writing.

Give your child the ability to grasp more advanced ideas... help him get a head start on the principles of math, science, natural laws. For example, turn bath time into a series of exciting scientific experiments... use snack time to teach him number concepts such as multiplication and division... see how a common household item can give him hours of pleasure while he learns something of linear perspective, dimension, structure... how a sheet can start your year-old baby toward an understanding of spatial relations... how a knotted string can help your 3-year-old learn to tell time... how your child's favorite television shows can be used to help him deal with abstractions.

Give your child unusual powers of observation... your training can sharpen his perceptions, help him in every school subject he will ever take. You'll discover, for example, how some quiet little bedtime games will give your child the habit of acute listening... how a simple trick with your infant's room will delight him with his new surroundings... how an ordinary paper bag can develop your youngster's tactile sense while he has a wonderful time... how you can turn a visit to the supermarket into a fascinating exercise for all of his senses.

My Favorite Jokes

by Steve Rossi & Slappy White

EDITOR'S NOTE: Steve Rossi and Slappy White are a brand-new comedy team, the first such integrated act in show business history, and they're off to a fast and impressive start. For 11 years Rossi teamed with Marty Allen and the whole nation got to know them through their scores of TV appearances. Then late last year Allen and Rossi split up. Clever, dependable Slappy White is a show business Old Pro who never quite made it big. He may well do so now. Rossi and White already are working their way through such prestige bookings as the Royal Box at New York's Americana Hotel, Caesars Palace in Las Vegas and, on television, Hollywood Palace. Their material is as new as their act. Here is a sampling:

While we were appearing in Las Vegas, we went to a casino that was so swank, the dice had unlisted numbers. We were asked by a newcomer how often the red numbers came up. We told him: "As often as we played the black ones." ... Actually, the quickest way for some people to win the war on poverty is to lock up the bookies.

We played an engagement in a town so small, Howard Johnson had only one flavor. Returning to New York, the air traffic problem was so severe and we were stacked over the city so long, the plane became obsolete.

New York is the only town where the shortest distance between two points is always under construction.

We just bought one of those political dolls: You pull its string, and it talks out of both sides of its mouth.

The government has an effective solution for housing problems, just for veterans. It's called re-enlistment.

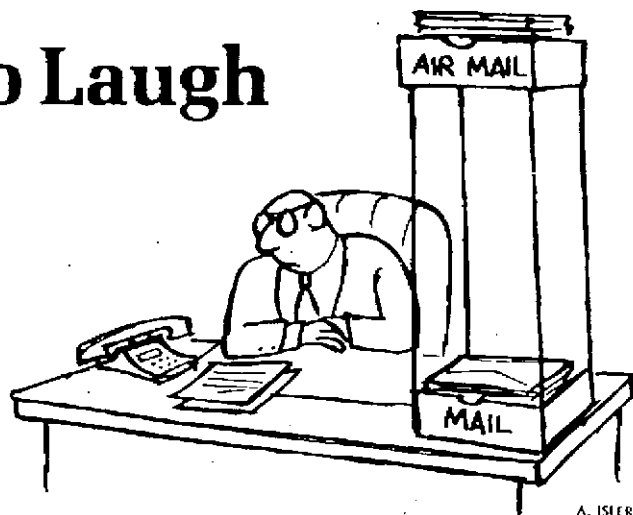

Wives make excellent baseball umpires, they never think a man is safe when he's out.

A couple we know once lived in a pretty exclusive location. It even had an unlisted zip code. Things became difficult, they went to New York and were growing desperate trying to find an apartment there. They finally found a place with a big sign in front that read: "Open Housing." They checked, and learned it meant all the windows were broken. They asked the manager if he took children. He replied: "No, only cash or traveler's checks."

A rich uncle died, and we all went to the lawyer's office for the reading of the will. He left $300,000 to his wife, $100,000 to his two brothers, and $50,000 to his sister. Then the lawyer continued reading the text: "And to my nephew Slappy, who always wanted to be mentioned in my will, here it is. I say, 'Hiya, Slappy.'"

An old friend visited, and we asked him how everything was. He moaned: "My house burned down and it wasn't insured; my wife got run over by an uninsured car and she's in the hospital; my son's in jail, and my daughter's on LSD." We said: "That's really tough. What are you doing now?" He answered: "Same old thing... selling lucky charms."

AND THE PIRATES

GEORGE WUNDER

A U.S. ARMY PROVOST MARSHAL IN GERMANY PROVIDES TERRY WITH THE REASON FOR SERGEANT CAYN'S BROTHER'S DESERTION.

PUSHING HASHISH, SIR?! I KNEW CARL WAS A FOOL, BUT I NEVER THOUGHT HE COULD BE ROTTEN!

AFRAID THERE'S MORE, JIMMIE, THE MAN WHO HOOKED HIM INTO THE RACKET WAS AN EAST GERMAN AGENT WHO EXPECTED TO BE PAID OFF IN CLASSIFIED INFORMATION—BLACKMAIL!

YOUR BROTHER'S SENSE OF SELF-PRESERVATION MUST BE ACUTE. HE COPPED OUT FOR SWEDEN A JUMP AHEAD OF OUR COUNTERINTELLIGENCE — AND NIA DELOS WAS ON THE PLANE WITH HIM!

NIA! NO, SIR! NIA WOULD NEVER HAVE ANYTHING TO DO WITH DOPE-PEDDLING TREASON! IT JUST ISN'T POSSIBLE! CARL MUST HAVE SOLD HER SOME COCK-AND-BULL STORY!

QUITE POSSIBLE, SARGE. HE WAS GLIB ENOUGH TO CONVINCE THE SWEDES THAT THE DOPE CHARGES WERE A TRICK TO KIDNAP HIM BACK INTO THE CLUTCHES OF A BRUTAL MILITARY MACHINE... THEN HE DROPPED OUT OF SIGHT.

INSPECTOR VEGEN SHOULD BE ENTHRALLED WITH ALL THIS. THE BORDER BETWEEN HIS COUNTRY AND SWEDEN IS LONG, MOUNTAINOUS AND LIGHTLY PATROLLED. NIA AND CARL COULD EASILY SLIP ACROSS.

I SUPPOSE YOU'RE RIGHT, COLONEL LEE. WE KNOW NIA'S HERE.

AND THE MAN WHO FORCED HER INTO HIS CAR IS QUITE LIKELY YOUR BROTHER.

BUT WHAT DO YOU SUPPOSE THEY'RE DOING HERE? WHY IS HE RIDING HERD ON NIA?

SHE PROBABLY FOUND OUT WHAT HIS CURRENT PROFESSION IS...

...DON'T FORGET THAT HE'S STILL THE EAST GERMAN'S MAN!

SO MR. HOMER SAPIENS SAYS THAT HE'S GONNA TAKE COMPUTAMAN APART WIRE BY WIRE AND SCRUB THE WHOLE IDEA O' MANUFACTURING ZILLIONS OF 'EM....

TRUE HAPPINESS CONSISTS NOT IN THE MULTITUDE OF FRIENDS, BUT IN THE WORTH AND CHOICE — BEN JONSON

...BECAUSE IF THERE'S ONE CREEP LIKE EVILLA SAPPLE AROUND T' MAKE A KILLER OUT O' A MACHINE... THERE COULD BE WOODS FULL O' 'EM!

MR. SAPIENS SAYS HE WOULDN'T TAKE THE CHANCE... IT COULD BE THE END O' THE HUMAN RACE!

AND SO PASSETH THE MACHINE THAT WAS TO HAVE LIGHTENED MAN'S LABORS!

AND WHAT WAS THE DISPOSITION OF THE SAPPLE FAMILY??

THAT WAS THE ONLY PART I GOTTA CHARGE OUTA!

MR. HOMER SAPIENS SURE PUT IT TO THEM!

MR. SAPIENS ORDERS 'EM T' CLEAR OUT...

ADAM... YOU ARE MY OLDEST FRIEND... AND THOUGH YOUR ACT IN TAMPERING WITH COMPUTAMAN IS A SERIOUS BREACH OF TRUST...

... I AM WILLING TO GIVE YOU ANOTHER CHANCE... WITHOUT YOUR FAMILY REMAINING ON THE PREMISES!

THAT'S MORE THAN I DESERVE, HOMER...

...BUT EVEN THOUGH EVILLA IS A REINCARNATION OF BEELZEBUB... AND THE VERY SIGHT OF LOUBY CURDLES MY BLOOD... THEY'RE MINE!!

HOW DARE YOU TALK ABOUT ME THAT WAY, YOU WORM...!!

EX-WORM, EVILLA SAPPLE!! FROM NOW, FOR BETTER OR WORSE, FOR RICHER OR POORER, I RUN THIS MISERABLE FAMILY!!

BUT I'M YOUR LI'L KID, PAPA... YOUR ONLY SON AN' HEIR!

HAVE YOU EVER NOTICED HOW DEFENSIVE WOMEN GET... I MEAN, THE OTHER DAY I ASKED MY WIFE WHERE SHE GOT HER NEW OUTFIT --- YOU AND I WOULD HAVE SAID, 'I GOT IT AT SUCH-AND-SUCH A STORE.'

HER ANSWER WAS, 'WHAT'S WRONG WITH IT?'

...AND LAST WEEK, I STOPPED IN A LITTLE RESTAURANT, FOR THE FIRST TIME, AND ORDERED A CORNED BEEF SANDWICH TO GO --- THE NEXT DAY, I WENT BACK TO THE SAME PLACE AND ORDERED A SALAMI SANDWICH.

THE LADY BEHIND THE COUNTER SAID, 'WHAT'S THE MATTER, DIDN'T YOU LIKE THE CORNED BEEF, YESTERDAY?'

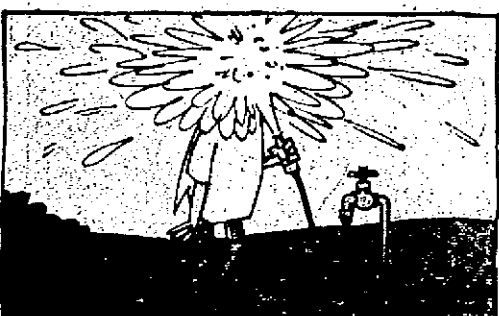

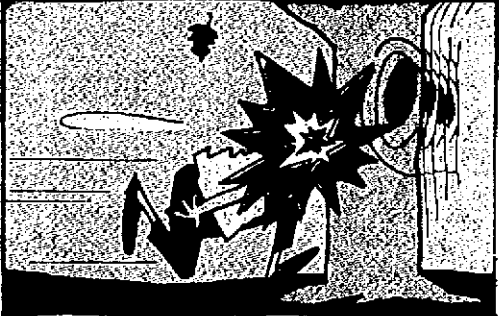

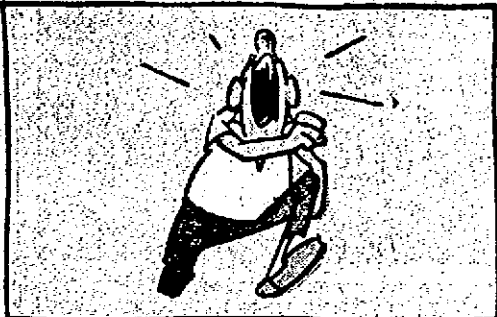

FUNNY, EH?

YEAH, WELL, I'LL SEE YOU, CHARLIE! I'VE GOT TO RUN NOW.
